DEMOCRATS TO GAIN; QUESTION IS BY HOW MUCH

May Control House; Even Senate.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Republican reverses that may overturn the present Republican majority in the house, if not in the senate also, will be the outcome of the congressional election on Tuesday.

With four members of President Hoover's cabinet appealing to the electorate to return a Republican congress as an indorsement of the administration, the result of the election will be generally interpreted as the verdict of the country on the record Mr. Hoover has made in office up to date. If the Republicans retain control of both houses of the Seventy-second congress the popular verdict will be deemed favorable to the administration. If the Democrats should succeed in capturing the house, all 435 members of which will be chosen on Tuesday, the verdict will be considered distinctly unfavorable to Mr. Hoover.

Senate Victory Less Likely.

If the Democrats were to capture the senate also, the event would signalize a popular repudiation of the administration of ominous import. Inasmuch as only one-third of the senate is to be elected the present Republican majority in that body could be overturned only by a tremendous Democratic landslide.

The election canvass is winding up with a deal of speculation on both sides on the possibility of a Democratic landslide materializing. What with the tendency of voters to blame the party in power for hard times and unemployment, and what with the reaction against national prohibition, which is favoring Democratic candidates conspicuously in numerous states, a Democratic sweep of landslide proportions would not surprise the leaders in either camp.

Omen for 1932 Issues.

Whatever the outcome of the balloting, deep meanings will be read into it by the political augurs. It will be regarded as an omen of the issues in the presidential election of 1932. In accordance with a political rule that has held for fifty years with only one exception, the capture of the house by the Democrats on Tuesday would be considered a harbinger of the capture of the presidency by the Democrats two years hence.

The party managers are putting forth the usual claims of victory.

"We will carry the house and have a substantial majority," said Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee. "The senate will be very close."

"We will retain control of the house by a substantial majority," said Representative Will Wood of Indiana, chairman of the Republican congressional committee.

Fourteen Senatorial Contests.

Thirty-four senators are to be elected. In only 14 of these contests, however, is the outcome in doubt. They are the following:

ALABAMA—John H. Bankhead, Dem.; Senator J. Thomas Heflin, Ind.

ILLINOIS — Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, Rep.; former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Dem.; Lottie Holman O'Neill, Ind. Rep.

KENTUCKY—Senator John M. Robsion, Rep. (both terms); M. M. Logan, Dem. (long term); Ben Williamson, Dem. (short term).

SOUTH DAKOTA—Senator William H. McMaster, Rep.; W. J. Bulow, Dem.

CHARITY AIDED BY MICHIGAN-CHICAGO GAME

Will Swell Funds in Two States.

The University of Chicago last night joined with the University of Michigan to make the Michigan-Chicago football game at Ann Arbor on Nov. 22 a contest for charity.

This development followed widespread agitation over the Big Ten's veto of the Soldiers' field game in Chicago on Nov. 22 between Notre Dame and Northwestern.

Following the action of the Michigan athletic board earlier yesterday in announcing that it would give its share of the net proceeds to Michigan charities, Frederic Woodward, vice president of the University of Chicago, declared that the university would devote to Chicago charities all of its share of the receipts in excess of the income which might normally be expected from the game.

Michigan Circumvents Rule.

Michigan, earlier in the day, had announced its charity plan after rejecting a proposal for a post season game with the University of Detroit at Detroit because of the Western conference rule against post season contests. Faced with almost certain opposition by the faculty committee of the Big Ten had it asked the right to play the University of Detroit, the Michigan board circumvented the faculty rule makers by deciding to turn over its share of the net proceeds of the game with Chicago to Gov. Fred W. Green for distribution.

The suggestion of a Michigan-Detroit game originated in Detroit with the mayor and the city council, and followed the proposal previously made that Northwestern and Notre Dame transfer their game of Nov. 22, scheduled at Dyche stadium, to Soldiers' field, turning over to charity the extra receipts made possible by the greater seating capacity of Soldiers' field. The Western conference faculty committee, however, vetoed Northwestern's request for approval of the change in playing sites because of a technical rule. Northwestern accepted the faculty committee's ruling without protest. It had been hoped thus to create a fund for Chicago's jobless amounting to perhaps $200,000.

Woodward Issues Statement.

When Dr. Woodward was informed of Michigan's action, he issued the following statement:

"We have learned through the newspapers that the University of Michigan has assured Gov. Green that Michigan's share of the net receipts of the Michigan-Chicago game at Ann Arbor will be devoted to charity.

"The University of Chicago is and has been eager to do all in its power to meet the urgent needs of our charitable organizations. We are not so fortunately situated, however, as some other universities, which, as a result of far larger attendance, are already assured of receipts more than sufficient to pay their athletic expenses. We just about broke even last year, and we shall be extremely fortunate if we do as well this year.

Will Give Surplus to Charity.

"Since we have no other funds that can properly be diverted to the support of athletics, the best we can do is to undertake to devote to Chicago charities our share of the receipts of the Michigan game insofar as they exceed the income we might normally expect to receive.

"We are not at present in a position to estimate the normal receipts, for we do not even know how many tickets have been sold to date. But to take a purely hypothetical illustration, if the normal attendance were estimated at 40,000, and because of the charity feature, the actual attendances proves to be 70,000, we shall give to Chicago charity our share of the receipts from the excess attendance of 30,000."

Michigan's contribution to charity would probably be well in excess of $100,000 if the stadium is filled. Its share of the gross receipts would be approximately $129,000 at the normal price of tickets and box seat sales would make the amount even larger.

Invites Extra Contributions.

The University of Michigan will augment its contribution by creating a separate charity fund to which it will divert all money it may receive in excess of the regular scale of prices.

The board also voted to donate free of charge the use of the Michigan stadium for any other games between teams which may desire to use it to raise funds for charity. Its statement was concluded with an announcement that the construction of the clubhouse on the new golf course of the university would be postponed for one year until funds are available to carry on the work.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ALWAYS HOLD UP BUSINESS RECOVERY

PRIEST ASSAILS MODERN TREND OF LITERATURE

Contemporary literature, generally speaking, is "Godless and sexful," and instead of elevating, is degrading, "wallowing in glorification of profanity and sensuality," the Rev. Francis C. Young of the Holy Ghost Roman Catholic church, Adams street and Kildare avenue, told members of the Catholic Woman's league yesterday. The league met in its headquarters at 410 South Michigan avenue.

Father Young said that it would not be a matter of surprise to him if the "deplorable conditions and perverting influence engulfing civilization" should lead to a new paganism that will be worse than ancient paganism.

"This Godless and sexful condition will continue and become even worse," he said, "so long as the so called philosophers and pseudo scientists who occupy professional chairs in our seats of learning are allowed to remain. In many instances those seats of learning have prostituted their consecrated mission, when their professors teach that there is no God, that man has no soul and that he is no more than an educated animal.

"If there is no God, then the world is a sham, a mockery, a lie, where we can neither hope nor love."

Giant Flying Ship Off for America Today

ALTENRHEIN, Switzerland, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Germany's great air liner, the DO-X, which is designed to carry more than 100 passengers, rested in her own hanfar tonight for what was expected to be the last time until she returns next spring from her voyage to America.

Her fuel tanks were full and engineers had made the last adjustments to her instruments in final preparations for a start to Amsterdam at 3 o'clock (2 a. m. C. S. T.) tomorrow morning.

Will Follow the Rhine.

Commander Christiansen said he planned to head his ship into the west, following the Rhine until it winds into Holland. But his exact route will be determined by the weather he encounters and by how much daylight is left after the takeoff.

If the start takes place promptly at 3 o'clock the pilot should sight Schellingwoude, the Dutch naval airport outside Amsterdam, between 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

It is possible that she will remain there for two or three days, and perhaps longer, before continuing by way of Southampton, Havre, and Corunna, to Lisbon, whence the flight to New York is expected to start on or after Nov. 10.

Cruise May Last 35 Hours.

The trans-Atlantic cruise is expected to consume about 35 hours of actual flying time, but the amount of time for layovers at the various scheduled stops en route depends on the weather and other contingencies. It is not unlikely that the DO-X may take a week or more to reach New York from Lisbon.

Ten hours is the estimated flying time from Lisbon to the Azores and there probably will be a one-day layover there before the start of a twelve hour leg to a tankship, which will be waiting about 700 miles southwest of Bermuda.

It will be only a brief stay at the tanker before the six hour hop to Bermuda begins. At least one day will be spent on the island, and perhaps several days, before the final seven hour stretch to New York begins.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 1.—Giorgio Polacco, director of the Chicago Civic opera, today announced that he had been forced to cancel his cabin reservations on the Conte Grande, sailing Nov. 7, for his daughter, Graziella, and himself because physicians insist that he is unfit to start to work again.

"I have had a nervous prostration," he said. "I love my public and my work in Chicago and want to get back, but the doctors warn me that unless I take more rest I am apt to have another breakdown. There is no doubt of my returning to Chicago as soon as I can."

BRITISH LABOR PARTY BEATEN IN TOWN ELECTIONS

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(AP)—The Labor party suffered sweeping losses in the municipal elections today in the provinces, where one-third of the councils were elected.

Late tonight the Conservatives had gained 77 council seats and lost nine. The Liberals had won nine and lost 14 and the Laborites had won 26 and lost 36. Independents won 19 and lost 20.

Expect Crisis in Illness of Mayor Today

The condition of Mayor Thompson remains unchanged, the physicians attending him at Passavant hospital announced in a bulletin issued at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. A crisis in the illness is expected to develop today. The bulletin read as follows:

"The attending physicians report that the mayor's condition remains critical. His temperature and pulse are as we would expect under the circumstances. He is resting comfortably."

The physicians, Dr. Allen B. Kanavel, Dr. L. L. McArthur and Dr. B. Portis declined to indicate whether the symptoms of peritonitis, discovered when the mayor underwent an operation for appendicitis on Friday, had become more, or less, pronounced.

Wife at His Bedside.

The mayor's wife spent half an hour at his bedside during the afternoon. Unlike his political follower, Robert M. Perbohner, who reported the mayor in a jovial mood during the morning, Mrs. Thompson said the patient appeared "very tired." Congressman and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, who accompanied Mrs. Thompson, did not enter the mayor's room.

Robert C. Lyman, secretary to the mayor, informed newspaper men at the hospital at 9:30 p. m. that Drs. Portis, McArthur, and Kanavel had visited the patient and found him sleeping quietly.

"The doctors found the mayor asleep when they called and they said that his condition was as good as could be expected," said Mr. Lyman.

Following a morning conference of the doctors, a bulletin was issued stating that the mayor had passed a restful night and was reacting as well as could be expected.

Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, the health commissioner, arrived in Chicago by airplane from Fort Worth, Tex., late last night and went immediately to the hospital. Dr. Kegel was admitted to the mayor's room shortly after 10 p. m. and left for his home after a consultation of nearly one hour with Drs. Kanavel, McArthur, and Portis.

Interested in the Papers.

The mayor was seemingly unconcerned over his health upon awakening yesterday.

The attendants said the mayor expressed interest as to the treatment accorded by the press to the speech attacking THE TRIBUNE, which he had prepared for delivery at the Apollo theater on Friday, and which Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe read in his stead. The mayor was reported expressing disappointment that the evening papers considered unprintable that portion of his speech in which he dealt with the editors of THE TRIBUNE.

Besides Dr. Kegel, the only other persons permitted access to the sick room were the mayor's wife, his sister, Mrs. William Nelson Pelouse, Corporation Counsel Ettelson, and Mr. Perbohner.

10 FOOTBALL FANS HURT IN COLLAPSE OF GRANDSTAND

Ten persons were severely injured yesterday afternoon when part of a grandstand at Englewood Celtic Athletic field, 74th and Bishop streets, collapsed during a football game. Approximately 100 other spectators were thrown into a jumbled heap along with the injured.

The accident occurred during a game between the Calumet Fengar high school elevens. All the injured were Calumet rooters. According to witnesses, the Calumet supporters rose to their feet during the third quarter, when their team scored its lone touchdown. The combined stamping of more than 100 spectators apparently proved too much for the stand, and its supports buckled.

Gresham police and firemen were summoned to the field, and removed the injured to the Auburn Park and German Deaconess hospitals.

SENATE BATTLE SWEEPS TOWARD TUESDAY VOTE

Republican Victory Claims Grow.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Revival of prosperity and the wet and dry issue were the two topics hammered on yesterday by Ruth Hanna McCormick and James Hamilton Lewis as their senatorship battle swept towards its finish at Tuesday's polls. The onslaughts dripped with satire and sarcasms.

Mrs. McCormick derided Mr. Lewis' idea of using army and navy funds at Washington to relieve unemployment in Chicago. She referred to him as "big hearted" but unaware that the army and navy are now using "every available dollar" to expedite construction and give employment to the jobless.

Mrs. McCormick Jabs Lewis.

She dwelt on this item as a "typical Lewis relief panacea," and said Illinois needs more than "an elocutionist" in the senate to shape prosperity measures.

Mr. Lewis ripped into "the eastern masters" of the Republican party, and assailed them as having shaped the "Grundyized tariff" against the west. He chided the Hoover administration for "broken promises," and said Mrs. McCormick was dwelling in the past in her platform utterances, using "Noah's Ark stuff," and failing to present "any plan for the alleviation of despair of the people."

Eyes of U. S. on Battle.

National interest is centered in the Illinois battle as perhaps the most spectacular in the country Tuesday. In an off year Illinois is rated normally Republican by 250,000 to 300,000 votes.

Both Republicans and Democrats for weeks have been saying the biggest load on the Republicans is the Hoover administration. Republican scouts and some Cook county Democrats say that in the last week the tide of sentiment has been running toward Mrs. McCormick and the Republican ticket, especially downstate. Two weeks ago Mr. Lewis was regarded in the lead. Whether the swing will overcome this is the Republican question.

Drama in the Campaign.

The two major party candidates, whose careers are involved in a dramatic way, are:

Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican, America's leading woman politician, daughter of one senator, the late Mark Hanna, who brought about the election of President McKinley in 1896, and widow of Senator Medill McCormick. She is the first woman nominated for a seat in the United States senate. In the primaries she defeated Senator Charles S. Deneen, who in 1924 beat her husband, the late Senator McCormick.

James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, former senator and whip of the senate during the Wilson administration, who in 1918 was beaten by Medill McCormick.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, who has served in the Illinois legislature four terms, is running as an independent with Anti-Saloon league backing. There are six other minor candidates.

Downstate vs. Cook County.

As the candidates redoubled their attacks, Tuesday's election seemed to be shaping itself into downstate balanced against Cook county.

The Democrats are building their highest hopes on Chicago and environs; the Republicans are relying most strongly on the vote downstate.

Seldom have the practical politicians been so far at sea. Both camps radiate confidence.

The wet and dry issue and unemployment and the business situation have cut in until in both parties the situation is unusually mixed and filled with complexities.

See Swing to Mrs. McCormick.

The feature of the closing week has been the appearance of a recognized groundswell for Mrs. McCormick. It started with Mayor Thompson's activities in behalf of Mr. Lewis, which knocked the props from under the argument circulated downstate that Mrs. McCormick was in an alliance with the city hall machine.

Both sides report that sentiment, downstate especially, has been affected by the Thompsonism issue. The Democrats concede Mrs. McCormick has been the beneficiary. All week at headquarters and at the Sherman house, Democratic leaders have been grouching about this situation.

Politicians point out that Mayor Thompson's antagonism goes back to 1918 when he was defeated in the primaries for senator by Medill McCormick.

In Mrs. McCormick's audiences this last week, one line that has brought

Now Is a Good Time to Refurnish the Home

It's mostly over. The dismal housecleaning days of 1930 have come and gone. Husbands again have a place to park their hats and coats in peace and comfort. Again the home has become a place to be lived in and enjoyed.

There are, of course, many things that still can be done to make the home even more enjoyable. It's really amazing how much comfort and attractiveness can be added to the living room by one new easy chair or an up-to-date davenport. A new suite, well chosen, can pep up the atmosphere in the dining room considerably. Now things for the bedrooms or even for the kitchen can go a long way toward achieving what is referred to as the home harmonious.

Naturally many people would probably like to make some changes in the home equipment, but don't do it because they think they can't afford it. Such people should take a look around the Chicago stores that sell furniture. The trip will emphasize one welcome fact. The price of good furniture has come down.

Now is a good time to refurnish the home, while furniture of good quality may be purchased at prices the lowest in years.

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

pplause is "A vote for Mr. Lewis is a vote for Thompson for mayor next spring."

For the last two weeks and longer, jobs, unemployment, the economic situation and the other items lumped under the general heading "hard times issue" have been the great factor in the campaigning. The wet and dry question is regarded as running in second place.

Illinois is expected to go wet on the referendum sponsored by the Republican state convention, on which a public policy plebescite is to be taken on three questions, repeal of the 18th amendment, modification of the Volstead act, and repeal of the state search and seizure act.

Mrs McCormick is pledged to follow the mandate of the referendum vote, Mr. Lewis is running as a dripping wet regardless of the referendum and Mrs. O'Neill is bone dry.

Both Sides Claim County.

Cook county is disputed in the claims of the rival managers. Clayton Smith, Democratic county chairman, in his forecast says Mr. Lewis will have a landslide in Cook. B. W. Snow, Republican county chairman, says Cook will give Mrs. McCormick a plurality of 150,000. The ailment of Mayor Thompson, now in the hospital following an operation, is held by the Republicans to have dissipated what force he might have managed to roll against the Republican ticket.

The state managers on both sides yesterday made claims of victory by more than 200,000. Cornelius J. Doyle, Republican state chairman, in his Sunday before election forecast, said 200,000 is too conservative an estimate for Mrs. McCormick, and that indications are she will carry Cook county as well as downstate.

Thomas F. Donovan, Democratic state chairman, in his forecast declared Mr. Lewis will hold Mrs. McCormick even downstate, where she may roll up a margin of 35,000 to 50,000, and that in Cook county Mr. Lewis will set the size of the Lewis plurality. The claims of the Republicans are far stronger than a week ago.

Newton Jenkins, who polled 161,000 votes in the April Republican primary for senator, came out yesterday for Mr. Lewis.

G. O. P. Leader's Forecast.

Mr. Doyle, the Republican state chairman, said:

"A marked change in sentiment among the men and women voters of Chicago and its suburbs has taken place in the last few days in favor of Ruth Hanna McCormick for senator and it now appears that the prediction of her election by a plurality of 200,000 is entirely too conservative in my judgment. This reversal of public feeling is apparent to the careful observer in every ward in Chicago and the situation grows better each day as the campaign nears its end.

"Local Republican leaders and their party organizations are fighting as never before in the history of the party for victory and it now seems certain that Cook county will follow the lead of downstate districts and return a substantial plurality for Ruth Hanna McCormick, the entire state ticket and the local county ticket."

Prediction of Democrat Chief.

"The state central committee has received reports from practically every voting precinct of the 101 downstate counties of Illinois. We have carefully checked these reports and in every instance have given the Republican state candidates the benefit of any doubt which we entertained. And from such reports I have no hesitancy in stating that Democratic candidates will come to Cook county practically on even terms with the Republican candidates; that we will elect at least eight downstate congressmen and will carry more counties for all of the Democratic candidates than have been carried since 1912.

"The trend of these reports from day to day has shown clearly that the Democratic strength has been increasing at a remarkable rate during the last two weeks, and undoubtedly the peak of Democratic strength will be reached next Tuesday."

Sees 2,000,000 Votes.

"I predict 2,000,000 votes will be cast, and that Mr. Lewis will be elected by 300,000. He will come up to Cook county with 50,000 plurality and will carry Cook county by not less than 250,000."

The general estimate of Republican and Democratic leaders is that Mrs O'Neill's vote will run somewhere between 100,000 and 150,000. Four years ago Hugh S. Magill, independent Republican, rolled up 156,000 in a campaign that was well financed. Mrs. O'Neill in a speech yesterday said there are more drys than wets in Illinois and that she "expects to be elected."

The battle in the industrial centers the Chicago area, East St. Louis, Springfield, Joliet, Waukegan, and other manufacturing towns in the early stages was concentrated on the wet and dry issue.

In the final weeks the unemployment and business situation have been given the emphasis in the campaigning, the Democrats assailing "Hoover prosperity," and the Republicans arguing that to elect a Democratic congress would be like jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, causing a deadlock between congress and the White House, which would block remedial measures now under way or on the relief program.

Farm Vote a Mystery.

In the agricultural regions the Democrats have been dwelling on the drought and falling farm prices, while the Republicans have been pointing out from the platform that the conditions in America are world-wide.

The farmers during the campaigning have not been communicative. Both the major candidates have had tremendous audiences everywhere, but scouts on both sides have complained that rural sentiment has been in a state of suspense.

Broadly speaking, the Democrats are banking on Cook county and the industrial sectors; the Republicans are banking on the northern and central counties, which have always rolled up big Republican pluralities, and on a close run in Cook county. To indicate the intensity of the struggle, both Mrs. McCormick and Mr. Lewis spent more than two weeks in Egypt, which has only 12 per cent of the population and of the vote.

MRS. M'CORMICK TALKS

Both candidates will keep up the platform fight to the close tomorrow. In a speech at the Apollo theater yesterday, Mrs. McCormick warned against the dangers of sending Democratic representatives to Washington in the middle of a Republican administration.

"James Hamilton Lewis is definitely committed to the principles of the Democratic party and he would vote in accordance with those principles," she said. "Senator Otis F. Glenn will vote in accordance with the principles of the Republican party, so that Illinois would have no vote in the senate.

"In the house, if the Democrats are put in control, Jack Garner of Texas will be the next speaker, and the chairmen of the eight leading house committees will be Democrats who live south of the Mason and Dixon line. Do you want those men to control the business interests of the country?"

Mrs. McCormick declared the present economic depression was due in a large measure to the blocking of the tariff bill in the senate by the Democrats for one year and two months.

"Their purpose was to postpone its passage so that industry would not feel its effect and reflect credit to the administration," she said.

In her evening speeches Mrs. McCormick expressed gratitude for "the occasional touches of humor" Mr. Lewis has given to the campaign. She quoted from his speech advocating that some of the "millions and millions" appropriated for the army and navy be sent to Illinois to relieve the unemployment situation.

Raps Lewis' Relief Plan.

"As a member of the naval affairs committee of the house of representatives, I was quite interested in this suggestion," Mrs. McCormick said. "Mr. Lewis knows that everybody in Washington knows and almost everybody else knows that funds appropriated for a specific purpose cannot be diverted to other purposes unless we change our system of government.

"Mr. Lewis is not more solicitous of the conditions of labor in the United States than I am. I have been watching the efforts of the present administration to reduce unemployment and hasten a return of prosperity and I have pointed out that a program of employment on construction work and other work has been inaugurated which will supply seven billions of dollars for labor and materials during the next two years. In the meantime, the administration is daily giving its attention to immediate remedies.

A Warning to Her Rival.

"The administration is preaching confidence and practicing helpfulness. Mr. Lewis is preaching discontent and quoting Shakespeare. I warn my honorable opponent that there is a point beyond which even passionate oratory may not go with safety.

"Mr. Lewis has been extremely big hearted in this campaign. He has gone into the vaults of the treasury and metaphorically stepped out laden down with gold which he offers to the farmers of Illinois. Yet on Sept. 14, 1918, when an amendment was proposed whereby $20,000,000 was to be appropriated for the relief of the farmers, the man who has been weeping salt tears before the downstate audience did not even vote upon that relief measure. Perhaps he was somewhere delivering an oration."

WHEN MELLON MADE HIS ONLY CAMPAIGN SPEECH

LEWIS SPEAKS OF FUNDS

Mr. Lewis last night spoke on the liquor question in Evanston, home of the W. C. T. U. In his Garrick theater address at noon he said Mrs. McCormick's campaign expenditures were "an insult to Illinois."

"She has put into writing," he said "her admission that she has sought advice of counsel in connection with her filing with the senate of her sworn statement as to her campaign expenditures, and she publicly states that she has been advised no necessity exists under the corrupt practices law to compel her to reveal the amounts of money paid by her to detectives employed to follow the individuals composing the committee of senators before whom her campaign expenditures were exposed.

"This is the only state in the Union that has twice had its representatives thrown out of the United States senate. When a woman dishonors the state of Illinois far beyond the corruption ever attempted by any man, no appeal of sex will serve to save her from just judgment of the voters.

Charges Effort to Buy Votes.

Mr. Lewis opened his speech with a charge that an effort was being made to buy the vote in certain sections of the state.

"Openly it is now reported," he said, "that money has gone forth from Chicago to those influences in certain counties in Illinois whose past record supports the claim that they can corruptly control the counting of the ballots at the next election.

"Thereby it is intended to offset by bribery and corruption the counters of the vote, that tremendous majority which the citizens of Cook county will certainly cast against the woman whose inherited riches were wrung from the poor."

Mrs. McCormick last night gave out a statement in reference to Mr. Lewis' remarks.

"If his statement refers to me," she said, "it is utterly false and proves again the complete irresponsibility of Mr. Lewis' campaign utterances."

RADIO SPEAKERS URGE VOTES FOR MRS. M'CORMICK

Frank L. Smith, Republican nominee for congressman at large, and C. J. Doyle, Republican state chairman, made radio speeches for Ruth Hanna McCormick last night. Mr. Smith spoke over KYW and Mr. Doyle over WCFL.

A former congressman, Col. Smith made much of the Democratic record as a free trade party. "If they are in power," he said, "they will vote to tear down our protective tariff and the south will be in the saddle. Hard times come and go, but when the Democrats come into power they seem to have a positive genius for changing good times into hard times. That is their record."

Chairman Doyle made a plea for party solidarity and asserted that with a Democratic majority in the next senate and house, the present chairmen of all the committees in both branches will be displaced by Democrats. "The chairmen of 32 out of 48 of the committees in the house of representatives would be Democrats who represent states south of the Mason and Dixon line," he said. "The chairmen of 24 senate committees out of a total of 34 would be senators representing southern states."

ASPHYXIATED IN CLOSED ROOM.

Charles Schnitz, 65 years old, 2345 West Madison street, died last night in Washington Boulevard hospital of gas poisoning in an unventilated room at his home. Schnitz' wife found him unconscious Friday night and called Warren avenue police.

PARTY IS REAL ISSUE, DECLARES MRS. McCORMICK

Spurns Personalities in Pleas to Voters.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK

Ruth Hanna McCormick, already etched deeply into the national political picture as a significant figure, insists that she is not a personality in next Tuesday's Illinois senatorial fight.

"Personality counts at the primary party counts in the election," she says and she keeps saying it eight or nine times a day from the platform and over the radio.

Reduced to more informal terms, her theory is this: The very victory at the Republican primary last spring which boosted her individuality quotient way up to the top is the same victory which should reduce her, at the November ballot box, from a female to a factor.

"Campaign Between Parties."

"This is not a campaign between Mr. Lewis and myself," she argues. "This is a campaign between the Republican and the Democratic parties. We have been selected to be the standardbearers of our parties. It doesn't make any difference whether we have curly hair or straight; it doesn't make any difference whether we prefer soft words or hard facts. And certainly it doesn't make any difference whether we are masculine or feminine.

"But it makes all the difference in the world whether we are Republican or Democratic. The people of the country seemed to have thought it extremely important, since in the last seventy years they have had a Democratic administration at Washington but twice. A Republican senatorial vote in Illinois Tuesday means a Republican vote from Illinois in Washington next year."

She leans forward, the forefinger of her right hand cutting cleanly through any opposition that might be floating through the air.

Senate Votes Party Question.

"And that's what I want every voter in the state to understand—that when the roll is called on the floor of the United States senate the votes aren't segregated, like a Quaker meeting, into masculine and feminine ones. Instead they stand up, sexless and partisan, as Republican or Democratic."

Mrs. McCormick backs up this theory of hers with specific examples in her campaign technique. She declines to indulge in personalities about J. Hamilton Lewis, no matter how many of her friends importune her to "say this" or "do that."

She smiles and is firm.

"I could, but I won't."

She almost broke her covenant with herself the other night when she read that Mr. Lewis charged she wanted the senate job "to coddle like a doll."

Lewis Charge "Ridiculous."

"Ridiculous," she retorted, but only to a group of friends around her as she read the article. "I never coddled any job or any honor; and I wouldn't know how. For every job that I ever had, and I've had them for thirty years, has meant good, hard work; and every honor has come as the result of work.

"For myself, I don't understand the psychology of parading one's prestige. Mr. Lewis seems to think that all political candidates are born with one eye on Hollywood and one eye on Washington. Both my eyes are on Washington, and when I look around there I see that there is a committee room as well as the senate floor, and I know that the job means hard work as well as honor. Coddle the job. Ridiculous."

But on the platform she declines to mention this incident and follows her plan of talking "issues, not personalities."

Predicts Big Silent Vote.

In this, as well as in all of the major questions in her campaign, she is independent of any concentrated management by any one. Men candidates for the senate, including her own husband, the late Senator Medill McCormick, have always had their campaign manager. Mrs. McCormick has advisers, aids, friends; but no manager. Not only the important big decisions but many of the details of the campaign come under her personal direction.

"This has been of tremendous advantage to me," she explains, "as I have got in close touch with the individual voter."

It is this experience that leads her to predict that Tuesday's silent vote will be particularly articulate.

"The men will talk a lot about the precinct committeeman and they will figure it all out with a pencil. But I tell you that this election fight is bringing out hundreds and thousands of women, of girls, who never saw a precinct committeeman, who wouldn't know what he was saying to them if they met him, and who aren't caring very much about the election, but who are going to vote.

"These girls and women, many of them working in offices and shops, welcome their chance to give a woman a chance. And that's why the silent vote is going to do so much talking next Tuesday morning."

FORECAST SPLIT TICKET VICTORY IN COUNTY FIGHT

Major Parties to Divide Honors, Is Prediction.

BY PARKE BROWN.

With the organizations tightening up their lines yesterday, candid leaders of both parties in Cook county admitted privately that they expect a division of the city and county offices at the hands of the voters on Tuesday.

As usual official statements, in which the county committee spokesmen never concede defeat on anything, were issued by both sides, each claiming a sweeping victory, but nothing like that certainty existed among the candidates of either party. Few of them actually feel certain of their election.

Neutral observers also look for a split ticket to win. Incumbents whose records have been indorsed by civic organizations, newspapers, and other agencies offering advice to the voters are considered to have a decided advantage over new candidates. Most of the officials in the category of incumbents are Democrats, but the Republicans also have several and also are counting strongly on new candidates for several offices.

No Landslide in Sight.

The rule in past "off year" elections has been for the parties to split the honors, not infrequently because of deals and trades made by individual candidates, and the prospect of that sort of inter-party business, it is said, will not be entirely absent this year. Except for the type of official forecast already mentioned, there is almost no talk now of an overwhelming landslide for the top of the ticket that will settle all the local contests.

From the political standpoint the biggest prizes at stake are control of the sanitary district and the county board, particularly the former. Four of the nine sanitary district trustees are to be chosen this year and a complete sweep for either party would give it complete control of the drainage board, not only for the next two years, but for the next four years.

That sort of victory also might give one of the parties a majority of the county board for the next two years with its own president in command.

Hot Fight for Other Offices.

The biggest single offices from the patronage standpoint are those of sheriff, county treasurer, county judge—with control of the election machinery—and clerk and bailiff of the Municipal court. The hottest fights of the campaign center on some of these places.

The total registered vote in the county now is 1,470,688, of which the Chicago registration is 1,319,869, with the balance, or 206,454, in the country towns. The registration in most of the country towns is new this year and therefore is expected to turn out solidly. A vote of 1,000,000 in Chicago will not be a surprise in view of the recent agitation, and some forecasts place the total for the county over the 1,200,000 mark.

In personal conversation the Democrats list as their strongest candidates four of their present officeholders, County Judge Jarecki, Probate Judge Horner, County Clerk Sweitzer, and President Cermak of the county board, and one of the new entries for the county roll, Ald. William D. Meyering, nominee for sheriff.

G. O. P. Confident of 5 Posts.

Likewise the Republicans privately assert confidence in the victory of Howard P. Savage for county treasurer, Probate Clerk Passmore, Assessor Krutckoff, Municipal Court Clerk Kearns, and Bernard J. Kelly, nominee for bailiff of the Municipal court.

There are hot battles for some of these places but it is upon these offices that the respective leaders of the two parties are at least figuratively placing their money.

"During the last few days," said Republican Chairman Snow, "there has been a decided crystallization of sentiment for the Republican ticket. It often happens that in the earlier part of a campaign the people seem apathetic but as election day approaches this apparent indecision turns to determination. And as usual that decision this year has been in favor of the Republican party.

Snow Predicts G. O. P. Victory.

"This campaign, peculiar in some respects, is no exception to the general rule and the last ten days have brought forth definite indications of another Republican success. Our local ticket will win by varying but substantial majorities.

"The county campaign has been influenced greatly by the contest for the United States senatorship. The issue has been and continues to be on two fundamentals—Republican protection of American industry and the American wage scale against the Democratic low tariff with its low wages or no wages for American workmen, and the Republican attitude toward foreign entanglements favoring keeping out of Europe's quarrels.

"The voter recognizes that it was through our initiative that the whole question of prohibition has been placed in the hands of the people by means of the three questions of public policy we have placed on the ballot."

Statement of Democrat Chief.

"Two years ago," said Clayton F. Smith, chairman of the Democratic county managing committee, "Cook county gave Anton J. Cermak 749,000 votes to 709,000 for his opponent [Glenn]. Since then nothing has happened which would tend to decrease the Democratic vote.

"Failure to register, either in the city or the country towns, has removed from the list of prospective voters at least 150,000 men and women who voted the Republican ticket two years ago. At least 100,000 more who supported President Hoover in 1928 have become disgusted and discouraged with the Republican national, state, and city administrations, and they will stay at home.

"These facts indicate a tremendous Democratic victory in the county next Tuesday. The great majority of our county candidates are practically unopposed. Some of them will be elected by pluralities which will compare with the ones received by Coroner Bundesen and myself two years ago. Where there is still a semblance of a contest, county candidates will run well up with the senatorial candidate."

MRS. McCORMICK SUED IN ECHO TO TAPPING INQUIRY

The praecipe of a suit for $25,000 damages was filed in the Superior court yesterday against Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick and W. C. Dannenberg, a private investigator. The action was brought by George L. Cole, former clerk at the Patrician apartments, 401 Fullerton parkway, where Dannenberg lives.

According to Cole's attorney, Louis Gelfand, the declaration of the suit will charge false arrest and imprisonment. Cole, also an investigator, was arrested Sept. 12, the attorney said, by Dannenberg, who is said to have represented himself as an agent of Attorney General Carlstrom. He was kept prisoner for five days at the Medinah Athletic club, Cole alleges.

During that time, Cole avers, he was taken to the loop offices of an attorney and forced to admit in a signed statement that he had been employed by another investigator to shadow Lloyd E. Bemis, an accountant serving as auditor for the senate committee investigating Mrs. McCormick's campaign expenditures. Mrs. McCormick and Attorney General Carlstrom were present in the office at the time, Cole said.

County Commissioners from Country Towns

The nominees for the county board from that part of Cook county lying outside Chicago, commonly referred to as the country towns, do not appear on the big ballot used within the city. They are on the ballot to be used in the country town polling places.

For those five places THE TRIBUNE recommends William Busse, George A. Miller, Axel Lonnquist, and Frank J. Kriz, Republican, and Mrs. Edward J. Fleming, Democrat.

Busse and Kriz are members of the board now and Miller is a former commissioner. Lonnquist headed the Republican business men's ticket in the primary last April. Mrs. Fleming is reported to have the support of many independent and Republican women in the suburbs.

13 BOND ISSUES URGED IN FIGHT FOR GOOD TIMES

Civic Agencies Ask Votes for Construction.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Eighty to 100 per cent of the 13 Chicago and Cook county bond issues, totaling more than $28,000,000, are recommended for approval to the voters next Tuesday by the organizations and agencies which seek to safeguard public interests. It has been years since such unanimity has been expressed on bond proposals.

No one has seriously attacked the merits of any local issue, although it has been suggested that three or four of the projects might be temporarily delayed. Aside from the advantages of each improvement proposed, the chief argument in favor of the bonds is that they will provide employment and tend to relieve the business depression.

Indorsements Are Tabulated.

The organizations which have indorsed from nine to all of the 13 local bond issues, and the number indorsed by each are as follows:

The Chicago Tribune	10
Civic Federation	10
Chicago Plan Commission	9
Association of Commerce	11
Citizens' Association	13
Bureau of Public Efficiency	13
State Street Council	13
Governor's Relief Committee	13

The Plan commission limited its expression to those projects which come within the jurisdiction of city planning, but recommended every one of those. The West Central association indorsed every issue concerned with the completion of improvements started and with "construction work," but failed to designate the issues. The Association of Commerce gave its indorsement to "construction bonds," and designated 11 issues in that class. THE TRIBUNE and the Civic federation designated four of the total of 14 bond issues to be voted on which in their opinion might be deferred.

Bond Issues Are Listed.

The bond issues in the order of the preponderance of indorsement are as follows: The first 10 being those indorsed by the Civic federation and THE TRIBUNE, the first 11 being recommended by the Association of Commerce, and the 13 recommended by the remaining organizations:

New State street bridge, $3,500,000. Engineers assert that a subway cannot be built under the river until present State street bridge is removed.

Extension of Indianapolis avenue, $400,000. To relieve one of the "worst traffic bottle necks" in the city.

Extension of Lincoln park, $3,000,000. To extend filled-in land northward from Montrose avenue.

South Halsted street bridge, $2,700,000. Engineers represent that the present span is so insecure that it may be put out of commission at any time.

Reinforcement of eight bridges, $1,000,000. Spans built for light traffic and new floors and structural changes are urged as a precaution for safety.

West approach to 47th street subway, $300,000. The south park commission has the money with which to build the subway and has obtained bids. Bond money is asked to buy land so that traffic can get into the tunnel.

Forest preserve improvements, $2,500,000. The money is to be spent for comfort stations, shelter houses, and drinking water facilities. The present accommodations are described as inadequate, and some as insanitary.

Nurses' home for county hospital, $2,350,000. This need is urged vigorously by social agencies, and the present facilities are called inadequate, badly located, and detrimental.

New playgrounds, $500,000. For more play areas and the improvement of Rainbow park.

Public benefits, $4,310,000. Money to be used to pay property owners for land taken in street widenings, as fixed by courts. Much of the cash is long overdue.

Extension of street lighting system, $2,000,000. To provide lights for large area on northwest side and improve system in other sections.

Ogden avenue link, $5,460,000. This is the estimated cost of two bridges and a viaduct over Goose Island to connect the two completed ends of the Ogden avenue improvement.

Traffic control lights, $500,000. For the installation of more "stop" and "go" lights.

The fourteenth bond proposal is for $14,000,000 and is sponsored by the state. Of the local organizations, only the recreational committee of the City club recommended its passage. This money is to be spent for fish, game, and forest preserves throughout the state, but the requirements and restrictions in the law providing for it were such that several organizations urged the defeat of the bond proposal.

Several other questions will be submitted to the voters on Tuesday. One of these is a proposed amendment to the state constitution which will permit the legislature to revise the tax and revenue systems. Opponents of the plan say the adoption of the amendment will mean an income tax without substantial reduction in taxes on real estate. Proponents urge the need for relief from tax inequalities. Gov. Emmerson and the Illinois Bankers' association are supporting the amendment, while the Illinois Agricultural association, the Illinois Manufacturers' association, and the Civic federation oppose it.

Another question is approval of new banking laws under which it is claimed more protection will be given to depositors, the capitalization of the smallest banks will be increased, and state supervision will be widened.

Vote on Women on Juries.

Two other questions permit the voters to say whether women shall sit upon juries. Certain women's organizations have campaigned for adoption of these proposals.

Whether the village of Beverly shall become a part of Chicago requires another mark of "yes" or "no."

There is also a question of public policy asking whether the city council shall provide for filtration of water. The public is given no estimate of the cost officially, although it has been frequently reported that the cost will run upward of $60,000,000. Except by a section of the city administration, no campaign above the surface has been made for this proposal. Practically all agencies which have given opinions have advised its defeat.

VOTERS TO PASS ON 42 SEEKERS OF JUDGESHIPS

12 Compete for Vacancies Caused by Death.

An unusual number of candidates for state and city judicial posts will be on the ballot to be submitted to the voters in next Tuesday's election. Forty-two candidates are aspirants to the Superior, Circuit and Municipal courts. Of these 12 are competing for the five vacancies in the Superior court and the one in the Circuit court caused by the deaths of six judges.

There are 24 candidates for the 12 Municipal court seats to be filled at this election, two candidates for chief justice of this court, and four candidates for vacancies caused by elevation of two judges to other courts.

Bar Poll Led by Hayes.

Howard W. Hayes, who has served for eight years in the Municipal court and is now a Republican candidate for the Superior court vacancy caused by the death of Judge Frank P. Comerford, led in the bar poll all the candidates for vacancies. He is opposed by John Prystalski. James Joseph Kelly, a Democrat, who was voted as qualified by the Bar association, is opposing John A. Sbarbaro, Republican, for the Hopkins' vacancy.

Le Roy Milliner on the Republican ticket won in the bar poll over his Democratic opponent, Walter T. Stanton, for the Gemmill vacancy. For the Pam vacancy Rudolph Desort, Democratic candidate, who was voted as being qualified, is opposed by James W. Breen, first assistant corporation counsel, who was held to be not qualified. Ross C. Hall, Democrat, and Charles C. Carnahan, Republican, are contesting for the Holdom vacancy. Both qualified.

In the Circuit court race Joseph Burke, Municipal court judge and a Democrat, is opposed by John F. Haas, also a member of the same bench. Burke won an edge in the bar poll.

Lyle vs. Jonas, in Contest.

A feature of the Municipal court election campaign is the contest of Judge John H. Lyle, campaigner against public enemies, and Judge Edgar A. Jonas to head the ticket. Judge Jonas for the third time led the bar poll, while Judge Lyle ranked sixteenth and was voted not qualified.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, running for reelection on the Republican ticket, is opposed by John J. Sonsteby. There are twelve full term vacancies in the court. Ten of these are sought by sitting judges.

Of the sitting jurists Judges Jonas, Charles F. McKinley, John J. Lupe, and Harry F. Hamlin won in the bar poll, while Judges Lyle, Herbert G. Immenhauser, Albert B. George, Joseph L. McCarthy, George A. Curran, and Max Luster lost. All are Republicans. Former Judge Alfar M. Eberhardt and P. X. Derdzinski, Democrat, seek the Schwaba vacancy and Harold P. O'Connell, Democrat, and Helmer C. Patterson the Finnegan vacancy.

British Abandon Building of Airships Indefinitely

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Whatever the outcome of the inquiry into the disaster of the giant airship R-101, Great Britain will not build any more airships for a long time to come. The Howden airship station, where the R-100 was built, is closing down at the end of November. Sir Dennistoun Burney explained it was closing because his company had no orders for building and he had no idea when, if ever, it would be reopened.

ALD. MEYERING OMITS BLATHER FROM POLITICS

Observes the Decencies in Talk and Action.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

During a three-hour visit William D. Meyering, Democratic candidate for sheriff, never swore, never bragged, never talked cant, never was ungrammatical, never gave the glad hand to blathering ward heelers who pushed their way to him, and never offered any quack remedies for what's the matter with Chicago.

These decencies of deportment made you wonder how Meyering has ever been elected to anything, and yet he has four times been elected alderman of the Eighth ward, which in national elections is at least two to one Republican and is largely inhabited by small home builders who feel that they have a right to lights on their streets, pavements they can ride over, adequate school houses, and efficient police and fire protection.

And in spite of the decencies of speech and manner, Capt. Meyering is not the prig in politics. He is not smug. Nor does he play act the boisterous cordiality of the parasite politician.

Hand Lost in Combat.

He is thirty-eight years old; face smooth shaven; forehead high; chin firm; eyes grave and thoughtful and looking straight at you; gestures moderate; vocabulary admirable; voice even, dress simple. At first meeting you shake hands with him a little self-consciously because you have to offer your left hand. His right was torn to pieces by premature explosion of a grenade when he was leading the fight against a trench-raid seven miles south of Verdun at dawn of April 6, 1918.

The episode of the lost hand requires emphasis because it was an outstanding instance of a time when the alderman was able—in the opinion of G. H. Q.—to overcome tendencies which, wrote Mayor Thompson a few days ago, "often prevent him from taking a position where courage is necessary."

"A Well Meaning Fellow."

The mayor, however, strove to be fair and he tempered his charge of lack of courage by calling Meyering "a well-meaning fellow." The letter in which the charge was made was written by the mayor to one of several labor leaders who have endorsed the captain for sheriff. It was given to the public in facsimile by the press on Oct. 24 last.

"My only criticism of Meyering," wrote Thompson in closing his appeal for votes for the Republican candidate for sheriff, "is, although a well-meaning fellow, his over-conscientious scruples in his endeavor never to make a mistake, often prevent him from taking a position where courage is necessary."

Twelve years ago G. H. Q. took another view of Meyering's courage in the matter of "taking a position." Gen. Pershing ordered that he be given the distinguished service cross, and that order was carried out at Chaumont, then the seat of G. H. Q., as soon as Meyering was able to stand. The French high command added the croix de guerre. Pershing then made Meyering a captain and appointed him to his staff.

The First Presentation.

"I have read," said I to the alderman, "that you were the first man in the world war to be awarded the distinguished service cross."

"No," he replied, "there were three awards before mine. Mine happened to be the first presentation."

I tried to extract more details because such narratives as such men can unfold, however falteringly, are great human documents, but he shook his head, almost with irritation, saying, "I—I'd rather not talk about it. There were more men—by perhaps a hundred to one—who should have got decorations than there were who did."

I did not press the matter.

But there are many men in company E, 23d infantry, second division, A. E. F., who would rather talk about what Meyering did that April dawn twelve years ago than finish their dinner while it's hot—how he, "after his right hand had been torn to shreds, waved the shattered arm; how he put two platoons on the firing step; how he got the machine gun crews behind their weapons and opened the fight; how he was the spirit of the defense, and how he remained on his feet until the attack was repulsed."

Then "the well-meaning fellow" fainted.

A Thorn for Thompson.

That may have been caused by an attack of those "over-conscientious scruples" which, as the mayor wrote, "often prevent him from taking a position where courage is necessary," but the boys of company E insist—insist in language which crackles—that it was caused by "loss of blood which was streaming from his right arm, from his right leg, and from his head."

Gen. Pershing seems to agree with the boys rather than with Thompson.

The fact is Meyering long has been a thorn in the mayor's bed of more or less roses. He fought the telephone ordinance because it failed to provide that the company should pay for the removal of its equipment in case of street widening or subway construction. Public opinion has since vindicated his opposition. He fought the Faherty raids on public funds. He fought the shameless maneuvers that resulted in the ousting of Superintendent McAndrew. He fought the repeal of the meter ordinance, and for that opposition the mayor's heelers in the council chamber stormed at him with boos, hisses, and cries of "Send that guy back to the army!"—words, however, which many thought were a stingless gibe in view of Meyering's war record.

Need of Moral Awakening.

When I asked the aldermen that stock question about what are the needs of Chicago and how they could be met he did not start bloviating like a banquet gladiator at a reformers' talking match. He looked at me gravely and said:

"It goes deeper than that. It goes deeper than local needs. My observation leads me to believe that what we need is a general moral awakening. To be sure, that might well begin in our public offices. But it ought to reach farther than that.

"The ideals of our forefathers are breaking down. The evidences can be found everywhere—from the misconduct of public officials to the department of children on the streets.

"Everybody is conscious of the growing disregard of authority, both official and parental.

"Everybody knows that discipline is being made a joke of.

"But discipline is organized authority. Civilization is built on it, and on nothing else. The only difference between the wild man and civilized people is the submission to organized authority for the general good.

"We dislike especially to admit the moral breakdown among adolescents. Parents don't like to admit that, but if the trend is in the wrong direction we must recognize it and make a determined effort to correct it.

"As for the breakdown in the public service, its cause is the modern public official's lack of forcibility. He takes orders instead of giving them. He comes under the control of forces which at first gather around him without his knowledge and render him helpless when emergencies come.

"The remedy? Energy and independence—independence in particular. Public officials must work harder and find out for themselves what's going on. There is too much taking the word of subordinates and subcommittees in matters of utmost concern to the people.

"The biggest mistake public officials make is that as soon as they are elected they begin making plans to be reelected. Clubs, baseball games, banquets eat up their time and energy. They gratify their vanity by listening to plaudits instead of applying themselves to the job which they contracted with the voters to do and for which they take an oath of office.

His Immediate Program.

"By applying myself to the day's work of the job I hope to help restore confidence in our local government when I become sheriff. That confidence must be restored before we can go forward with public improvements necessary to the development of Chicago. I have tried to work for efficiency in city government without being a chronic obstructionist and I have tried to keep in mind the interests of the majority of the people as against any selfish individual. The record is my best campaigner. It is better than filling the air with loud promises."

ANTI-JAYWALK LAW PROPOSED FOR EVANSTON

Several new street ordinances, one directed against jaywalking, will be submitted to the Evanston city council tomorrow night, City Prosecutor Irwin F. Stolle announced yesterday.

Two other measures are intended to prevent hitch hiking, which includes casual pickups by motorists, and danger to draft and domestic animals in the streets. All three proposed ordinances have the approval of the mayor and chief of police, according to Mr. Stolle.

The jaywalking bill is similar to the one tested and later repealed in Chicago more than a year ago. All pedestrians would be required to obey the green and red traffic lights under the proposed Evanston ordinance. The anti-hitch hiking bill forbids pedestrians to solicit rides. The third ordinance directs motorists to exercise caution on encountering horses, dogs, cats, and other animals. Each bill carries a provision for a $200 fine for violators.

JARECKI TELLS PROPER WAY TO MARK BALLOT

Pamphlet Explains What Is Legal Vote.

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki yesterday moved to prevent unintentional irregularities in the counting of ballots at next Tuesday's election. A pamphlet on "How to Mark and Count Ballots" was issued to every election official in the county. The judge urged precinct election boards to hold meetings last night to rehearse their duties in order to prevent confusion.

The pamphlet was issued by the commissioners because in vote fraud investigations of past years many judges and clerks of election have pleaded ignorance of the election laws. The illustrated booklet was prepared by the legal staff under Attorney Francis X. Busch after a search of court decisions.

Watchers to Be on Duty.

Judge Jarecki declared that he did not anticipate premeditated frauds at the election. However, poll watchers armed with credentials of the election commissioners, will be on duty at many precincts. State's Attorney Swanson will have squads touring the city as has been customary at past elections. The Voters' Nonpartisan association is to enlist ex-service men as poll watchers.

The booklet explains that a voter may indicate his intention by placing a cross in the party circle before the list of candidates, in the square before each candidate or by a cross in the square provided for that purpose upon any proposition ballot.

A cross is the intersection of two lines, Judge Jarecki said. Unless the lines intersect within the square such a vote cannot be counted. The cross, however, may be small or large, providing that its lines intersect within the alloted space. Ballots marked with a check mark or those with the words "Yes" and "No" on proposition ballots cannot be counted, courts have ruled.

Markings Are Explained

"A cross in the circle at the head of a party ticket and no other marks on the ballot indicate an intention to vote for all candidates under such circle," the judge said. "A cross in the square indicates an intention to vote for the candidate before whose name the square appears.

"It is a fundamental rule that the cross in the party circle must always yield to a cross before the name of a candidate. If the voter marks a cross in the party circle and another or others before the name of a candidate or candidates in another party column, votes must be counted by such expression, but the cross in the circle has the legal effect of voting for other names under the circle. If a voter wishes to split his ticket in this fashion, he should mark his crosses in the squares without regard to the party columns."

RASKOB CALLS STOCK SELLING CHARGE MADE IN POSTER A LIBEL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, today issued a statement in which he branded as "libelous" a poster issued by the Republican national committee which propounded the question of "Who caused the stock market crash?" and followed it with the subtitle, "Read John J. Raskob's statement." He charged the intent of the poster was to infer he had sold short to deliberately cause a depression in the market.

"My attention," said Mr. Raskob, "has been called to a poster or advertisement issued by the Republican national committee conveying the inference that I have by short selling in the market deliberately influenced the depression of the market. I wish to notify the newspapers of the United States that I regard this is a libelous utterance and must hold any agency that publishes it responsible.

"As a matter of fact not only did I not sell short in the market, but never at any time since the advent of the present administration, which, of course, embraces the whole of the Hoover panic from the crash of a year ago to this hour, did I either personally or through agents either directly or indirectly sell short even a single share of stock or any commodity."

SPY IN SENATE OFFICE BUILDING IS DENOUNCED

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—A senator and a representative today criticized the placing of an undercover prohibition agent in the senate office building. Edwin P. Thayer, secretary of the senate, said in Indianapolis that the agent had been placed in the office building at the request of the treasury department and with the knowledge of Vice President Curtis.

"Espionage of persons and their domestic habits and customs is of the very essence of the theory of prohibition," he said. "No free and virile people, it will be soon found, will long submit to such tyrannical laws."

IN every art, there are a few products so inherently perfect, so beyond the ordinary that they rank as masterpieces—a Stradivarius, a Rubens, a Taj Mahal. They have in common a quality of greatness that sets them apart. The Mason & Hamlin Pianoforte has this rare attribute. Created by genius, its glorious tone rapidly became the criterion by which all other pianos were judged. Musically, the Mason & Hamlin is the most beautiful Piano the world has ever known.

This year, on our 50th Anniversary, we celebrate also a quarter of a century of close association with the Mason & Hamlin

LOOK FOR THREE STATES TO VOTE WET ON TUESDAY

Illinois, Massachusetts, Rhode Island on List.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Three states are expected to go on record against prohibition in referendum votes on Tuesday.

The states are Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Illinois. Only in Massachusetts, where repeal of the state enforcement act is involved, is the Anti-Saloon league making a fight, and its spokesmen admit the wets are likely to win. In Rhode Island as well as in Illinois the league is following its policy of ignoring referenda dealing with the eighteenth amendment. While the Woman's Christian Temperance union and other dry groups in Illinois are trying to roll up a heavy vote on the dry side of the issue, it seems to be admitted that the state will record itself as wet as it did in 1922 and in 1926.

Dry Issue in Many States.

While prohibition is involved in senatorial, congressional, and gubernatorial contests in many states, only in these three will the voters have an opportunity to vote on the direct question.

The Massachusetts referendum relates only to whether the legislature shall repeal the state enforcement act. The Rhode Island referendum provides a direct vote on the question of retention or repeal of the 18th amendment. In Illinois there are three questions, one relating to repeal of the 18th amendment, another to modification of the Volstead act to permit each state to define liquor which is non-intoxicating in fact, and a third to repeal the state search and seizure act.

Question Lengthy One.

The Massachusetts question, while simple in effect, appear formidable on the ballot. Its text follows:

"Shall the proposed law which amends general law by striking out chapter 138, section 2-A which section provides that 'no person shall manufacture, transport by aircraft, watercraft or vehicle, import or export spirituous or intoxicating liquor as defined by section 3, or certain non-intoxicating beverages as defined by section 1, unless in each instance he shall have obtained the permit or other authority required therefor by the laws of the United States and the regulations made thereunder,' which law was disapproved in the house of representatives by a vote of 110 in the affirmative and 123 in the negative and in the senate by a vote of 11 in the affirmative and 26 in the negative, be approved?"

Not Considered Mandate.

The somewhat obscure question refers to the unsuccessful attempt to repeal the state enforcement act following a referendum vote in 1928 in which the state voted wet by a majority of 254,000. The question was so phrased at that time that the legislature did not consider it as a mandate for repeal of the state law. The reason for the form of the present question is that members of the legislature may have no doubt as to the exact legislative measure involved. An affirmative vote will mean approval of the repeal bill which met defeat in the legislature last year.

Massachusetts voted wet not only in 1928, but also in 1922. In 1922 the vote was on approval of a state enforcement act. There was a majority of 102,876 against the act, the affirmative votes totaling 323,964 and the negative votes 426,840. In 1924 the question was again submitted and this time the state enforcement act was approved by a vote of 454,656 to 446,473.

Rhode Island Gives Test.

The Rhode Island referendum provides a clear cut test of sentiment on the question of retention of the eighteenth amendment. Its text is brief and to the point, as follows:

"The 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States—shall it be retained?"

An affirmative vote in Rhode Island thus means approval of prohibition. Whether it will lead to some confusion, on the ground that the voter has no alternative in case he disapproves of the 18th amendment, is a question.

Rhode Island has not voted directly on prohibition in recent years, but it has an industrial population like Massachusetts and Illinois and the sentiment is believed to be wet. Both of the senatorial candidates—Senator J. H. Metcalf, Republican nominee for reelection, and former Senator Peter G. Gerry, Democratic nominee—have declared for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Illinois Votes Wet Twice.

The people of Illinois voted so overwhelmingly against prohibition both in 1922 and 1926 that the assumption here is that a heavy wet majority again will be shown. In 1922 the majority against prohibition was 553,131, while in 1926 it was 284,039.

The question submitted in 1922 was: "Shall the existing state and federal prohibitory laws be modified so as to permit the manufacture, sale, and transportation of beer (containing less than 4 per cent by volume of alcohol) and light wines and beer for home consumption?"

The vote was 1,065,242 to 512,111.

In 1922 the question submitted was: "Should the congress of the United States modify the federal act to enforce the 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating, as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states?"

The vote was 707,352 to 422,475.

The three questions which Illinois voters will pass upon next Tuesday are:

"First, shall the 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States, which among other things prohibits the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes within the United States, be repealed?

"Second, shall the congress of the United States modify the national prohibition act to enforce the 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States, commonly known as the Volstead act, so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale or transportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with laws of the respective states?

"Third, shall the Illinois prohibition act be repealed?"

Campaign Notes

Eight former presidents of the Chicago Bar association are among the signers of an indorsement for County Judge Jarecki. They are Silas H. Strawn, who also is a former president of the American Bar association; Edgar B. Tolman, John D. Black, John R. Montgomery, Sidney S. Gorham, William Tracy Alden, Carl D. Latham, and William H. Sexton.

State's Attorney Swanson told an audience at St. Mark's M. E. church that it would be "a loss to Chicago if Municipal Judge George was not reelected."

Backers of Charles E. Peace, Republican nominee for state senator in the 29th district, have charged that several of the purported signers of an indorsement of Edward P. O'Grady, his Democratic opponent, did not authorize the use of their names for that purpose.

LeRoy Milliner, Republican nominee for the Superior court, has been indorsed by the Chicago Bar association, the Cook County Bar association the German-American Citizens' league, and other organizations.

Voters of Illinois to Give Dry Law Verdict Tuesday

Illinois voters have the opportunity on Tuesday of expressing themselves on the prohibition question. Three questions planned to test the sentiment of the electorate on the problem are on the ballot and if they are answered as were those in the 1922 and 1926 referendum, the state will show itself overwhelmingly wet once more.

The full text of the questions follow:

1. Shall the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which among other things prohibits the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes within the United States, be repealed?

To Vote on Volstead Act.

2. Shall the congress of the United States modify the national prohibition act to enforce the Eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States [commonly known as the Volstead act] so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale, or transportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating, as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states?

3. Shall the Illinois prohibition act be repealed?

Sponsored by G. O. P.

The Republican organization of Cook county sponsored the present referendum. To be placed on the ballot, a "question of public policy" must have the approval of at least 300,000 voters, given by signing their names to a petition. Each of the three prohibition petitions was signed by more than 410,000 persons before it was sent to Springfield for filing.

A number of reputable organizations fighting for the repeal of the Volstead laws have given the referendum their ardent support, urging the voters to vote "aye" on each question. The latest of these indorsements is that of the Crusaders, a men's organization opposed to prohibition, which asked support for the propositions yesterday in a statement signed by J. Russell Forgan, executive commander of the Illinois division.

"The executive committee of the Crusaders urges every member of the organization and their friends, not only to express their views on the referendum, but to vote for candidates whose stand is well defined," read a portion of the statement.

The Illinois division of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform also favored the referendum and advised its members to vote "yes" on each question. This is the national group headed by Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York. Its membership in Chicago includes many prominent women.

League Concedes Wets Victory.

That the wet vote will exceed the dry vote has already been conceded by the Illinois Anti-Saloon league which is urging drys not to vote in the referendum, preferring that they ignore it. An opposite stand is taken by the Illinois Women's Christian Temperance union, which wants its members to vote dry, and has made requests of women's clubs and other organizations asking them to help to get the drys to the polls.

The Chicago Church Federation and the Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church have rejected the plea of the Anti-Saloon league to ignore the referendum and have urged all drys to vote against the questions.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, took a similar stand, sending an appeal which said, in part, "the more drys who participate [in the referendum] the better."

Directors of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs recommended to the members of the federation that they vote "No" on all three propositions but made no recommendations on candidates for the United States senate.

DEMOCRATS TO GAIN; QUESTION IS BY HOW MUCH

May Control in House and Possibly Senate.

party row of the Democrats. There is no Republican candidate in the race. Senator Heflin was excluded from filing as a candidate in the Democratic primary because he bolted Al Smith and supported Mr. Hoover in 1928. Thereupon he filed an independent candidacy for reelection. The contest is said to be close, with Bankhead expected to win.

Latest reports foreshadow the reelection of Senator Walsh [Dem.] in Montana, Senator Norris [Rep.] in Nebraska and Senator McMaster [Rep.] in South Dakota.

There now seems little about that the Democrats will gain a senate seat in Ohio and another in West Virginia. Thus the doubtful states are actually narrowed down to Colorado, Delaware, Illinois, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Rhode Island.

Need Ten Seats to Control.

In the senate at present there are 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Labor member. In order to achieve a majority the Democrats need to make a net gain of ten seats. Just they will lose one seat in Iowa where Representative L. J. Dickinson [Rep.] will defeat Senator Daniel F. Steck [Dem.]. Therefore the Democrats need to gain 11 seats elsewhere.

So far as can be judged from surface indications, however, the Democrats cannot hope to gain more than the ten seats in Ohio, West Virginia, Colorado, Delaware, Illinois, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Rhode Island. With the loss in Iowa this would leave them a net gain of nine, which would give them one short of a majority.

That the Democrats will carry all of these ten states is exceedingly unlikely unless there should be a Democratic landslide, and in that event probably some others, now regarded safely Republican, such as Nebraska and South Dakota, would also be found in the Democratic column, assuring Democratic control of the senate.

Indications on Doubtful States.

As to the eight states listed as doubtful the latest reports favor Democratic victory in Delaware, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Oklahoma and Rhode Island and Republican victory in Colorado. In Illinois and Minnesota it seems to be a toss-up between Republicans and Democrats, with a chance that the Farmer-Labor candidate may win in Minnesota.

For a time the Republicans had high hopes of electing a senator in North Carolina, because of Democratic disaffection bred by the defeat of Senator Simmons in the primary. Senator Simmons was punished for bolting Al Smith and supporting Mr. Hoover and many of the Simmons following were threatening to bolt the nomination of Josiah W. Bailey. The information from North Carolina, however, is that Mr. Bailey will win by a large margin.

Maine elected a solid Republican delegation in September. Wallace H. White Jr., now a member of the house, was elected senator.

Certain Winners.

Candidates for the senate who are unopposed or whose election is generally conceded are Senator Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.], Senator William J. Harris [Dem., Ga.], Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], Senator Arthur Capper [Rep., Kan., long term], Senator Henry J. Allen [Rep., Kan., short term], Huey P. Long [Dem., La.], Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], Senator Henry W. Keyes [Rep., N. H.], Senator Sam G. Bratton [Dem., N. M.], Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.], James F. Byrnes [Dem., S. C.], Senator William B. Brock [Dem., Tenn., short term], Cordell Hull [Dem., Tenn., long term], Senator Morris Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], Robert D. Cary [Rep., Wyo.].

In the present house the Republicans hold 269 seats; the Democrats, 161; the Farmer-Labor party, 1. A gain of 53 seats would give the Democrats a majority of 1. About 90 of the 435 seats in the body are being seriously contested and a canvass of these shows 73 in doubt.

In more than 60 of these doubtful districts the Democrats appear to have good chances of gaining seats now held by Republicans. In a handful of closely contested districts the Republicans have a chance to make gains.

If the Democrats should make a net gain of as many as 60 seats they would have a majority of 15 in the next house. In the event of a landslide the Republicans would lose a good many more than 60 seats and the Democratic majority would hit a higher level.

Doubtful Congressional Battles.

The seventy-three doubtful congressional districts follow:

Alabama—Seventh; carried by Hoover; Republican may displace Democrat.

Colorado—First; prohibition fight; wet Democrat may displace dry Republican.

Connecticut—First and Fifth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Delaware—Democrat may displace Republican.

Florida—First; Republican has a chance to displace Democrat.

Illinois—Third, Seventh, Sixteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Indiana—First, Third, Fifth, Eighth, Eleventh, Thirteenth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Kentucky—Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Maryland—Second, Sixth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Massachusetts—Second, won by Democrats in bye-election, may be regained by Republicans; Ninth, Democrat may displace Republican.

Minnesota—Third, Eighth; Republicans may lose to Democrats or Farmer-Laborites.

Missouri—Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Wet and Dry Issue.

Montana—First; Wet Republican may displace dry Democrat.

Nebraska—Second, Fourth, Fifth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

New Jersey—Eighth; Democrat may displace Republican.

New Mexico—Democrat may displace Republican.

New York—Seventeenth, Twentieth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

North Carolina—Seventh, Tenth, Democrats may regain; Ninth, Republicans may retain.

Oklahoma—First, Fifth, Democrats may displace Republicans.

Oregon—Third, Democrat may displace Republican.

Pennsylvania—Twelfth, Fourteenth, Twentieth, Thirtieth; Democrats may displace Republicans.

Ohio—Second, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth, Democrats may displace Republicans; Twenty-first, Republican may displace Democrat.

Rhode Island—Third, Republican may displace Democrat.

South Dakota—Third, Democrat may displace Republican.

Texas—Fourteenth, Democrat may displace Republican.

Utah—Second, Democrat may displace Republican.

Virginia—Second, Seventh, Democrats may displace Republicans; Ninth, Republican may retain.

Washington—Democrat may displace Republican.

West Virginia—First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Democrats may displace Republicans; Sixth Republican may displace Democrat.

Wisconsin—Fifth, Democrat may displace Republican.

Democrats Claim 75 Gain.

The Democratic managers profess confidence that the election will result in a net gain of 75 seats, while the Republican managers do not concede a greater loss than 30 seats, which is about the number of Democratic seats swept into Republican hands by the Hoover landslide. If the Republicans should lose only what they gained two years ago they would retain control of the house by a margin of more than 20 seats.

But even if a Democratic landslide should fail to materialize or the Democrats should fail to gain as many as the 53 seats, which would give them one majority in the house, the Republicans cannot look forward with confidence to more than a nominal control of that body in the next congress. If the Republicans succeed in holding the Democratic gains down to between 40 and 50 the La Follette radicals will hold the balance of power in the house as they now do in the senate, and with the regular Republicans in nominal control the actual control would rest with a coalition of Democrats and irregular Republicans.

Prohibition Lineup to Change.

The lineup on prohibition in the next congress will not be greatly changed by the election. The wets will gain and the drys will lose seats in both houses. Henry Curran, president of the Association Against Prohibition, asserts that half a dozen dry senators and 60 dry house members will be replaced with wets. F. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon league concedes wet gains of only two seats in the senate and ten in the house. In any event both houses will remain overwhelmingly dry.

MORE G. O. P. LEADERS IN PITTSBURGH JOIN BOLT FROM PINCHOT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Assemblyman Samuel J. Grenet, Republican chairman of the twenty seventh ward and president of the Fort Pitt Brewing company, has announced his intention to support John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal party nominee for governor, in opposition to Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee.

Grenet's action followed, but apparently was not influenced by the announcement of County Controller Robert G. Woodside that he was supporting Hemphill and that he would be chairman of the final Liberal party rally Monday in north side Carnegie hall.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. F. H. Frederick, chairman of the civil service commission, declared he would not support Pinchot, but did not declare for Hemphill, although he is considered to have leanings in that direction.

Grenet is the only ward chairman to defy Mayor Charles H. Kline's repeated request to "Vote and work for the election of Pinchot and the entire Republican ticket."

The Rev. James R. Cox of Old St. Patrick's Catholic church today declared that he had been offered many inducements to desert the cause of Pinchot and come out for Hemphill.

His reply was to deliver a speech for Pinchot at a rally held last night in the Ambridge High school, in which he referred to the attempt to influence him.

NEW YORK HEARS VICTORY CLAIMS BY BOTH PARTIES

New York, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—One of the most momentous campaigns in the recent history of the state came to a virtual close tonight with the customary claims of victory advanced by the leaders of both major parties that their respective candidates would carry off the victory.

With an air of perfect assurance the Democrats predicted the reelection of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt by a plurality of 300,000 or more, predicated on a belief that New York City would roll up an old time "Al" Smith plurality of 500,000 or more for his successor and that the Republican plurality upstate would be held down to an unprecedented low level—200,000 or less.

William J. Maier, chairman of the Republican state committee, has predicted a more modest plurality of 100,000 for Charles H. Tuttle, Republican nominee for governor. This forecast is based on a presumption that the Republicans would come down to The Bronx with a plurality for Mr. Tuttle of more than 400,000 and that the Democratic plurality within the city would be held down to a figure in the close vicinity of 300,000, a prediction that has little support even among the leaders of Mr. Maier's own party.

If the Democratic forecast should hold good and Gov. Roosevelt is swept to victory for a second term in his present office there will be a continuance of divided power and responsibility in the state government at Albany. The Republicans, according to the verdict of experienced observers, will retain control of both the senate and assembly with a possibility even of adding somewhat to their strength in the assembly.

The Socialist leaders predict a vote of 200,000, or something slightly in excess of that figure for Louis Waldman, the party candidate for governor. Should this prediction hold good it would bring the Socialist vote for governor in this state up to a new high level.

Both the major parties have a big stake in Tuesday's election. The victory so confidently forecast by the Democrats for Gov. Roosevelt is held by leaders of the governor's own party as preparing the way for the New York state Democracy to appear at the Democratic national convention to be held in 1932 as sponsor, for the second time in succession, for a Democratic nominee for President. Defeat would mar that prospect.

Where the Republicans are concerned, the election of Mr. Tuttle would mean restoration of party morale, badly shaken through the succession of defeats for a decade past.

The campaign preceding Tuesday's election will go down in the political annals of the state as memorable because it marked the first appearance of the Republican party in a state fight as officially wet and in support of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

A victory for Mr. Tuttle undoubtedly would mean that he would be in a position to control the selection of delegates from this state to the Republican national convention and, under the circumstances, a delegation pledged to repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

The appearance of a third, dry candidate for governor in the person of Robert P. Carroll of Syracuse university has afforded a rallying point for the disaffected drys in the Republican party, of which there are many.

The disclosures in New York City involving the barter in appointments and nominations for judiciary positions, with the long train of developments growing out of them, has been the foremost theme of discussion on the stump of the Republican nominee for governor, who has charged his Democratic opponent with failure to take a firm stand for the correction of the evils.

FRESHEST GROCERIES

Not to be found in old packages

FOOD and other groceries in A&P stores are always fresh because they are sold quickly. New supplies, therefore, are constantly coming into these stores. Nothing stays on A&P shelves long enough to become stale.

For this reason you find in A&P stores only the latest packages put out by the manufacturers. Sometimes these packages are smaller than the old ones. Sometimes they are larger. But the manufacturers often leave the prices of their packages unchanged on account of varying costs.

This is why sometimes you get a smaller or a larger package in A&P stores than you get in other stores which sell the same goods. Old packages are never to be found where sales are rapid.

A NEW IDEA IN LIFE INSURANCE

That May Double or Triple Your Returns

A new plan of Life Insurance has just been put out by the Bankers Life Company of Iowa that's proving very popular with the "Men of Family."

The new "Family Protection Policy" is designed to furnish a substantial monthly income, not all the children to grow, then a substantial amount to the wife.

Both $10,000 policy pays for death within the first 20 years $1,000 in cash at death plus a guaranteed income of 12% on each $10,000 unit, payable $100 a month for every month that the insured fails to live out 240 months (20 years) from the date of issuance of the policy.

Should death occur at the end of the first year the guaranteed monthly payments are $10,000, plus a payment of $10,000 to the wife at the end of 20 years, total guaranteed payments of $31,000, plus possible dividends, should interest period $4,745, making grand total of $35,745.

Should insured live out the 20 years, a substantial cash or paid-up insurance settlement can be had, or $10,000 insurance can be issued at a reduced rate for the benefit of the wife or the insured's old age, without a substantial cash payment or a monthly life income can be taken.

And the most surprising part is that this wonderful policy can be had at rate but a little more (this that required for $10,000 on the regular Ordinary Life plan.

NOISE AND SIGNS SMOTHER LOOP AS BATTLE ENDS

Political Hullabaloo in a Roaring Finish.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Far from sinking inertly into oblivion, the campaign died its nominal death yesterday in the loop with a hullabaloo that augurs a crush at the polls on Tuesday. The "mop up" squads will be busy today and tomorrow scurrying hither and yon in a final endeavor to round up each possible vote, but by and large, the tumult and shouting of yesterday marked the end of things political for the nonce.

Seldom, if ever, has the clamor for the public ear reached the proportions characterizing this waning battle. Candidates major and minor have resorted to old tricks and utilized new ones. Reminders of the issues of the election and the personalities involved have assaulted the ear and the eye of the man in the street so assiduously that politics have monopolized the public consciousness and the topic has been on every tongue for the last few weeks. Nobody takes a curtain call when the performance is over, but this show has been a good one while it lasted.

Loud Appeals for Votes.

Bands and banners; political cards shoved into the hands of pedestrians; loud speakers blatting the utterances of candidates; mechanical pianos mounted on wheels and going full tilt, careening through the loop between glaring white signs and red lettering. These were merely incidents of the contest.

Ald. Albert J. Horan, Democratic candidate for bailiff of the municipal court, struck a comic note with his roving advertisement. It consisted of a dummy mule attached by shafts to an automobile of ancient and uncertain vintage. A bundle of straw projected out over the mule's head on a pole, and those who looked read the signs and were impressed with the fact that Horan's name could be found in the Democratic column of the ballot.

State Representative Charles Weber had his advertising on the back of a man on stilts, apparently some ten feet tall. His long coat and top hat, his lengthy cane and bulbous nose were here and there in the loop, and Weber's name went with him. The same politician also used a bright yellow "baby automobile" carrying advertisements.

Ponies Haul Sign.

Still another Democrat, Thomas F. Byrnes, for sanitary district trustee, made a bid for public notice with a small cart drawn by a span of Shetland ponies. The clatter of their little shoes along the streets attracted attention to the placards they hauled.

But, most of all, the crowds stopped, looked, and listened yesterday in front of the Apollo, Grand, and Garrick theaters, where the litter of campaign literature covered the sidewalk like snow. There within half a block of each other on Randolph street rival bands paid each other the professional courtesy of alternating the martial strains intended to attract attention to the meetings of the Republican nominee, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, and the Democratic nominee, James Hamilton Lewis.

Use College Melodies.

The "On Wisconsin" melody by Jack Bramhall's musicians had just been completed in front of the Apollo and changed to the Notre Dame victory march. When the automobile of the nominee was seen approaching and the group swung into the Valkyrie cry that has been the war song of the feminine Republican nominee in this campaign. It has heralded her approach at most of her meetings.

Capacity audiences hear both the candidates, and knots of people gather outside to listen to the stentorian tones of Col. Lewis, emanating from the loud speaker atop the Garrick theater canopy, lending a profundity to his address no matter what the remarks.

But it's Saturday afternoon, after all, the end of the week—so the crowd drifts homeward, its mind already made up for Tuesday.

OFF FOR MARS SAYS NOTE LEFT BY A SUICIDE

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Poems and articles which he apparently wrote shortly before committing suicide today indicated Adolph Hayden, 44, sacrificed himself for the purpose of establishing radio communication between the earth, Mars and the hereafter.

Hayden, a radio engineer, gave his "future address" as "Southern End Terminal, North Pole Tunnel, Mars," and asked that his radio tools be sent to him there in the year 3430. The man ended his life by fashioning a rubber mask attached to a gas jet. He twisted a rope about his arms and in some manner attached a padlock to the rope.

BREWING STOCK SCARCE, RUMOR OF 'BEER' REVEALS

New York, N. Y., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Rumors in Wall street the last few days that efforts would be made in congress to modify the Volstead act to permit the manufacture of beer caused some hasty search for brewing stocks likely to benefit from such a change, but would be traders in brewery shares today found the lists were virtually bare of any prospects.

Not a stock representing a once flourishing industry is quoted on any of the New York exchanges or by any of the leading dealers in over the counter stocks, a canvass of the street disclosed. Several dealers, however, reported they had inquiries for brewery stocks the last week, and one house was anxious to locate a good brewing stock in hope of making a market for it in the event the beer rumors turn out to have some foundation.

The only surviving brewing stocks were found listed on exchanges in cities once prominently identified with the industry. The St. Louis exchange has listed independent brewery shares, offered at $1 a share and with a price range since 1921 of $9 high and 50 cents a share low.

The Pittsburg exchange lists the Pittsburgh brewery, making near beer, now selling above $6 a share, after an advance of $3 from its low level, and the Independent Brewery of Pittsburgh, with the common quoted at $3.50 and the preferred at $4.

INDIA DELEGATES HURRY TO MEND RELIGIOUS SPLIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The last two Indian delegates to the round table conference, which opens Nov. 12, arrived today to attend the preliminary hearing of the British Indian delegation at St. James' palace Monday. A small group is meeting tonight before the first convocation of the delegation. Most of the others have already met.

The greatest difficulty is being experienced in bringing Madras presidency to the general viewpoint on the settlement of Hindu-Moslem differences, it is said. The most active in these efforts is Mrs. Subbarayan, wife of the former chief minister.

ILLINOIS VOTERS TO FILL 6 STATE OFFICES TUESDAY

2 Congressmen at Large Also to Be Elected.

Although the race for the United States senatorship and the district congressional fights have been receiving the major share of attention during the present campaign, several other important offices are to be filled at Tuesday's election. The voters are to select a state treasurer, two congressmen at large, the state superintendent of schools, and four trustees of the University of Illinois.

The treasurership race presents as rivals former State Senator Clarence F. Buck of Monmouth, the Republican candidate, and Edward J. Barrett, a Chicago Democrat. Barrett was not the candidate of the Democratic organization in the primary, but won over M. C. Zacharias, west side banker.

Buck a Veteran in Office.

Former Senator Buck resigned as director of agriculture in Gov. Emmerson's cabinet when he won the Republican nomination last spring. A former publisher and postmaster in Monmouth, Buck also served as director of finance of the United States shipping board, resigning from the state senate to accept the post in 1923. He was later appointed collector of customs at Chicago. He left that position to take charge of the Chicago office of State Auditor Nelson.

In 1928 he conducted former Gov. Frank O. Lowden's national campaign for the presidential nomination and was a delegate at large to the Republican national convention at Kansas City.

Barrett Surprises Democrats.

Barrett filed for the treasurership as an unknown and defeated Mr. Zacharias, who had the support of the Democratic organization. He is 39 years old, is married, and lives at 5728 South Maplewood avenue. He served with the 121st infantry overseas, was wounded, and spent twenty-seven months in hospitals recovering.

Asked yesterday as to his reputed connection with Mike Carrozzo, head of the street sweepers, Barrett said he had been an organizer for Carrozzo's 15th ward organization until "about two years ago" when he became employed by a La Salle street investment concern.

Four in Congress Race.

The candidates of the major parties for congressmen at large are Frank L. Smith of Dwight, and Richard Yates of Springfield, Republicans, and William H. Dieterich of Beardstown, and Walter Nesbit of Belleville, Democrats.

Dieterich delivered a wet speech at the Democratic state convention last August which created such an impression upon Chicago leaders that they have felt he has a good chance of being elected. The nominee declared for repeal in the prohibition poll conducted by THE TRIBUNE.

Smith, a former congressman, former chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, and former United States senator-elect, has declared that he is bound by the decision of the Republican state convention in August which instructed the party candidates for congress to abide by the result of the wet-dry referendum.

Former Gov. Yates is dry. He did not reply to THE TRIBUNE prohibition poll. He receives the approval and support of the Anti-Saloon league.

Nesbit is a miners' union official and took a stand similar to that of Dieterich on the liquor problem.

Superintendent of Instruction.

The race for superintendent of public instruction is between the incumbent, Francis G. Blair, Republican, who has held the post since 1906, and Mrs. Eva B. Batterton, Democrat, of Springfield. Supt. Blair has been criticized by the Democrats as a "dictator" and a "tyrant."

On the Republican slate for trustees of the University of Illinois are: George A. Barr, Joliet; Edward E. Barrett, La Grange; Leonard A. Colp, Marion, and Mrs. Margaret Day Blake of 1301 Astor street, Chicago. Mrs. Blake is a former trustee and seeks to fill the vacancy left by the death of Mrs. Mary Busey.

The Democratic nominees for university trusteeships are Walter W. Williams, Benton; C. A. Ewing, Decatur; M. C. Zacharias, 226 Marshall boulevard, Chicago [defeated by E. J. Barrett for the state treasurership nomination], and Marjorie Robbins Hopkins of Lake Forest, who is running for the Busey vacancy.

Bonds Are Fixed for Pair Arrested with Securities

Bonds of $50,000 were set for Stanley Ford, 25 years old, and Francis Farley, 30, yesterday by Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court when a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed. The hearing on the writ was continued until Monday to give the police an opportunity to investigate the finding of $25,000 worth of supposedly stolen stocks and bonds when Ford and Farley were arrested in front of their apartment at 3251 Maypole avenue.

The police found $20,000 worth of securities in the possession of the pair and the other securities were found in the apartment.

STORE OWNER HANGS HIMSELF.

SENATE CAMPAIGN COSTS KOOP $81.80; TIME LOST $33.99

George Koop, Socialist candidate for United States senator, set a precedent for his rivals yesterday when in the statement of his campaign expenses he listed this item: "Loss of time, $33.99."

So far as is known no candidate heretofore listed the time he took off from his regular employment for speech making; but Mr. Koop said that one trip downstate cut down his usual pay check by the amount he listed.

Mr. Koop's total expenses, said the statement, amounted to $81.80 and the donations were $25 from the Bakers' union No. 2, and $5 from the Finnish Progressive society. The remainder, including the charge for loss of time, came out of his own pocket. His principal costs were those incident to travel to such points as Waukegan, Cicero, and Kedzie and Ogden avenues. There also was a 75 cent item for a disbursement at the Y. M. C. A. hotel.

COLLEGE TO OPEN NEW UNITS.

KU KLUX KLAN ON LAST LEGS; ONCE FRUITFUL RACKET

Millions Joined, Donated, but Few Are Left.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—The Ku Klux Klan, a powerful political factor in some states five years ago, is now on its last legs, the Washington Post will say in a copyrighted story tomorrow. This information, it is explained, comes from an "authoritative source."

Figures compiled show that the membership which had climbed to about nine million in 1925 has dwindled to less than 35,000 in 1930. It is estimated that up to 1925 the klan had collected in fees more than $90,000,000.

The Ku Klux Klan, which backed William Gibbs McAdoo for the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1924, played an important part in the national convention in New York.

Domain Vanishing.

"Today a crumbling shell of juggernaut skidding dizzily toward oblivion, the klan makes a last desperate stand," the Post will say. "Casting a faltering shadow athwart the ballot box to exact tribute for a political power exposed as a colossal myth and ruling a vanishing domain, fantastically small even now, it is dying."

Former members of the Invisible Empire, says the story, want to pose it as a great money making organization for the benefit of a few head men. They assert that it is a shining example of big business. Millions of men who belonged to the order have never been able to learn just how much money was taken in during the days of prosperity or where it went. The sum is paid out in salaries to the imperial wizard and his lieutenants are not listed.

The Funds Poured In.

Channels for a highly remunerative inflow of funds came from the higher degrees of "Knight Kamelia," for which more than a million knights paid $5 each, and that of "Knight of the Great Forest," which numbered some 86,000 members. Since its incorporation in Georgia in 1920, with its citadel at Atlanta, the klan is estimated to have received more than $10,000,000 annually from these two elevated rank sources alone.

Edward Young Clarke of Atlanta was first to see the possibilities in the klan movement. Col. William Joseph Simmons, who conceived the idea to organize something on the order of the original Ku Klux Klan and who struggled along for years making spread-eagle speeches and struggling for financial existence, accepted an offer of Mr. Clarke to make the klan a "business success." Clarke was to propagate and Simmons to operate the klan.

Clarke Gets the Money In.

Being an expert advertiser and organizer, Clarke soon put the klan on its financial feet. A controversy that came later resulted in the elimination of Clarke and Simmons and the promotion of Dr. Hiram W. Evans, a Texas dentist. Evans took the klan over at its most prosperous period, but was not able to keep going the steady flow of money started by Clarke.

Figures given to the Post today purport to show for the first time the extent of the rise and fall of the klan.

By 1925 the membership of the order had reached a total of 8,904,871, but after that it commenced to fade. This number represented all persons invited up to that year. It was about the time that Imperial Wizard Evans made a demonstration in Washington and announced that from then on the klan would discard its hoods and other disguises. By the last of 1926 the membership had fallen to 2,006,181. The membership fell rapidly after that. It was 321,411 in 1927, 145,469 in 1928, 82,603 in 1929, 34,694 in 1930.

BANK RECEIVER TO PAY DIVIDEND TO DEPOSITORS

While a committee of depositors of the Lake View state bank were continuing their efforts to reorganize the institution, the Chicago Trust company, receiver for the bank, yesterday announced that a 20 per cent cash dividend will be paid to the depositors on Nov. 15.

Forms have been mailed to the depositors to fill out the amounts of their claims and return to the trust company, according to Frank Curda, vice president of the company.

"We are calling the attention of depositors to the fact that certain people are now endeavoring to acquire by purchase claims of certain depositors against the bank and have asked these depositors to assign their claims to them," said Mr. Curda.

"We are cautioning depositors against sacrificing their claims or selling them without first ascertaining the facts and giving the matter full consideration for the reason that additional substantial payments in the form of dividends will be made as speedily as possible in the administration of the affairs of the bank."

BENEFIT CIRCUS AT HOTEL WILL AID CHARITIES

Several charities will benefit from the proceeds of a circus at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Wednesday and Thursday nights. The east lounge will house the big top, and performances will be given at 7 and 9 o'clock. The passage joining the two main buildings will be a midway, with hula girls, fortune tellers, and the various freaks that help make a circus a success. Some of the cast have been with the big circuses for several seasons. There will be dancing until 1 a. m. in the marine dining room to Phil Spitalny's music. The Infant Welfare league, Chicago Junior school, Misericordia hospital, Mark Nathan Jewish Orphans' home, and the Sheridan post of the American Legion are the sponsors.

Spectacular Fire Rages Near Woolworth Building

New York, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—A spectacular and smoky fire which belched burning embers into the air and tossed gleaming sparks high up the sides of the Woolworth building occurred tonight in a five story loft building on Barclay street, just three doors removed from the base of the tallest structure in lower Manhattan.

WOMAN EMPLOYE CELEBRATES 50TH YEAR AT FIELD'S

Fifty years in the retail store of Marshall Field & Co. have failed to dull the Irish brogue of Miss Bridget Donahue of 913 Lytle street. Yesterday she received congratulations on her half century anniversary from her friends, the store executives, and fellow workers. Miss Donahue was born near Dublin. She came to America with her sister after the death of their parents. Four days after they reached Chicago Miss Donahue began plying her needle in the dressmaking section of Field's. Yesterday she was presented with an armful of flowers, gifts from her friends, and was the guest of honor at a luncheon in the store.

BRIDGET DONAHUE.

Jewelry Store "Customer" Pockets $35,000 in Gems

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Loss of $35,000 in gems, believed stolen by a suave "customer," was reported to police tonight by T. L. Combs & Co., jewelers.

A stranger came in and priced silverware sets. Noticing one piece of silverware in particular, the man walked behind the counter and pointed it out to the clerk.

As the clerk turned to get it down, the stranger is thought to have reached into a showcase and pocketed the gems.

The "customer" left, saying he would return soon with his wife. He didn't.

Negro Dressed as Woman Kills 2 Who Follow Him

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Attired in women's clothes, Ivey Allen, Negro, joined in Halloween festivities. His costume was so realistic that Willie Mosely and Horace Allen, also Negroes, followed him home. Frightened or angry, he grabbed a rifle and killed them.

FIRE NEAR WILD GUSHER SCARES OKLAHOMA CITY

Blaze Quenched in Time to Save Town.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Oklahoma City had a brief panic today as fire swept through oil soaked grass at the southeast doorstep of the city, a mile and a half from where an uncontrollable volcano of oil roared into the sky.

Scores of weary firemen, oil field workers and National Guardsmen quenched the flames in less than an hour, but not before panic had cleared residential districts in the danger zone near the wild No. 1 Stout well and word had swept through downtown crowds that "the wild well is on fire."

Another Well Works Loose.

Adding to the scare came the report that another great gusher near the Stout was tearing loose as sand cut at its connections. After the confusion had subsided it was learned the Champlin Refining company's No. 1 Naden, 600 feet south of the Stout, and one of five wells it was proposed to open in an effort to relieve gas pressure at the rampant gusher, had cut its top mastergate. It was shut in immediately and new connections installed. The lower connections were holding.

Approximately 160 men wielded shovels to beat out today's blaze which ignited oil-saturated grass along the Canadian river channel, a mile and a half northeast of the Stout well.

Guards Sound Alarm.

Guardsmen ran through city streets when today's fire began, blowing whistles and shouting an evacuation command. Their efforts were needless, for already whole families, most of them Negroes, were sweeping children and scanty belongings into their arms and dashing from their homes. The wildest confusion reigned.

The rolling smoke clouds from the burning grass were visible for miles, and the city's skyscraper tops, about a mile from the monster gusher itself, bristled with frightened office workers.

Down in the streets where the gusher's roar and nauseous fumes crept into homes, uncooked suppers were eaten under the watchful eyes of National Guard patrols. Other residents who feared to remain at home were cared for at the nearby state fair grounds. Arrangements were made to provide for the needy and sick.

Battle to Stop Flow.

With no hope of taming the Stout before tomorrow noon, crews which had abandoned their arduous task at the first cry of fire returned to the well and prepared to attempt to put a great die nipple into place.

Officials held considerable hope that the die nipple would restrain the towering petroleum column.

The wild well has been erupting enough gas for a city of a million population and a prodigious quantity of oil since it broke loose late Thursday.

With fire equipment standing ready in the area surrounding the Stout, 1,900 feet of hose stretching along the Rock Island right of way, oil racks and every available man on duty, fire department officials were ready for any emergency tonight.

Bishop Sheldon Griswold Still in Grave Condition

Lewis and Dreiser Among Candidates for Nobel Prize

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Speculation concerning the possible winner of the Nobel prize for literature has given rise to numerous unconfirmed rumors, the latest of which mentions Sinclair Lewis and Theodore Dreiser, Americans, and the Danish author Johannes V. Jensen. But the panel of judges, however, is keeping absolute secrecy regarding its selection.

ACREAGE REDUCTION AGAIN URGED BY FARM BOARD TO AID TILLERS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[U.P.]—Millions of dollars and hours of work are wasted by farmers annually in over-producing crops, the federal farm board said today in a new plea for acreage reduction.

Intensifying its campaign for acre reduction in wheat and cotton, the board issued a circular on over-production which it is sending to cooperative, state agricultural colleges, farm groups, and farmers.

"One thing successful manufacturers learned a long time ago," the board said, "was that they did not make money when they produced more than they could sell at a profit. So they adopted a policy of adjusting production to demand, at the same time doing everything they could to increase the demand."

In the case of wheat, the board advocated a reduction of acreage to meet only the domestic demand, and that the American farmer cease looking to the export market to dispose of his surplus crop.

FILE NOTICE OF REHEARING PLEA IN EXPERT SUIT

Notice was filed in the Illinois Supreme court yesterday by attorneys representing THE TRIBUNE that a rehearing will be asked in the expert fee case which the court decided in favor of Mayor Thompson and County Treasurer Harding. In the decision, handed down a week ago, the Supreme court reversed the ruling of Circuit Judge Hugo Friend and held that Thompson and Harding were not guilty of conspiracy to defraud taxpayers of about $1,300,000 paid out to three real estate experts in a former Thompson administration and were not liable for return of the money, which, with interest, amounted to $1,245,604.

The case was not remanded for trial. Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, representing THE TRIBUNE, said that the notice filed yesterday is merely formal announcement that a rehearing is to be asked. The petition for a rehearing is to be filed before Nov. 19, he said.

BATTLE IS OVER; INDIANA AWAITS VOTERS' VERDICT

Democrats Are Confident They Will Gain.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—The end of Indiana's fall political campaign finds the state expectantly wondering whether the signs which point to an overwhelming Democratic victory are pointing the right way.

The fight is over and the party leaders are sitting back in the blue smoke of their headquarters awaiting the verdict of the voters. The campaign has been largely an organization fight based on the popular issue of the year, depression, and the trend is distinctly an anti-administration one.

R. Earl Peters, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, predicts the entire state ticket from secretary of state on down will be victorious and he forecasts a triumph in at least seven of the state's thirteen congressional districts. The Democrats also are hopeful of gaining a majority of the 100 state representative posts to give them control of the house in the next state legislature.

G. O. P. Disputes Claims.

Elza O. Rogers, Republican state chairman, disputes the optimistic outlook of the Democrats and contends they have been misled by the interpretation of the great silent vote, which he says will be Republican.

The Democrats now have only three of the thirteen congressmen in the second, fourth, and seventh districts, but are expecting to gain seats in the first, third, fifth, and eleventh, with the thirteenth doubtful. In the first district, now represented by Harry E. Rowbottom of Evansville, the Republicans have experienced internal disruption and the Democrats are confident of a victory. Rowbottom was first elected to congress during the Ku Klux Klan wave back in 1924.

The third district normally has been Democratic, but two years ago James W. Dunbar of New Albany reëntered the fight after an eight year retirement and was successful in the landslide by which Hoover carried the state. The district is expected to revert to its normal Democratic status next Tuesday by electing Eugene B. Crowe of Bedford.

Battle in Marion County.

There has been a considerable battle in the seventh district in Marion county, which includes the state capital, where Representative Louis Ludlow is the Democratic nominee for reelection. The Republicans have directed most of their attack at Ludlow, former Washington correspondent for several newspapers, but the political experts concede him a victory.

Both parties have been particularly anxious to win the state representative contests in order to control the house during the next session, which is to see several important legislative programe presented. A tax commission has been studying a plan for revision of the state's entire tax system, and is expected to propose the adoption of an income tax or a sales tax, or maybe both, as a means of relieving the real estate owner of some of the tax burden. An educational commission also is to present a program for reorganization of the state educational system.

Senate Looks Republican.

Most important, though, is the gerrymander for redistricting the state's congressional alignments to accord with the 1930 census figures, which reduce Indiana's congressional delegation to 11. If the Democrats succeed in winning control of the house an imbroglio is likely to develop because the Republicans are certain of retaining control of the senate. There are 23 Republican holdover senators, and they need only to elect a half dozen of the twenty-six involved in Tuesday's election to retain their hold on the senate.

HOOVERS' BALLOTS BEGIN JOURNEY TO CALIFORNIA HOME

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The ballots of President and Mrs. Hoover for the election Tuesday today were mailed to their home precinct at Palo Alto, Cal. Awaited for several days, the blanks arrived early today and were immediately checked by the chief executive and Mrs. Hoover and returned.

Trapped Thieves Go Wild; Kill Eight Men and Child

LUCENA, Tayabas Province, P. I., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Eight men and a child were shot and killed here today by two men caught in the act of stealing. Authorities said the men ran amuck when apprehended.

FATE OF NORRIS NEAR DECISION BY NEBRASKANS

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—The political campaign which decides whether United States Senator George W. Norris, insurgent Republican, is to remain in public life, came to an end here tonight in a big Republican mass meeting addressed by Senator Norris, and a speech by his opponent, Former Senator G. M. Hitchcock, Democratic nominee. The voting is next Tuesday.

In many quarters it is predicted that Senator Norris will be reelected, but it is apparent there have been defections from Norris and the entire Republican ticket. Whether these losses are sufficient to overcome a Republican majority of 60,000 is a question. If Hitchcock can hold the Democratic vote it is believed he has made sufficient inroads in the Republican ranks to elect him. The "administration" Republicans are supporting Hitchcock, with Norris backers looking to Democratic farmers for many votes.

The Democrats predict they will elect five congressmen, making a gain of three.

TWO OF YOCUM'S KIDNAPERS ELUDE PURSUING POLICE

Hunt for Ringleader in Peoria.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kewanee, Ill., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Hope for the immediate capture of the two remaining members of the gang which kidnaped Eart L. Yocum, Galva banker, was practically abandoned by police today. Search was continued in Peoria for Floyd Winslow, ex-convict and burglar, known as the leader of the gang, but Winslow was known to have many acquaintances in that city who would help him remain in hiding.

Sheriff Charles Nash had two men in custody. They were Edward Liggett and Eugene Durham, farmers near Kewanee, who were accused of attempting to aid Orville Whiskers, the other fugitive. The sheriff said that Liggett and Durham had carried a message to Rollo Whiskers, brother of Orville, asking help. The men refused to divulge the whereabouts of the missing kidnaper, declaring they had only received a telephone message from him.

Winslow Seen Near Peoria.

Winslow was positively identified today as the driver of a truck without license plates which was seen at Princeville, Ill., last night, headed towards Peoria.

Three days have now elapsed since the kidnapers were surprised here but escaped from state police by jumping from their auto after a crash, and running across the fields. One of the men, Vernon Ahlgren, was captured at noon the following day, but the other two have successfully evaded the man hunt conducted at first by more than 200 searchers. Ahlgren made a full confession to the kidnaping, implicating the other two fugitives and also Harry Whiskers, who had already been arrested.

Tricked Out of Ransom.

The banker was kidnaped at the gateway of his estate one week ago and held for three and one-half days in a hunting lodge on the Illinois river near Lacon, Ill. The kidnapers finally released him without collecting a penny of ransom, although they first demanded $200,000 and their lowest request was for $50,000. They were surprised when they gathered at an agreed upon waiting place to collect an installment which Yocum said he would furnish. State highway troopers kept the engagement instead of the banker.

COUNTY FORESTS OBTAIN $500,000 TRACT FOR $38,000

A 100 acre tract of land valued at $500,000 has become the property of the forest preserve district at a cost of $38,000, President Cermak of the forest preserve commissioners announced yesterday. The saving of $462,000 has been made possible by a recent decision of the Illinois Supreme court.

In 1923, Cermak said, the commissioners agreed to buy a tract of property on the north shore channel just west of the Wilmette Country club. Later the owners, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Emerson, refused to make a conveyance because property values had suddenly increased. The case was carried to the Supreme court, which recently ruled in favor of the county.

Complaints of Students' Tippling Bring Dry Raid

Dry agents raided the barbecue stand of Charles W. Jones in Lake street, just east of Elgin, yesterday, and seized a small quantity of moonshine. The raid followed complaints that students who attended a recent Elgin-Joliet high school football game on Maroon field were sold liquor. State's Attorney George Carbary of Kane county invited the prohibition operatives to investigate, explaining that Jones' place was in Cook county. Jones was arrested and held in bonds of $1,500 in Chicago.

Wife Seeks Annulment of Marriage to Another

Mrs. Helen Peterson, 22 years old, 146 West 59th street, filed suit for annulment of her marriage to Robert Temple, 6613 Ellis avenue, in the Circuit court yesterday. Mrs. Peterson says she became intoxicated at a party last Decoration day and eloped with Temple to Valparaiso. "Realizing the enormity of my act," her bill says, "I hurried home immediately to my husband, William." She says she married William Peterson, a fireman, in 1927.

MRS. PRICE GETS SIX MONTHS FOR FAKED ROBBERY

Judge Tries Case and Finds Her Guilty.

Mrs. Laura B. Price, wife of Edwin Price, wealthy packers supply manufacturer, was sentenced to six months in the county jail and fined $1 yesterday by Judge Hugo Friend in the Criminal court. She was found guilty by the judge of conspiracy in a fake robbery to collect insurance to cover debts contracted at the roulette wheel.

Mrs. Price, who is 38 years old and lives in an apartment at the Seneca hotel with her husband, who is many years her senior, will remain at liberty on bond pending an appeal asked for by her attorneys, Leonard C. Reid and Dwight McKay.

Denies Plea for Fine.

Not a tear did the fashionably gowned defendant shed as Judge Friend brushed aside a plea for clemency in the way of a fine rather than imprisonment in jail. Her elderly husband sat beside her throughout the session yesterday.

"What can I say except that they are sending an innocent woman to jail," said Mrs. Price as she was about to leave the courtroom.

"She has nothing to say," interposed Mr. Price before his wife could continue.

Conspiracy Not Disputed.

After Attorneys Reid and McKay for the defense and Assistant State's Attorneys Charles Mueller and John Hampton for the state had concluded the arguments Judge Friend said:

"I appreciate the responsibility which falls on your shoulders, Mr. Reid," said the judge. "The court also has a responsibility which ordinarily falls to a jury. [The jury was waived in this case.]

"There is no dispute in this case that a conspiracy existed. The only question is whether Mrs. Price had knowledge of this conspiracy and participated in it. I will say that I believe this conspiracy was formed before Mrs. Price knew of it, but if she committed any overt act even after it was formed she is guilty."

Thinks Story Lacks Frankness.

"It is charitable of me to say that Mrs. Price, especially while under cross examination, did not impress me as telling a frank straightforward story. She displayed an utter lack of frankness and I can come to only one conclusion and that is that she is guilty."

The prosecutor urged a year in jail as a penalty, while Attorney Reid argued that "a fine would serve the ends of justice."

"The mere finding of guilty against a woman in Mrs. Price's station of life is the severest kind of punishment," he said.

"A fine would only be a punishment on Mr. Price," said the judge. "I will give this defendant the benefit of the fact that I believe the conspiracy was originally formed without her knowledge."

The faked robbery was staged on Feb. 25, 1929, in front of 61 East Goethe street. Maurice Barnett, a jeweler, and Max Krakow, a manufacturing jeweler, have also been convicted.

OPERATES WITH POCKET KNIFE TO SAVE CHILD

Altus, Okla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—An emergency operation performed with a pocket knife sharpened on the sole of the surgeon's shoe was credited today with saving the life of five year old Billy Hinson, ill with laryngeal diphtheria.

Arriving at the home of the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Hinson, the surgeon found the child near death from suffocation. Artificial respiration had been used unsuccessfully. The surgeon did not have his instruments with him, and, considering the emergency acute, he did not even take time to sterilize the knife before laying open the boy's windpipe.

Billy was breathing through a silver tube today and was recovering.

BRITAIN TAKES OVER COAL MINES IN VAST MERGER

Will Regulate Output in New Scheme.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The greatest state cartel on record has just begun to function under the control of the British government. This is virtually an amalgamation of all the coal mines in Great Britain, under the powers given by the coal mines act of 1930, and is put into effect by a proclamation published in the London Gazette.

Under this scheme the coal mining areas of Great Britain are to be organized in a number of districts, each controlled by a district committee composed of representatives of the mine owners. They will be controlled by a central body elected by the district committees.

Right to Fix Fines.

The board of owners will not have things their own way, for all schemes submitted by the mine representatives and the elected committees will require the approval of the board of trade, thus giving the government full control in the operations of mines.

It will be the duty of each district committee to determine at certain intervals—probably yearly—what the total output for the district shall be and which will be apportioned among the mines of the district. The rationing will be a proportion of the recent output of each mine.

Britain Is the Boss.

A fine of 75 cents a ton will be imposed on any mine owner who produces more than his quota and the excess will be deducted from his quota for the next period. The district committee is also empowered to fix coal prices and the fines imposed for price cutting.

The scheme is attacked by the leading British economists.

MISSING CONTRACTOR RETURNS.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Benjamin Dickerson, 45, contracting painter of Grove City, Christian county, who had been missing ten days and for whom a state-wide search was under way, returned home last night. He made no explanation to his wife. Mrs. Dickerson had feared Dickerson had met foul play.

MADDOX BOND SET AT $50,000; STAYS IN JAIL

Charged with Shooting Murder Witness.

$55,725 IN REWARDS.

Rewards totaling $55,725 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred Lingle. Of the $25,000 reward offered by The Tribune $10,000 will be paid to any person who will give confidential information identifying the slayer of Lingle. All information should be sent to the headquarters established by State's Attorney Swanson in room 503 Temple building, 77 West Washington street. Telephone State 3729.

Claude Maddox, head of the Circus gang of hoodlums, was held in $50,000 bond yesterday, charged with the shooting on Thursday of Sergt. James McBride of the Bellwood police, as the latter was riding on a Maywood street car. The attempted assassination of Sergt. McBride was seen by the authorities as a desperate effort to stop the prosecution of William J. (Three Fingered Jack) White, notorious Capone gunman, on an old murder charge.

The large bond for Maddox was fixed by Police Magistrate George F. Lee of Maywood, who at the same time continued the case until Nov. 13. In the meantime Maddox will join White and other hoodlums in the county jail.

Accused by McBride.

"I was present in the hospital when McBride signed the complaint and said that Maddox was one of the men in the car," said Magistrate Lee. "Under the circumstances I do not believe that $50,000 bail is too high."

Attorney W. W. Smith, representing Maddox protested the high bond and when he was unsuccessful asked for an early trial. Assistant State's Attorneys Harry Ditchburne, James Brown and Edward Markham said that a continuance was necessary because McBride will be in the hospital for some weeks as a result of the attempt on his life.

Guard Against Rescue Attempt.

Maddox was flanked by police as he stood before Magistrate Lee. It was announced that in view of his identification the police did not want to take any chances of his escape or attempt rescue by gunmen. Chief of Police Richard Bailey of Maywood and Chief of Police Henry Eggebrecht of Bellwood reinforced the usual police guard.

Sergt. McBride is one of the principal witnesses against White, who was convicted and sentenced to life for the murder of Policeman Edward Pfannie of Bellwood. The Supreme court reversed the conviction, however, and the state dropped the case. After the drive against hoodlums started the prosecution obtained new evidence and reinstated the charge. White has been in jail, held without bond, on orders of Chief Justice John P. McGoorty.

LAKE FREIGHTER, 25 ON BOARD, IS LONG OVERDUE

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The big coast guard cutter Seminole this afternoon began a thoroughgoing search of Lake Superior between the American mainland and Michipicoten island in an effort to locate the Canadian grain carrier Ashbay, overdue here since Wednesday.

The Ashbay, with a crew of twenty-five men, left Fort William at 7 p. m. Tuesday headed for Sault Ste. Marie. On the next night the light keeper at Michipicoten island reported seeing a steamer in distress. A search failed to reveal any boat, and it was only after it was discovered that the Ashbay was long overdue that the coast guards accepted the report from the island as probably correct.

Charges Desertion

Mrs. Marjorie Dodd Letts, 74 East Walton place, three times winner of the women's western open golf championship, filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday against Fred C. Letts, wholesale grocer. Mrs. Letts, through her attorneys, Taylor, Miller, Busch & Boyden, charges desertion.

The Letts were married Feb. 5, 1916, at Cincinnati, O., and separated, according to the bill, in September, 1928. They have no children. Mrs. Letts, who was noted both as a golf and tennis player, won the western crown in 1916, 1917 and 1920, the last time defeating Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago.

Mr. Letts has been prominent in the wholesale grocery business in Chicago and Sioux City, Ia. His wife is proprietor of women's apparel shop at 100 East Walton place.

GODDARD DENIED CHANCE TO PROVE BALLISTIC TESTS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Col. Calvin Goddard's plan to vindicate the science of ballistics by completing the gun test started during the Campbell murder trial collapsed late today when he was refused permission to retain the test pistols and bullets submitted to him.

Assistant United States Attorney W. H. Collins, prosecutor in the case, in which Herbert M. Campbell was acquitted of the murder of Miss Mary Baker, refused the request of the Northwestern university ballistics expert to be allowed to take the guns and bullets to his Chicago laboratory. Collins said that "no good purpose" would be served by the test, now that the Campbell case is closed.

Col. Goddard was called as a government witness last Tuesday to testify that a gun owned by Campbell fired the bullets extracted from Miss Baker's body. When challenged by the defense, Goddard agreed to prove the infallibility of his science by matching ten bullets fired from five guns, one of them the Campbell gun, before the jury.

Just before the case went to the jury yesterday Col. Goddard announced that he required more time to finish his studies and it was decided to proceed without his report.

18 Year Old Girl Again Sues Negro Film Actor

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Stepin' Fetchit, Negro motion picture star whose real name is Lincoln Perry, today was sued by Yvonne Butler, 18 year old queen of Central avenue, the suit being an outgrowth of the girl's former breach of promise accusations against Fetchit. In the current suit she charges the actor has not paid her the total amount of $5,000 which he promised her if she would not press an action for breach of promise in court.

COLORED GROUP RAPS NAMING OF HOCKSTEIN

Holds Appointment Is an Insult to Negroes.

A statement by the Chicago branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People signed by Dr. Herbert A. Turner, president of the local chapter, was issued yesterday. It points out the "insult to the colored people" in the mayor's appointment of Harry Hockstein, Eller lieutenant in the Twentieth ward, as deputy city sealer. The statement also points to the distribution of political handbills to colored people at their church doors and the presence of the "Uncle Tom" float in furtherance of the mayor's campaign for the Democratic senatorial nominee.

Seek Inspiration for Float.

"We would like to know the inspiration for the 'Uncle Tom' float and just what it was supposed to represent, as we could not see the relation between the float and the Lewis campaign issue. The colored people considered it a personal insult to their intelligence."

A petition was drawn by the Chicago branch asking the removal of Hockstein from public office. It refers to Hockstein as "one of a notorious band of men indicted on account of the election frauds, kidnapings, and the killing of Octavius Granady (a colored leader) in the Twentieth ward two years ago."

Reflects on City, View.

"We feel that wit hsuch a reputation as he (Hockstein) has in this community that he is unfit to hold any sort of a public office or any position which carries a salary that is to be paid out of public funds," the petition states. "We further feel that the naming of such a man to public position casts reflections upon the good name of Chicago.

"We, therefore, as citizens and voters, respectfully urge that in the name of decency that Hockstein be removed immediately and that he not be appointed to any other position in the city service."

FIRE DAMAGES FLOW FACTORY.

Dixon, Ill., Nov. 1.—[U. P.]—Fire caused by a spark from a forge caused $10,000 damage to the J. I. Case plow factory last night. Assistant Fire Chief William Michell was injured slightly when he was struck on the head by a falling plank.

NITTI, CAPONE AID, FAILS TO GIVE BOND AND STAYS IN JAIL

Frank Nitti, reputed finance minister of the Capone gang, was still in the county jail yesterday, held by the government on charges of evading income taxes, and there seemed to be no prospect of his getting out over the week-end.

Nitti was locked up on Friday in lieu of $50,000 bond, and the fact that he is the first Capone hoodlum taken into custody by the government who has been permitted to stay in jail gave rise to reports that he had broken with the gang. This view was doubted, however, by the Chicago Crime commission. Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, head of that organization, was inclined to agree with reports that Nitti's remaining in jail over the week-end was purely voluntary.

The theory was that Nitti knew that if he posted bond yesterday he would be arrested immediately and held in the detective bureau over the week-end as a vagrant. The county jail, it was pointed out, is a much more desirable place to pass the time than the detective bureau. Attorney Benjamin Epstein said he would seek Nitti's release tomorrow on a habeas corpus writ if efforts to raise the $50,000 bond were unsuccessful.

CANADA CONVICTS TWO BROKERS IN STOCKS SCANDAL

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Two brokers were convicted and another was acquitted by a jury today on two counts of conspiracy to manipulate the market price of stocks. Donald S. Paterson and Austin R. Campbell were found guilty and remanded to await sentence. Edgar MacLean was adjudged not guilty but was admitted to bail of $25,000. All three must stand trial on an additional charge of "bucketing" operations.

W. N. Tilley, special crown prosecutor, told the jury that Paterson and Campbell, officers of a joint stock company that held a seat on the Standard Stock and Mining exchange, had taken orders for about $8,000,000 worth of stock, which they failed to purchase. They operated in Toronto and Calgary, Alta.

While no dividends were paid by the company, he said, Paterson received $160,000 in salary and special allowances in 1929 and Campbell received $100,000. MacLean drew $41,800 the same year, he said.

LETTER TO SALLY IS LAST HOPE OF THIS JOB HUNTER

More Work Needed for Heads of Families.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

With his money for carfare exhausted after a long search for work, a railroad employé who had held the same job for 35 years until recently laid off, placed his last hope yesterday on a two cent stamp in an appeal to Sally Joy Brown at THE TRIBUNE.

His story was told in a neatly written letter. He has never asked for charity. For years he was a wage earner with a home, a trusted employé of the railroad. His wife is not well, but she goes out one day a week to work. There is no coal. The rent is $200 in arrears. "Please excuse me for taking this liberty of writing to you, but I see no other way, for we may freeze or starve to death," he added.

Father of Four Needs Work.

Mr. L., the father of four children, one of whom has just been discharged from a hospital, wrote Sally that he had had no work since last November. His wife worked a few months as a laundress but had to quit because of failing health. Mr. L. is a cement laborer, but says he is capable of doing many other types of work such as houseman, gardener, or any factory work or odd jobs."

Letters like that have been pouring in," explained Sally. "Here's one from Mr. H. whose wife was taken to a sanitarium as a result of worry over her husband's being out of work. He begs for a job, any kind, although he was once a foreman in a railroad roundhouse."

When Sally, whose business it is to receive job offers at her bureau and then notify the Illinois Free Employment service, 116 North Dearborn street, so the unemployed may be served as far as the jobs go around, turned to more pleasant news.

Receive Some Good Offers.

"We receive offers of some really good jobs today," said Sally. "An exclusive firm on North Michigan avenue wanted two experienced employés. These are permanent positions.

Then a man who owns a frame house and a brick house has decided to help the unemployment problem now by having both covered with stucco."

"We need so many more job offers," Sally concluded. "So many men with families need work and are willing to do most anything."

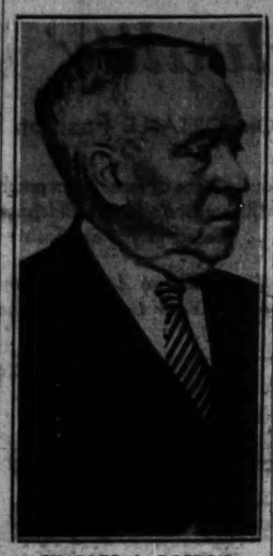
Sunday is a good time to look over your premises, Mr. Business Man. There may be a job there you hadn't thought of, work that will assure some meals for an able bodied man and his family. The job you may find, may put confidence back into the life of some one who never had to ask outside help before the present unemployment conditions.

Do you need leaves raked and burned, the screens removed, new steps on the kitchen porch, some painting done? If so, tell Sally Joy Brown at Superior 0100.

Venezuela Pilot Here on Way to Plan Long Flight

George Pocaterra, owner of a sugar cane ranch near Carcacas, Venezuela, stopped in Chicago yesterday on his way to New York, where he will finish plans for a nonstop airplane flight to his home. Mr. Pocaterra estimated that the 2,500 mile flight can be accomplished in 20 hours. On his arrival in Venezuela the rancher-flyer said he will offer to develop an air corps for his government. Pocaterra is said to be the first and only Venezuelean to obtain a pilot's license. He is staying in Chicago with C. L. Smith, 5951 Midway park.

Heads U. S. Bar



CHARLES A. BOSTON.

Charles A. Boston of New York City was yesterday elected to the presidency of the American Bar association by the executive committee of the organization at a meeting in the Chicago offices at 1140 North Dearborn street. Mr. Boston's election fills the vacancy left by the death of Josiah Marvel, which occurred a few weeks after his election at the convention of the association held in Chicago this summer.

Boston received his law degree from Johns Hopkins university in 1886 and since then has held several offices with the bar association. He has been a member of the council conference of and vice president for New York, a member of the executive committee American Bar association delegates, and is one of the three permanent members of the legal advisory board for New York. He is a well known speaker on medico-legal and ethical subjects.

URGES WET-DRY RACE TO GIVE TO GOOD FELLOWS

Church Editor Sends $25 to Launch Move.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate, a Methodist Episcopal newspaper, proposes to support the Good Fellow movement for the relief of destitute families with competitive contribution between the wets and drys of the city. Dan B. Brummitt, editor, mailed a $25 check to make the initial score: Drys, $25; wets, 0.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE," reads an article in the religious weekly, "appeals to the city's employed to come to the help of the city's unemployed this winter, since it believes, as we all do, that the next few months are likely to be months of desperate need.

"We are so often in total disagreement with THE TRIBUNE that to find ourselves in accord with what it proposes is an experience as pleasant as it is novel.

"As THE TRIBUNE says, the sufferers may be no more than a tenth of the population, so that the other nine tenths can save them from actual starvation by a relatively small sacrifice of comfort or luxury.

Suggests Relief Plan.

"Every one will have his own way of doing this; but we make bold to suggest one method which has the merit of being easy and fair, and at the same time has the possibility of large results. It is based on the one great public question about which THE TRIBUNE and The Northwestern disagree most completely.

"Let all the people who believe as we do on prohibition give to the relief of distress this winter as much money as they have given in a year to all forms of work for law enforcement and prohibition education. That is to say as much to the needy as to the Anti-Saloon league, the W. C. T. U., the Board of Temperance, etc., and other dry agencies.

"Likewise let the people who take THE TRIBUNE'S side and conduct themselves in harmony therewith give to the relief of distress as much money as they have spent this year on alcoholic liquors.

"Let the dry givers do their giving for this emergency without cutting off their contributions to the dry cause. Let the wet givers do as they please; though of course we should like to suggest that they cut out their buying of liquor, thus being out nothing net, and being likely to reap incidental benefits of considerable value.

"This proposal is made in no spirit of mockery. It points to money which both groups of givers can spare without undue hardship. The drinker can afford it, and then some. The dry can manage.

Sends Check for Fund.

"As an evidence of good faith the editor of this paper has today sent a check to THE TRIBUNE'S Good Fellow fund which equals his 1930 contributions to such dry organizations as he helps to support. If THE TRIBUNE approves the idea it certainly can find some wet reader who will match this check with one covering his 1930 outlay at his bootlegger's.

"But the plan should be worked on a bigger scale than that. This paper's circulation is about 25,000 copies weekly. Without asking any allowance because THE TRIBUNE is published seven times as often as The Northwestern, and should therefore have seven times as much influence with each reader, we will undertake to secure from our constituency one dry giver to match every wet giver in each 25,000 of THE TRIBUNE'S patrons.

Seen More from Wets.

"Obviously, THE TRIBUNE'S givers, in the total of their gifts, will far outshine ours. They are more numerous, and they will have to write bigger checks. For the average dry does not spend on dry effort more than a minor fraction of what the average wet spends with his bootlegger.

"But that's all right. We are more than willing that THE TRIBUNE'S end of the bargain shall produce for it the lion's share of the credit.

"In every way the idea seems to us a practicable one. The chief sufferers will be the bootleggers, and if their distress becomes too acute, we shall have no objection to joining in some cooperative effort for their relief also."

If the proposal proves popular THE TRIBUNE will occasionally publish the totals of Good Fellow donations labeled "wet" or "dry" by the donors.

Students Pledge Aid.

One thousand students, representing 50,000 Catholic young people of the colleges and high schools of the Chicago archdiocese yesterday pledged themselves to continue large contributions to the Chicago Catholic Charities in an effort to help the needy. The pledge was voted at the first meeting of the season of the Catholic Student conference, known as Ciscora, held at St. Catherine's high school, 5600 Washington boulevard.

NO HOOVER DAM JOBS SOON, GREEN WARNS WORKERS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—(AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, today advised workers to stay away from Hoover dam, asserting there was no prospect of employment there in the immediate future.

After receiving what he termed a detailed report on the project, the labor leader said "it will be nearly a year before a contract can be let for construction." The report, from an unnamed source, said bids for construction of the division tunnel and dam proper probably would not be called before next July.

The report in part:

"It is necessary to emphasize this in order to correct the general impression which seems to prevail that a large construction force is to be organized at once."

Halloween Pranksters Wreck This Cemetery

Kendallville, Ind., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Halloween pranksters wrecked half of Corunna cemetery, eight miles east of here, early this morning, upsetting over a hundred monuments and doing damage estimated at $5,000. Before leaving they set fire to a tool shed. Monuments weighing one to two tons were wrecked and the cemetery looked today as though it had been struck by a cyclone. Floyd Rynearson, nearby farmer, saw the flames from the tool shed, but thought merrymakers were burning corn shocks and did not investigate until today. The cemetery association offered a reward for clews.

ACCUSE COUPLE OF BLACKMAIL IN EVANSTON

Mr. and Mrs. William Hart, 200 Farwell avenue, Evanston, were arraigned yesterday before Police Magistrate Harry H. Porter of Evanston on charges that they attempted to blackmail John Mills, 878 Cherry street, Winnetka, a contractor.

According to Mills, Mrs. Hart, whom he knew two years ago, invited him to her home on Friday and informed him she expected to become a mother and that he was the father-to-be. Mills protested, he testified, but Mrs. Hart's husband seized him, according to the charge, and warned him that unless the matter were adjusted with money the authorities would be notified.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart appeared in court on technical charges of disorderly conduct filed at the recommendation of Mills' attorney, Lloyd Faxon. Magistrate Porter set bonds for the couple at $500 each and continued their case until Nov. 8. Both furnished bail.

BANKER FOREMAN IS 67; HE SEES BETTER TIMES

Thinks Trade Is Making Gradual Gains.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Oscar G. Foreman, chairman of the executive committee of the Foreman-State National bank and the Foreman-State Trust and Savings bank, which, with subsidiary organizations, control the destinies of about $250,000,000, toiled yesterday as if he had not a care in the world.

It was his 67th birthday, marking half a century for him in the banking business, and he said he enjoyed life and his work as much as ever. There was a white carnation in the button hole of his dark sack suit when he arrived at the bank about 9 o'clock. Instead of working as usual, he spent the morning in receiving congratulations, passing out cigars, and chatting with friends who dropped in at his luxurious offices in the new bank building at La Salle and Washington streets, one of the sights of the financial section.

A short, stocky and well proportioned figure, his cheeks red with outdoor exercise, his smile and chuckle and snapping blue eyes are not only eloquent of physical health but of a cheerful mental outlook upon the world of business.

At His Office Before 9.

He is at his office before 9 o'clock every morning and works until about 4 o'clock. He is active in details as he has been for many years. In preparation for his day he takes a half hour walk each morning along the lake front near his winter home in the Drake hotel. During the season he plays golf frequently. He believes in hard work and concentration, and also in vacations and play.

"I enjoy my work as much as ever," he said.

"You do not look worried about any business depression," it was suggested to him. "What is your opinion of the general situation?"

"I have been in the banking business for 50 years," he said, "and I have seen many ups and downs in business and industry in this country. In 1893, you will recall, we had money at a premium and in 1907 we had to use clearing house scrip for money. There is nothing like that now. There is plenty of money. The thing that is lacking now is confidence.

Sees Business Mending.

"The mental condition, the psychology of the people, has a good deal to do with this situation. I really feel that things are mending, slowly but surely, and on a sound basis. Sometimes troublous times come upon us before we realize it, and in the same way we begin to come out of it before we know it.

"We are now catching up with overproduction. People have been in an economical frame of mind, which is good in its way. They have been slow to buy. They have put off, for instance, getting a new pair of shoes, saying they would wear the old ones a little longer. But such economy has an end. It is true, is it not, that in time the shoes wear out and they are forced to buy new ones? That is what is happening, or going to happen."

He paused and impressed upon the writer that as a banker he had to be careful of what he was represented as saying, that he spoke seldom and usually wrote down what he wished to appear.

A Conservative Optimist.

"Is it correct to represent you, then, as a conservative optimist?" he was asked.

"That is it, exactly."

"Chicago is all right," he continued. "It's future is great and sound. Year by year it becomes more and more the great industrial and commercial center of the country."

Mr. Foreman was born in Chicago, went to public schools here and at the age of 17 began his career as a messenger in the National Bank of Illinois. Three years later he entered the private banking house of his father, the late Gerhard Foreman, who retired in 1885 after transferring his business to his sons. The Foreman Brothers Banking company was organized in 1897 and Mr. Foreman was vice president of this until 1915, when he was made president. In 1921 he became chairman of the board of directors. When the bank was merged with the State bank in July, 1929, he was chosen head of the executive committee. He has been president of the Illinois Bankers' association, the Chicago Bankers' club, and the Chicago Clearing House association.

ROTARY REVEALS CHEST FUND AID TO 4 PROJECTS

First Public Report in Seven Years.

For the first time in seven years the Rotary club of Chicago yesterday issued a statement outside the confines of its own membership concerning the work accomplished through the chest fund of that organization, which is dependent on voluntary gifts from the membership. More than $50,000 has been collected through this agency since its inception in 1923, Rowland Haynes, president of the club, reported.

Four projects have been supported and promoted through the annual chest fund collection. Work on behalf of crippled children, boys' work, care of the sick and emergency relief constituted the interests that were administered through the fund, of which John B. Reynolds is chairman. Dr. H. P. Thomas has directed the crippled children activities, B. O. Jones the "sunshine committee," and William H. Crow the boys' work committee.

Survey of Crippled Children.

"Working closely with the University of Chicago and the public schools," the report stated, "the crippled children committee financed a survey of the needs of such children in Cook county. For several years this survey has been made the basis on which new schools for the crippled child have been located in Chicago by the board of education. There have been inquiries from all over the world for copies of this survey.

"From year to year, individual members of this committee have been divided into groups which have worked with the existing agencies, such as the Spalding school, the Jahn school and others, in assistance for crippled children where needed. Medical members of our club have also assisted in clinical work and the promotion or study of local legislation needed from time to time.

"In 1929 and 1930 the committee paid for and directed the making of 1,000 feet of film giving the history and accomplishments of the work in Chicago. Other Rotary clubs have requested that it be shown at their meetings.

Work Among Boys Told.

"Until 1923 annual accomplishment in boys' work was sporadic, for the most part consisting of contributions to the Chicago Boys' Week federation, set up and incorporated by the Rotary club of Chicago in 1923 under the presidency of George W. Dixon, who has remained as president ever since.

"When our fund was started, four boys were selected from Chicago public schools to go to the University of Illinois school of agriculture. After one year's study, one boy was selected to continue the remaining three years—an outright gift to him of more than $4,000 which the boy, Francis Embrey, has volunteered to pay back. From 1927 to date the committee has had 14 student loan boys in various universities, eleven of whom remain in Chicago, while $30,000 have been expended in student loans to date.

Boys Pay Back Money.

"A provision of this arrangement was that no loan should exceed $300 over and above fixed expenses for a given year. At the end of five years the boy begins to pay back the amount loaned, with interest.

"Members of the club have been visited during times of sickness and flowers and radios provided in hospital wards by the sunshine committee. Through the emergency relief department aid has been given in such catastrophies as the Japanese earthquake, Mississippi flood and the Florida hurricane."

$50,000 FIRE AT FORTVILLE.

Fortville, Ind., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Fire today caused an estimated loss of $50,000 to the W. T. Williams Dry Goods company and the Fortville State bank.

NEW YORK FINDS 36,833 FAMILY HEADS JOBLESS

Food and Clothing Soon to Be Distributed.

New York, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Heads of families or main supporters of families, who are without work in New York City today total 36,833, it was announced today by Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney, who said that the figures represented the final total of the police census of unemployment which began Oct. 23 and ended Friday night.

Commissioner Mulrooney explained that the census tabulation has been rechecked since the work started. Many who were originally out of work have since found jobs and their names have been dropped from the lists. Persons out of work who have no dependents and who are only seeking to support themselves are not included in the census.

Indications tonight were that distribution of food and clothing from police stations in the various precincts would begin about next Friday, according to the commissioner. He said this would allow time to go over the questionnaires colected by the police, to tabulate the needs of various families as to the size and ages of children, the supplies needed and money required for arrears in rent.

Three Football Fans Die in Crash on Way to Game

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 1.—[U. P.]—Three football fans, en route to the Kentucky-Alabama football game here, were killed last night when their automobile struck another machine, skidded, crashed into a moving van, and burst into flames.

The victims were Endell Smith, 26; Hagan Smith, 54, and Crit Waldon, 25, all of Hindman, Ky. Two others, W. R. Smith and J. Stamper, also of Hindman, were injured.

The five were removed from the wrecked machine before the flames reached them.

ROOSEVELT AGAINST PROPOSED INCREASE OF RAILWAY FARES

New York, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt expressed his disapproval today of the New York Central lines' proposed 40 per cent increase in its commutation rates. He wrote Milo R. Maltbie, chairman of the public service commission, to whom the new tariffs will be submitted as soon as completed, that it was not the time to increase rates and add that much of a burden to the living expenses of approximately 40,000 suburban commuters.

"I have received several protests from residents of Westchester county relative to the increase of commutation railroad rates for which application has been made by the railroad," wrote Gov. Roosevelt. "I urge upon you that this application receive the public service commission's most earnest attention and searching inquiry.

"You, of course, realize that this seems hardly the appropriate time to increase rates and make living expenses of suburban dwellers higher than before."

8 PHILADELPHIA POLICE CAPTAINS TAKE DEMOTIONS

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Eight police captains and one inspector were demoted today by Maj. Lemuel B. Schofield, director of public safety, in one of the most sensational shakeups of the Philadelphia police force since the special grand jury investigation took its heavy toll two year ago. This is a total of ten captains "broken" since Wednsday.

Six of the district commanders, of whom there are forty-three on the force, were reduced to sergeants and two to patrolmen. Inspector William McCaughan was relieved of command of the central police division and sent to the office of the superintendent of police.

Director Schofield, in an address announcing the changes, said bluntly that most of those demoted had been thus disciplined because they were sergeants, and good ones—and that was all. The others, he said, "know why they were demoted."

THE CANDIDATES FOR THE SENATE.

James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat; Mrs. Lottie O'Neill, independent, and Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican, are the three candidates for the United States senate now receiving the consideration of the voters. There are some other candidates, but it does them no injustice and their prospects no injury to leave them out of the present discussion.

Mrs. O'Neill is a Republican member of the state legislature who became a candidate for the senate as an independent after the Republican state convention had declared that the party would accept the result of the referendum on the three prohibition questions submitted at the election. One is for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, one for the modification of the Volstead act, and one for the repeal of the state prohibition law.

Mrs. O'Neill is an extreme dry and hers is a spite candidacy promoted and supported by the Anti-Saloon league in line with its policy of ruling the Republican party or trying to ruin it. This is the object of Mrs. O'Neill and the league in the present campaign, and the candidacy was not undertaken until the party had announced that it would be responsive to the expressed will of the voters on prohibition.

Mr. Lewis, former United States senator, is opposed to prohibition. He is a wet without exceptions. He condemns the amendment and the enforcement act, deplores the conditions they have produced and the doctrines they uphold, and is pledged to opposition in the senate. In his term in the senate Mr. Lewis was a democratic leader in support of President Wilson's policies and doctrines. He subscribed to that President's theories of internationalism.

Mrs. McCormick, the Republican candidate, is a dry, but she has given certain pledges to abide by the vote in the referendum on prohibition. These pledges brought Mrs. O'Neill and the Anti-Saloon league into the campaign against her. The resolution of the Republican convention stated: "The Republican state convention, adhering to the doctrine of majority rule, pledges its representatives in the congress of the United States to vote consistently to carry out fully the expressed will of the people of their districts at the referendum on these questions of public policy in the election of Nov. 4, 1930."

Mrs. McCormick at the convention said: "I heartily approve my party's declaration that it will be responsive to the expression on these referendum questions. So far as I am concerned, I shall, as senator, accept such a majority expression as a mandate from the people whom I shall represent in Washington."

Mrs. McCormick further said that she favored an enforcement of the Volstead law which would respect as inviolable all constitutional and legal rights of the people, but that a modification of the act to obtain her vote would have to be consistent with the eighteenth amendment.

With regard to prohibition THE TRIBUNE does not regard Mrs. McCormick's position as satisfactory as that of Mr. Lewis. He is logically and consistently opposed to the amendment and its enforcement act. In this his candidacy is clean cut and definite. He offers himself for a decision upon this issue without reservations and it is understood that, if he were elected to the senate, federal prohibition in all its aspects would have another vote there against it, a vote against the five and ten law, against further encroachments upon rights and privileges, for repeal of any or all laws essential or incidental to prohibition. For people who regard prohibition as the only issue in the election Mr. Lewis is the preferred candidate.

In other respects THE TRIBUNE does not find him as well qualified as his Republican opponent. Mrs. McCormick is as definitely opposed to the Wilson internationalism as Mr. Lewis is to prohibition. She adheres to the same principles which made the late Senator Medill McCormick, her husband, a leading opponent of Mr. Wilson and his doctrines after the war, the opposition which kept the United States out of the league of nations and preserved for it such independence as it has now. In defeating Senator Deneen for the Republican nomination she emphasized these considerations and has done so through the present campaign.

She represents an element in the Republican party which proves its majorities in elections only to find itself neglected later in the government which the election creates. She believes in the pursuit of American benefits and the service of American needs, a type of representative useful to national interests and opposed to alien influences.

Mayor Thompson has entered the campaign in support of Mr. Lewis. During the primary campaign it was assumed that Mrs. McCormick had Thompson support and it was further assumed that she was in agreement with him. This was used as a reproach, in spite of the candidate's denial. It is apparent now that whatever city hall votes were given her in the primaries were cast against Senator Deneen rather than for her. Thompson has sent circulars to Negro voters asking their votes for Mr. Lewis and he says that he has been hostile to Mrs. McCormick since the Republican national convention of 1928, a period which includes all her active candidacy for the senate.

The odium of Thompson gang support attaches to the Democratic candidacy, and whatever implications are inherent in that involve Mr. Lewis. It is apparent from the words and acts of Thompson himself that the taint of association with him in any fashion is not on Mrs. McCormick's candidacy but upon Mr. Lewis'. That clears the situation to the satisfaction of her supporters and leaves the inferences and explanations elsewhere.

Aside from the prohibition issue THE TRIBUNE would regard Mrs. McCormick as the best qualified candidate Illinois could send to the senate at this time. She is an intelligent exponent of American doctrines in times when they need strengthening. She is experienced in congressional procedure and competent to represent the state. Upon prohibition the state has her word that she will accept the results of the referendum.

FOR CONGRESS AND THE LEGISLATURE.

Certain recommendations for the election of congressmen and of members of the legislature will be found today in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE. The legislative recommendations are based upon those of the Legislative Voters' league, which keeps the record of members of the assembly and studies the qualifications of new candidates, with alterations in some districts where THE TRIBUNE thinks the league gave less weight to some considerations than they deserve. It should be unnecessary to remind the voters of the importance of this part of the election. It concerns the base of representative government, the delegation of law making authority from many citizens to several. Interested voters will familiarise themselves with these dependable recommendations and will be prepared for the polls.

JUDICIAL SELECTION.

"A poor judge is perhaps the most wasteful indulgence of the community. You can refuse to patronize a merchant who does not carry a good stock, but you have no recourse if you are haled before a judge whose mental or moral goods are inferior. Good intention is no substitute for adequate knowledge."

The quotation is from the chief justice of the United States, and it touches in homely but effective phrase a very important problem of our democratic experiment. We are hearing much these days of law enforcement, of the weaknesses of the administration of justice, of procedural reform, and a great deal of good spade work is being done in this field. But it seems to us that there is too little candid discussion of practicable reform in the method of selecting judicial timber. It is a delicate subject, in which criticism of present methods may seem necessarily to imply criticism of the judicial personnel without discrimination between the competent and highly qualified judge and the inferior. But there would be pretty general agreement at the bar that the level of judicial ability and even the level of judicial character should be raised in many states and that it is not likely to be raised save by devising better means of selection. The simple method, adopted in so many of the states, in the reaction from federalism, of throwing judicial office into the general pool of democratic politics has not worked well. Appointment by the executive is not acceptable to the popular theory of control. In both there are dangers, but they are not the only alternatives. We think a middle ground is worth exploring. Perhaps a system under which the bench and bar would present a list of approved candidates from which the voters could elect at first for a term of years and later for life might produce better results. But in such case the local bars would have to take their responsibilities more seriously than they have in existing circumstances.

At any rate the subject deserves the serious study of the legal profession in the United States.

COLLECTORS' FEVER.

[New York Evening Post.]

In the typical American rush for acquiring collections—of what it does not seem very much to matter—the enthusiasts of Americana are now descending en masse upon the erstwhile despised knickknacks and objets d'art of our counterpart of the Victorian era. The label of antique has been placed upon articles which had their first popularity no earlier than the middle of the last century and it will not now be long before attics and storerooms will be scoured for treasures of the 1890s, just as New England farmhouses have been ransacked for furniture, glassware, china and everything else which dates from the previous century.

An article in the Mentor-World Traveler shows how far this rage for "the odds and ends of yesterday" has already gone. The vogue for Currier & Ives prints is past its prime and the hungry collector, we are told, is now on the trail of Gibson Girls, Remington prints and the woodcut illustrations of the old Leslie's and Harper's Weekly. Old shaving mugs already are in a class for the wealthy collector only and the field is spreading to antimacassars, cup plates, bone trays and whisky flasks. The old corner whatnots have come into their own again and china dogs, glass swans, conch shells, wax flowers and glass paper weights are being rescued from the oblivion into which they had sunk.

For the impecunious collector, however, it is already too late to start gathering these rather sad mementoes of yesterday. If they are of the right kind, cup plates are known to bring as high as $200 apiece, a glass paper weight from Sandwich has been priced at $450, a china dog was recently sold at an auction for $95. For the improvident the only program for collecting is to start with the present and then wait patiently for the few years which will inevitably bring to his collection the value of rarity if not of antiquity. Let him select whatever he will and time will soon bring him his reward. It is impracticable to choose so large an object as a piano, as one enthusiast discovered to his grief, but let it be anything small and the fad, once started, will bring in its train fame and wealth to the first man in the field.

It is not necessary to make the best of mouse traps to cause the world to beat a pathway to your door; all one need do is to start a collection of them.

AMERICAN HEROES

JACKSON AT NEW ORLEANS

A Brief Review of His Contribution to Our Country.

(The articles of which the following is the twenty-fourth are intended as five minute sketches of early Americans of particular achievement and distinction, each flashed briefly against the background of the times and conditions in which the subject made his contribution to the nation. Their names may be well or may be little known now to the generation which has inherited the benefits of wise, laborious, and in many instances heroic work.)

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

INDIVIDUAL character easily may be the decisive factor in a critical event of war. Hull surrendered Detroit because he was infirm, ailing, and irresolute. The steadiness of the militiamen in the redoubt at Bunker Hill largely was due to Prescott, who was indomitable and intended to fight. Stark had the same effect upon the men along the rail fence. Winder at Bladensburg was as uncertain as any of his green militia and disappeared from the scene as rapidly as any of them, but if Joshua Barney had had four thousand instead of four hundred sailors he probably would have saved Washington from capture.

Chauncey on Lake Ontario was a cautious commodore; Perry on Lake Erie was bold. Erie was made American water by one fight. Ontario remained open water and in doubt throughout the war. Brown and Scott made soldiers for Chippewa, Lundy's Lane, and Fort Erie out of the same material which had proved hopeless at Chrysler's Farm.

These are not instances of genius in tactics or strategy, but of character transmuting a mass of men from one metal to another. Andrew Jackson had it superlatively—this quality which compels success from material, circumstances, and men—and it was never more in evidence than at New Orleans.

The British attempt at this city was a part of the plan, put in operation early in 1814, of harassing the American coast from the Chesapeake south, destroying property and taking cities to make the people more tired of the war than they were, to protect Canada by diverting attention elsewhere, and to punish communities rather than to seize and occupy territory. The earlier operations had succeeded against Washington, but had failed at Baltimore. They were renewed late in the year from the Jamaica naval base with reinforcements from Wellington's Peninsular army and with a powerful naval support. The objective was New Orleans. The defense was in the hands of Jackson, major general in command of the district. The invaders were truly formidable and in spite of some natural obstacles could reasonably count upon success and the taking of an interesting and wealthy city.

The citizens heard that the British officers' toast was to "Beauty and Booty," and were not fully reassured by Jackson's promise that not a grenadier would put his foot within the city precincts. Nor was the government at Washington satisfied that Jackson could stop the enemy. Admittedly he was making poor use of the time he had to put the city in defense, partly because he was preoccupied with the idea that the British objective was Mobile and not New Orleans. Furthermore, when it was certain that he was wrong in this he was completely outguessed as to the avenue of approach. It became apparent that the British would not attempt to work the fleet up the hundred miles of river, reducing or running the forts, but Jackson looked for an approach through the lake system to land to the north of the city. When he learned that the landing had been made below, through Lake Borgne, his troops were widely dispersed.

The British were within seven miles of the city before Jackson learned where they were. New Orleans had its Paul Revere in Villere, a planter who was captured with his household, but who was able to escape, avoid pursuit, and carry the news that the enemy was almost upon the city.

Up until now there had been nothing reassuring in Jackson's handling of the situation, but now it was where his preeminent qualities could be brought to bear. With a masterly rapidity he gathered his odd assortments of troops. Carroll's brigade of Tennesseans and part of Coffey's mounted brigade, Mississippi and New Orleans volunteers, two regiments of regular infantry and some artillery, some Choctaw Indians, colored volunteers, and a valuable outfit from the Barataria smugglers, who were eager to make their peace with law and who proved to be highly competent artillerymen.

The British were close to the city, but their position was not comfortable or advantageous. They were on the opposite side of the river and on a narrow neck of passable ground between the river and swamps. It was found later that maneuvering was out of the question.

The popular idea of the battle of New Orleans is that American riflemen met the charge of the regiments behind cotton bales and in a brief action nearly exterminated them. There were four separate actions in an operation extending from Dec. 23 to Jan. 8, and the first was a night attack by Jackson on the British position on the levee. It was characteristic of him that he attacked and did not wait to resist behind lines. He sent Coffee to work through the swamps to the British right and rear, with the war schooner Carolina on the British left to harass it with its cannonades. He attacked in front. In the dark it became an utterly confused struggle, but the fight was carried to the enemy determinedly and, although the attack did not meet Jackson's expectations, it served as a check. In the morning the American lines were begun, resting upon the river and the swamps and presenting a defense which required taking by direct assault.

The British, having felt the mettle of their opponents in the night attack, could know that this was not to be Washington repeated, but they had no reason to doubt their ability to force through the opposition. They were veteran troops led by distinguished generals, chief being Sir Edward Pakenham, Wellington's brother-in-law. The full force had not received Jackson's night attack, but the other regiments were up the following day. The troops found their position uncomfortable, the weather being inclement, and the Carolina's guns were a constant annoyance, but nevertheless British prospects were bright. Guns were placed to destroy the schooner and the crew was forced to abandon it. A sister ship, the Louisiana, was hauled out of range.

On Dec. 28 Pakenham decided upon an advance in force to test out the American lines and in about three miles came in contact with Jackson's defenses and under the Louisiana's fire. He then withdrew his troops and prepared to breach the American lines with artillery. Great labor was required to bring up the guns and Jackson had time to strengthen his batteries. On Jan. 1, 1815, the artillery duel began and the real astonishment of the battle was in the result. The American guns, although at a disadvantage, were so served as to put the British completely out of action. After four hours of fighting the British batteries were deserted, to the mortification of the British officers, who had to bear the taunts of the navy upon no signal a disaster to the artillery service.

The grand assault was ordered Jan. 8, with a diversion across the river. The results are familiar to the schoolboy. The British attacking regiments were almost exterminated and the reserves suffered so badly that, in spite of the success of the attack on the city side of the river, the campaign against New Orleans came to a bitter end, the expedition demoralized, its regiments cut to pieces, and the survivors suffering from extraordinary hardships. Its withdrawal was without alternative.

The defense of New Orleans was by a fighting general whose purpose did not admit a doubt in his own mind. His spirit became that of his oddly composed army. New Orleans could not be taken because Jackson could not be beaten.

BATH ITCH PREVENTIVE.

FOR the very great discomfort of that minor malady, bath itch, Dr. Taulmin Gaines has a remedy, or, to speak more accurately, a preventive. It consists in a developed art of taking a bath. However one begins, the bath should be ended after the following fashion:

Run hot water into the tub. It should be at 108 degrees, but the figure is unimportant enough to permit guessing. The water should be hot, but short of scalding, and there should be enough of it to comfortably submerge the body. The person stands in the water and washes his feet and extremities. Then he lies down in the water with his body completely submerged. This exposure is endured long enough to get up a good sweat. Then he emerges quickly and stands in the tub while the head, arms, body, and upper legs are quickly dried with a soft towel and with no rubbing. He then steps from the tub and quickly completes the drying process while in the warm bathroom. The next step is to don warm clothing and to drink a glass, or several glasses, of water or lemonade, cold or warm, or a cup of warm coffee or tea.

The hot water, meanwhile, is left in the tub in order that the air of the room may be kept warm and humid. Drafts of cool air are not permitted.

The theory upon which Dr. Gaines' theory is based is that there is a relationship between sweating and comfort of the skin, on the one hand, and between dry, cold skin and itching, on the other. If the bath ends in a sweat, and this sweating is kept up for a few minutes, there will be no itching.

The method is worth trying as a means of treatment of winter itch. If the philosophy on which the Gaines plan is based is the correct one, a similar treatment should help with the other disorders.

TUMORS AND OPERATIONS

G. F. writes:

1. When is the time to operate on a tumor?
2. What causes a tumor?
3. Are they dangerous?

REPLY.

1. If the tumor is a cancer, it should be operated on at once if at all. If it is a benign tumor, whether there is to be an operation and when depends upon the trouble the tumor is causing.
2. Nobody knows.
3. Some are very dangerous. Some are slightly so. Some are almost without danger.

HAVE AN EXAMINATION.

N. M. writes: My sister has a mania for counting everything. She will sit and repeatedly count the articles in each room. She complains of the back of her neck. While she used to have a very sunny disposition, she is now very morose. Her reflexes don't jerk at all.

Is there anything that can be done for this form of insanity, or is it a form of dementia precox?

REPLY.

This may be nothing more than a habit. It may be of no consequence or it may be a symptom of mental disturbance. Let your physician decide what it means.

KIDNEY STONES.

H. writes: I am troubled with kidney stones. I live in the country, where distilled water is hard to get.

REPLY.

Drink rain water. Use a teakettle for a still. However, eating is more important. The proper diet depends on the chemistry of the stone.

WARM VINEGAR FOR NITS.

K. B. M. writes: What can be used to remove nits from the hair? The parents are all dead but the evidence is there. I have used coal oil overnight and also larkspur.

REPLY.

Warm vinegar is the best all remover.

INSUFFICIENT HEAT.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you please advise through the medium of your paper what the Fahrenheit temperature should be at 6:30 a. m. and 7 a. m., especially when there is a baby in the house? We live in a four room steam heated flat.

M. H.

Section 2119 of the city code, as amended Dec. 1, 1925, requires every person controlling the heating plant of any tenement house in which the heat is furnished from a plant used in common to furnish heat from Oct. 1 to June 1 so that the occupants may secure, without such restriction of ventilation as to interfere with sanitary conditions, a minimum temperature of 60 degrees at 6:30 a. m., 65 degrees at 7:30 a. m., 68 degrees at 8:30 a. m., and thereafter until 10:30 p. m., provided that notice by registered mail shall be given before any person shall be deemed to have violated this section. Since it may be difficult to prove sufficient facts to defend an action for rent in case you move out, we advise you first to report violations to the commissioner of health, city hall, and to exhaust the possibility of getting relief by formal notice to the landlord.

WEEKLY COLLECTION.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—[Friend of the People.]—Would you please tell me when we will have regular garbage collection? We live in a new neighborhood, but it is quite well built up. We have a receptacle for garbage but have not used same because we have not had any collections.

G. H.

Report is made to this office that the service on garbage in this vicinity is once every seven days.

DOES NOT GIVE JOINT CONTROL.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If a security company signs a bond for or with an administrator of an estate, does that make said company in joint control with the administrator? 2. Is it necessary for an administrator to have a security company sign the bond with him when said administrator has property amounting to more than the bond?

E. E. B.

1. The act of signing the bond does not give them joint control, but they often stipulate for joint control as a condition for consenting to sign the bond.
2. The administrator's own property does not help; but if he can get a real estate owner to sign as surety, then he will not need a surety company.

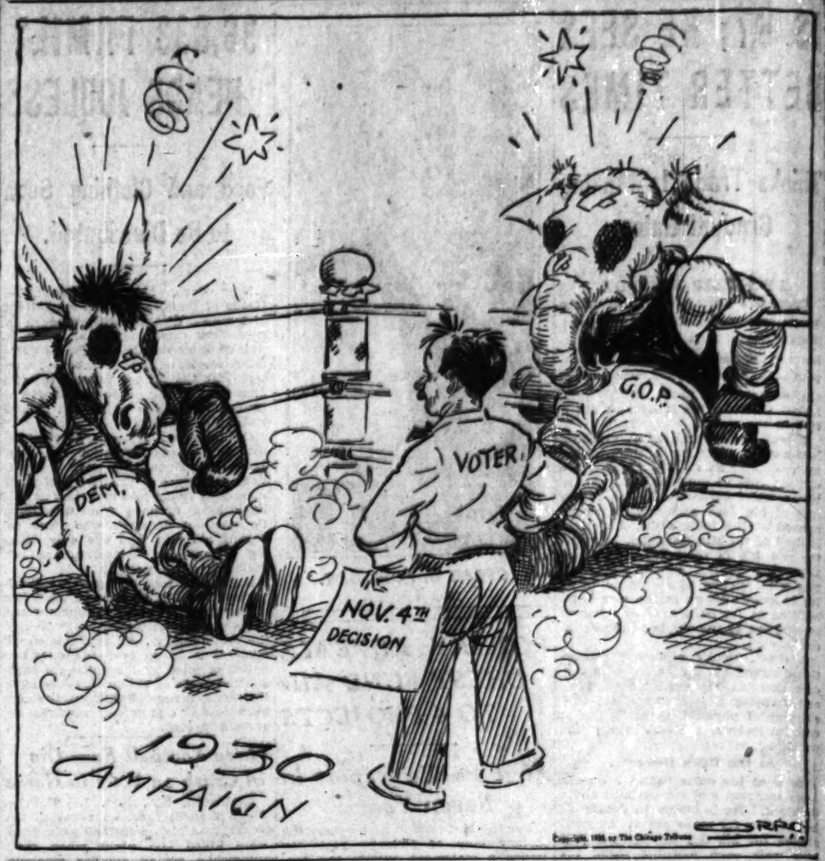
AWAITING THE REFEREE'S DECISION



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 2, 1914.

LONDON.—Dispatches to the Daily Mail from northern France report continuous success of the allies, who have reached Leffinghe, four miles from Ostend. Reports persist that the Germans have left Ostend.

LONDON.—Turkey has definitely thrown its lot with Germany and Austria. While no formal declaration of war has been sent the allies, it was learned here that Turkey has sent 2,000 Bedouins, who have been on the Egyptian border, across the frontier. In addition, the sultan has massed 400,000 of his troops on the Caucasian border and 30,000 are at Beirut, Jaffa, and other ports.

CHICAGO.—"The war in Europe will drag along for two or three years. This seems to be the feeling abroad." This is the statement of John T. McCutcheon, cartoonist and war correspondent for THE TRIBUNE, who returned to Chicago yesterday. Mr. McCutcheon was the guest of the general staff of the German army. He flew over the battle lines in a biplane with a German army aviator, something no other war correspondent has achieved. He talked with members of the general staff of the German army and obtained their views. As the guest of Lord Roberts at Ascot, he obtained the opinions of British army officers and officials. "It seems to be the general opinion that the war will be of long duration," he said.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 2, 1880.

CHICAGO.—Gambling in many forms is wide open on the west side. Poolrooms, crap games, poker rooms, and slot machines are being operated in defiance of the law and in plain view of policemen patrolling their beats. The Democratic city administration, anxious to secure the saloon vote next Tuesday, has granted saloonkeepers and gamblers privileges which heretofore have been refused.

CHICAGO.—A gift of $50,000 by Dr. Nicholas Senn to the Rush Medical college, announced at a meeting of the trustees of the institution at Kingsley's, insures the beginning of a building project which will give the college what is planned to be the finest and best equipped structure for medical education in the west.

CHICAGO.—Applauded by thousands of admirers, William Jennings Bryan, Democratic candidate for the presidency, inaugurated in Chicago the last stand of his campaign. He spoke in nine places during the day, and will make a dozen more speeches today.

NEW YORK.—Charles F. Jones, valet of William Marsh Rice, the aged Texas millionaire whose mysterious death recently has been the subject of police investigation, tried to end his life in the Tombs prison by stabbing himself with a penknife. He made a confession in which he charges that Attorney Albert T. Patrick gave Rice tablets shortly before he died and that just before his death Patrick was standing over the old man holding a towel against his face.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 2, 1880.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—J. M. Studebaker, vice president of the Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing company, who has always been outspoken for the Democratic party, announced that he would cast his first Republican vote for Garfield and Arthur tomorrow. This makes the Studebaker brothers—five of them—solid for Republican progress.

NEW YORK.—Ulysses Simpson Grant Jr., son of ex-President Grant, and Miss Fanny J. Chaffee, daughter of ex-Senator Jerome B. Chaffee of Colorado, were married at the home of the bride's father, 24 West 55th street. This disposes of all unjust rumors which have come from San Francisco as to the relations between Young Mr. Grant and a young California belle. At the wedding there were no bridesmaids or groomsmen, and with the exception of two or three friends of ex-Senator Chaffee all of the guests were the immediate relatives of the Grant family. They included Gen. and Mrs. Grant, Col. and Mrs. Fred Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse R. Grant, and Mr. and Mrs. Honore of Chicago.

BREAD.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—In a recent issue of THE TRIBUNE reference was made to the present low price of wheat flour. It was also stated that the bakers hoped for or expected an increased consumption of bread. The bakers complain that the public does not consume as much white bread as in former years. They blame the dieting craze for the slump; they offer various other alleged reasons and causes to explain their predicament.

The real cause may be found in our changing appetites due to the quality of bread which is the daily output of the American bakeries. Bread "like mother used to make" is not produced by the modern bake shops, not because they can't, but because they won't.

The whole secret of the downward curve in the statistics of consumption is in the loaf itself. The modern loaf is made of a spongy dough which is designed to "raise and bake" in the mechanical oven in about twenty minutes, or about two or three times as fast as the old fashioned loaf can be produced. Uncle Sam insists upon real bread of old fashioned home made quality for his soldiers. The army bake shops "roll their own." It's good bread, but it can't be baked in twenty minutes.

Our foreign population here still demands real bread and gets it. You can buy real bread in Chicago if you go to the ghetto district and certain other places where bread is bread. If the master bakers will produce better bread they will increase consumption and the farmers will share in the profit of a greater demand for wheat.

ON PUBLIC PROPERTY.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—As I was waiting for my street car this evening I was surprised to see a big sign nailed on the new county jail on 26th street facing California avenue. The big sign read, "Meyering for Sheriff." I would like to know since when are the Democrats taking special privilege by nailing their signs on the county jail? The party or parties that defaced that building by nailing that sign ought to be put in jail to teach them a lesson not to deface any city, county or state buildings.

DEAD BIRDS IN THE SMOKIE.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Yesterday a friend brought to me three dead songbirds which had been picked up on the Skokie marshes. Two of these were warblers and the other a wood thrush. I am informed that there are hundreds of birds like these that have been poisoned by the formaldehyde and oil mixtures which have been used in the marshes to kill mosquito larvae. This fall the matter seems to have become serious. Mosquitoes we do not want, but we cannot afford to lose our birds, for economic reasons if for no other. What's to be done about it? I am wondering if some of our chemical wise men can't solve the problem.

DEFINING A DRUNKARD.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Once upon a time I was told that when a man had no food, lost his home, his wife and children poorly dressed, no coal in his flat, no money to pay his rent, etc., he was a drunkard.

Well, today I must be a drunkard, on a long, long spree.

THE GENESIS OF CRIME.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—What makes crime? Here is one true story, so draw your own conclusions:

A bad boy of the neighborhood in the general talk to the half way decent boys explained that he had no fear of St. Charles boys' school, as in there he got better food, clothing, shelter, and treatment than ever he got at home. I just wonder if a few good spankings would help to make this school at St. Charles a less pleasant place to live for the criminal minded boy.

Needless to say, this bad boy naturally took a kind of leadership among the boys and his glowing pictures of the benefits of the so-called reform school were not lost on his listeners, much to the detriment of the law abiding citizens.

Later on this boy was sent up for the murder of a shopkeeper at 46th and Calumet avenue. G. M. GRIDLEY.

THE PALESTINIAN POLICY.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—The atrocities committed in the attempts of the great powers of the world to maintain or increase their security are common throughout history. A world pollie whose values are based on the extent to which one nation can control and exploit another has long ago given justification to these "necessary measures" carried out in the name of "self-protection." It remained, however, for this "enlightened" era to witness the crowning travesty of them all in the policy that Great Britain has adopted toward the Palestinian mandate.

The price of averting the possibility of the disintegration of an empire that has long ago passed its zenith is to be the brutal disillusioning of sixteen millions of Jews whose every effort in Palestine has been prompted by promises which Great Britain formally made, and which the entire world witnessed. To placate a semi-barbarous people who, despite themselves, have been the recipients of many benefits from Jewish activity in Palestine, Great Britain finds it necessary to repudiate a most solemn obligation. Security at the price of self-respect!

It is barely fifteen years since this empire entered a long and costly war to oppose a policy that considered its international agreement a mere "scrap of paper." It is now convenient for her to relegate one of her promises to the status of a mere "scrap of paper." Would that she might receive the same treatment with which she greeted a similar pronouncement in 1914. L. M.

JUST ANOTHER TAX.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Under the present state administration a gasoline tax has been imposed, specifically for the purpose of building new roads. The state license fee which, up to the time of the gasoline tax, should have been used for building new roads is still being collected. Therefore, the gasoline tax is just another tax. In view of the above example we are asked to vote for an amendment to the state constitution giving the taxing bodies broader taxing powers in the hope that they will pass a just income tax law and distribute the tax load fairly. We are also to assume that the present real estate taxes will be cut and placed at their proper levels. We also laugh and laugh.

Jobless Registration Saturday.

Lewis E. Myers, president of the board of education, announced yesterday that the 352 public schools to be used for registration of the jobless next Saturday would be open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. Downtown registration will be cared for at the Jones school, Harrison street and Plymouth court; the Education building, 460 South State street, and on the 16th floor of the board of education quarters at 188 West Randolph street.

H. Otto Weege, superintendent of Lincoln park, ordered field houses in six small parks on the north side thrown open as shelters for the destitute last night. All buildings are well heated and provided with showers, Mr. Weege said.

The parks available are: Lake Shore playground, Chicago avenue at Lake Shore drive; Seward park, Sedgwick and Division streets; Stanton park, Pine and Vedder streets; Hamlin park, Wellington and Damen avenues; Welles park, Montrose avenue and Lincoln street, and Chase park, Leland and Ashland avenues. Should the response justify it, Mr. Weege proposes to maintain the shelters through the winter.

Between 3,800 and 4,000 laid off employes of the Chicago and North Western railway will return to work on a 5-day week basis tomorrow morning, officials of the road announced. Men affected are in shops, round houses, and yards all over the system, William Williser, vice president in charge of personnel, said.

Agreement on the 5 day week was reached at a conference between North Western officials and a committee of the federated shop crafts, a division of the Brotherhood of Railroad Employes. Some of those returning to work were laid off on Sept. 17 and others in October.

ROB REICHSTAG OF CONSTITUTION SIGNED IN 1849

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—The original German constitution of March, 1849, of which the only existing copy has mysteriously disappeared from the library of the German reichstag, was kept in a simple steel locker of easy access the document was last seen in November, 1929, and its loss was only discovered today when officials who were preparing a history of the constitution went to the locker to make a photograph of the old original.

The reichstag library was robbed last July when some silver plate, hidden behind little read volumes by some reichstag members, disappeared. It is thought the constitution was taken at the same time.

The original constitution consists of 4 parchment sheets of which 19 are filled with actual signatures of all the delegates to the national assembly at Paul's church in Frankfort. It was bound in red leather and stamped with the German eagle in silver.

Five concrete buildings are being built. Rocket starting apparatus has been mounted and the workshops are nearly complete. A rocket testing stand is also under construction.

RED CROSS BUDGET $4,042,000 FOR YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1931

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—(AP)—John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, announced today his organization's budget for the year ending June 30, 1931, was $4,042,000, but that actual expenditures would greatly exceed that sum because of "the huge relief problems facing the nation."

Reporting on expenditures last year, Mr. Payne said $4,254,700 had been spent for national and international work, and that 3,500 chapters had spent $5,000,000 more despite the fact that no major disasters occurred.

CABINET DRAWS MORE FEDERAL BUILDING PLANS

Will Seek Big Fund from Congress.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Plans for continued acceleration of the government's construction and public works program, in the effort to reduce the ranks of the nation's unemployed, went on apace today.

Cabinet heads took stock of their building and repair needs for the next fiscal year, as a preparatory move toward asking for additional appropriations when congress meets next month. In all cases effort is being made to maintain existing wage scales, officials said.

All indications are that strong congressional support will be marshaled behind a movement to add to the government total of public works construction by authorizing and appropriating funds for beginning a portion of the new cruisers, destroyers, submarines, and aircraft carriers needed to bring the fleet up to London naval treaty strength.

To Enlarge Naval Program.

It was learned today that the Hoover administration plans to ask congress to supply funds for carrying on construction work on all warships now authorized with the exception of two submarines, whose design may be altered.

About $40,000,000 will be expended on new naval construction during the current fiscal year and between that amount and $50,000,000 will be asked for next year, it was indicated today. Work on nine 8 inch gun cruisers is now going on and one more will be started soon. Work on an aircraft carrier is also getting under way. If new ships are authorized, funds would have to be included in deficiency bills.

The war department announced today that arrangements have been made to go ahead at once with $3,000,000 worth of repair and housing projects. One item calls for expenditure of $49,412 at Selfridge field, Michigan. Arrangements are being made to let airplane contracts totaling above $10,000,000.

Frown on Wage Reductions.

Government plans call for having its construction work done as far as possible by local labor and at unreduced wages.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is considering inserting a clause in the government's specifications for building notifying bidders of the disfavor with which the treasury will look upon any departure by the contractor from the well known policy of the government to maintain existing rates of wages."

GERMANS REFUSE TO RAISE PRICES ON FAST NORTH ATLANTIC SHIPS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The north Atlantic steamship companies ended a conference here today following a bitter struggle in which the British lines led a fight to force the North German Lloyd to increase the rates on the Europa and the Bremen because of their faster crossings shattering the time agreement. The Germans not only refused to increase their prices but answered a threat of price cuts on other lines by saying they would make corresponding reductions.

The German line was urged to charge at least $100 more for a first class four and one-half day passage than the price the other big ships charge for a five and one-half day crossing.

The trans-Atlantic lines hitherto had an agreement, in order to economize on the fuel, to make the crossing in six days, exactly like the New York Central and the Pennsylvania lines accord a New York to Chicago run, with a special tariff.

ITALY AND FRANCE REFUSE TO BUDGE IN NAVY QUARREL

Duce Insists on Parity, Paris on Superiority.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Nov. 1.—American Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson's conversations in Rapallo and are finished and the French-Italian naval tangle remains in all its intricacies.

The American envoy will not actually leave Rome for Geneva until the end of next week, but all the optimism that sparkled in these parts for a couple of days has vanished like a morning mist, leaving the tangle more visibly exposed, a very bulky object which is a danger to the London naval pact even though the French do go it alone. It is the same stumbling block which has frustrated the league disarmament commission at the very end of the rocky road it has had to travel these many years.

Abandon Hope of Accord.

It was declared here semi-officially tonight that direct negotiations will probably be resumed between the French and the Italians at Geneva during the conference. But all hopes of an agreement which will enable the commission to get a respectable report together have been abandoned. And, of course, the dream entertained at Washington, London and Tokio of getting Rome and Paris both safely in the London pact, and so eliminate all chances of a naval building race that would destroy the three power provisions, has also been dispelled.

The optimism vanished here when it became evident that Mr. Gibson did not come bringing silks and spices from the French in the form of concessions.

Confers with Il Duce.

He did a lot of talking though with Premier Mussolini, Gen. Devarinis, and Augusto Rossa, and it is thoroughly understood that he explained the menace to the three power pact inherent in this deadlock, even if "mediation," properly speaking, was out of the question.

France and Italy still remain in the positions in which they have established themselves; France demanding superiority and Italy parity.

The possibility of the French signing the London pact right away on its tonnage figure agreed by the British and submitted to Washington and Tokio and a safeguard provision enabling her to break the ranks if the Italians build up to a striking distance of her tonnage is given serious consideration here.

Might Wreck London Pact.

A treaty so revised would be a negation and contradiction of itself, says La Tribuna in what looks like an inspired article, and in other quarters it is claimed that the London pact with two conditional clauses would be a tragic affair. La Tribuna infers what would happen in the case Italy decided to go ahead and build.

"Others would construct new ships and it would be unnecessary to make new treaties," says the paper.

The paper declares, however, that it would be inconceivable, should Great Britain and America "after observing a scrupulous impartiality at London to France and Italy," do an about face and accept the French basis.

How complete is the impasse was indicated by the fact that the French ambassador left Rome this morning on an extended vacation.

Paris Welcomes U. S. Move.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Regardless of the failure of Ambassador Hugh Gibson's intervention in the Franco-Italian naval deadlock—and semi-official advices received here from Rome today stated that he failed to budge Premier Mussolini from his parity claim—political circles here acclaim the ambassador's action as indicative that the United States is abandoning its isolation policy and is preparing for real cooperation in European troubles.

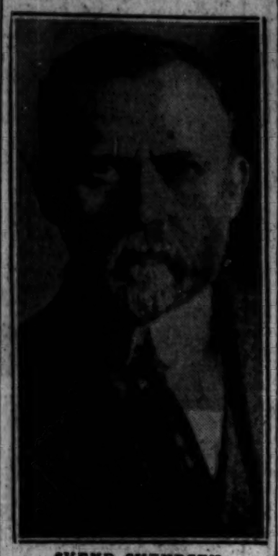
Ministerial spokesmen, inspired editorials and comment generally stress the fact that President Hoover personally appointed Mr. Gibson as the White House envoy to mediate the deadlock which has been a menace to the tripartite naval treaty. The President's decision is considered the forerunner of a closer and more active collaboration of America with the great powers on world problems.

Mussolini Stays Unshaken.

Telegrams arriving from Rome this evening assert that Il Duce stood pat on the grand Fascist council's statement that France's recognition of Italy's right to complete parity must be preliminary to any further discussion.

This stipulation keeps the problem up a blind alley, as the French government is firmly committed against accepting or granting the parity principle, much less the actual attainment of equality as a sea power.

Stricken in Street



SVEND SVENDSEN.

Some 18 or 20 years ago Svend Svendsen was regarded as a coming landscape painter. His canvases were hung in art galleries; his art won medals; his work drew laudatory comment from critics.

Svendsen faded from the public eye. Almost so his canvases.

Yesterday police of the South State street station found a white haired casual, about 70 years old, who had collapsed at State and 8th streets. They took him to the county hospital. He was Svend Svendsen. Physicians described his case as "arteric sclerosis," and predicted his discharge from the hospital in a week.

Svendsen said that illness, seven years ago, ended his career. Since then, he asserted proudly, he had never begged, and until now, as a county patient, he had never been the recipient of charity.

SLAYER OF MATE ON COAST GUARD PATROL CLEARED

Mistook Comrades for Rum Runners.

Gloucester, Mass., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Chief Machinist's Mate High D. Ipswich bay on the night of Aug. 4, killed a fellow coast guardsman, was found not guilty of culpable inefficiency today.

The verdict was returned in less than one hour, by Captains Harry C. Hamlet, Herman H. Wolf and H. F. Hottell, comprising the coast guard court martial. They stated that the charge and specifications were not proved and that the accused was acquitted.

On First Command.

Olmstead was commanding a rum patrol boat for the first time on the night of the shooting. Boatswain's Mate Louis A. Pratt was in a surf boat and Olmstead in an outboard motorboat and the crew of each craft took the other for rum runners.

Pleading for the accused youth as the trial closed, Attorney E. Mark Sullivan of Boston declared Olmstead's superiors were in error in sending him, "a raw lad," on a strange duty and asserted the defendant carried out his orders which included instructions for shooting, to the best of his ability.

Coast Guard Machine Guns Gone.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Of 40 Coast guardsmen under arrest in connection with the disappearance of machine guns and service revolvers from the Coast Guard headquarters in this city, the officers, fifteen in number, were released tonight.

The guns are thought to have reached the hands of a rum running gang operating on Lake Erie. Machine guns can be legally obtained only by government or law enforcing agencies. Gunmen and racketeers pay high prices for such weapons, due to difficulty in obtaining them.

Warrants for Coast Guard.

Key West, Fla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Warrants charging two coast guardsmen and a customs agent with first degree murder in the disappearance of Willie Demeritt, reputed rum runner, during a gun battle Wednesday night, awaited service today.

Those accused are Chief Boatswain H. B. Bowery, in command of picket boat 9,170; Everett Charlow, engineer of the boat, and Oscar Lounders, customs agent.

The warrants were issued on an affidavit by Clem Demeritt, who said his son had been missing since the government operatives shot at him as he unloaded contraband liquor from a boat.

Former Minister Convicted.

Lawton, Okla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—C. L. Thoroughman, former minister and government dry agent, was convicted here today by a federal court jury on four counts of prohibition law violation. He will be sentenced Dec. 1.

The former minister was found guilty of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, possession of a still, possession of whisky and manufacture of whisky.

100,000,000 MEN IN AFRICA MAKE FRANCE EMPIRE

Paris Depends on Blacks in Future War.

Here is the fourth of a series of articles on northern Africa by Mr Wales.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FEZ, Nov. 1.—Julius Cæsar built his empire and held it together with good roads, stone roads over which the famous Iron legions of Rome tramped from one end to the other of the world as it then existed.

Marshal Lyautey, French military governor of Morocco, for a dozen years, from 1912 to 1924, emulated his genial predecessor and made road construction the key of his policy. It yielded such good results that his successors have continued it, and are right now extending the roads in all directions.

Before Lyautey started to work the roads in Morocco were like they are today in the Spanish zone, and even in Tripoli—as Mussolini has not yet adopted his famous countryman's policy. Just paths and trails covered in a foot of dust for nine months in the year and quagmires the other three.

Dangerous to Travel.

It was impossible to move transport over them, it was dangerous to attempt to penetrate away from the coast, because columns driven into the desert could be cut off by raiding tribesmen, starved out and massacred.

So Lyautey set to work. He impressed all the natives in the protectorate to help, and they began breaking stone, grading, digging ditches on either side and then constructing good wide, well ballasted roads. Lyautey got oil from France to tar his thoroughfares, and they have been kept up ever since.

After fifty years of possession the Spaniards were never able to strike through from Tetuan to Chechouan, 60 miles, on a decent road, and as a result their force there was surrounded, pinched off and decimated during the retreat in 1924 because no reinforcements nor supplies could be got up.

Tanks Unable to Move.

Armored cars and light tanks that Gen. Primo de Rivera had purchased in England and France to quell Abd el Krim sprawled beside the dirt road, mired and unable to move.

When the French took a hand in the Riff campaign they sprinted troops up to a dozen points on the French side of the frontier and then started a converging attack which soon had Abd el Krim suing for peace.

While the motor cars of the transit companies and tourists race down the hard roads, the burros and camels and miserable horses of the Arabs, and those gents themselves on foot, wander along on the paths beside. The rock roads are too hard on the unshod feet of their animals and on their own tootsies.

As one travels for miles and miles over this region he wonders why colonists try to force a meager living from the dry, baked, inhospitable earth when there are other places where results could be obtained so much easier. Mile after mile the country is just sand and rocks, with tiny little bushes like sagebush, and, at rare intervals where there is water, the dreadful ricin, castor oil plant, and a few straggly palms.

But North Africa is what makes France an empire and enables her to boast of a hundred million population from the Niger north, mostly black. The empire school in the French army, which is well represented on the general staff, thinks very highly of the black soldier, the Senegalese and all the rest of his tribesmen, despite the sorry showing they made in the world war.

One Reason for Navy Deadlock.

The thesis is imbedded firmly in the French navy, and the principal cause of the Franco-Italian deadlock on relative strengths lies in the Paris government's determination to maintain a sufficient fleet to guarantee safe passage of her black man power from Africa across the Mediterranean to Marseilles at such time as she might need it.

It is a curious contradiction that while the French general staff stresses the need of credits, continually larger appropriation for national defense to enable the mechanization of the army, and insists that the war of the future will be a machine war, it also holds tenaciously to the Mangin doctrine which focuses on the hundred million black man power in Africa.

Just as the British tried their contingents from India and found them worthless against high explosive and machine gun fire, so the French tested their Senegalese and other black detachments on the western front and found them fit only for cannon fodder and not too good even at that. The fanatical courage of the Algerian and Moroccan troops was glorious, but they form only a tiny proportion of the horde of blacks which the staff counts on utilizing in a future war.

Morocco and Algeria have a new bone of contention in this connection, each territory fighting bitterly to insure that the projected trans-Saharan railway traverse its territory to tap the black man power of the Nigerian jungles. The Paris government has various proposed routes under consideration, and it is expected that part of Premier Tardieu's five billion franc development fund will be apportioned out to begin work on this line next year.

CONVICT KILLED LEADING DASH FROM SING SING

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—One convict was killed, another wounded and a third felled by tear gas and captured in Sing Sing prison tonight when five prisoners, armed with three pistols and ammunition, made an attempt to shoot their way to freedom. A keeper was wounded.

Two of the prisoners took up a hiding place in the prison yard when the escape failed. With the prison walls guarded by keepers and Ossining policemen, the prison authorities are confident of finding them.

The dead prisoner was Harry Gordon of New York, sent to Sing Sing for robbery. Gordon fired one shot at Keeper Howard Marquard, inflicting a slight wound. Marquard, a crack shot, returned the fire, killing Gordon.

Companion Shot Down.

Herbert Davis, under sentence for grand larceny, was wounded in the head when the squadron of prison guards fired a volley at the escaping group. Edward Ryan was the convict overcome by tear gas.

The two other prisoners still hiding in the prison yard are Joseph Pioli, a convicted murderer, and William Lapere, sentenced for robbery. The five desperadoes threw the entire staff of the huge prison into commotion when they made their attempt to escape at 7:20 p. m., about two hours after they had been locked in their cells in a new cell block.

They held up a keeper at pistol points, forced him to give up the key to unlock their cells, and dashed down the corridor and out to the yard.

Guards Act Promptly.

Some one yelled an alarm and in a moment the prison yard was the scene of furious activity. The prison's siren shrieked a warning, a detachment of guards formed a cordon around the prison walls, every man armed with tear gas bombs, shotguns and pistols. Other guards manned machine guns, trained down into the yard below ready for action in case of a general prison break.

Meanwhile a platoon of keepers formed inside the yard and advanced on the five convicts.

Gordon opened the hostilities, firing the one shot that wounded Keeper Marquard. While the keeper was taking rapid aim and firing at Gordon, his fellow keepers poured a heavy fire at the other prisoners. Weakening suddenly, the prisoners finally tossed away their weapons, Pioli and Lapere scurrying away in search of a hiding place, leaving their three companions on the ground.

Fred Swanson, 65 years old, a stationary engineer, was killed yesterday when he was struck by a North Western passenger train at the Main street crossing in Glen Ellyn.

DIES OF WOUNDS AFTER RESISTING PAIR IN HOLDUP

Peter Jappas, 42 years old, wealthy retired restaurant man, died late yesterday in Francis Willard hospital of bullet wounds received early in the day when he resisted a holdup.

Three suspects, captured in a stolen car from which they are said to have thrown a revolver, are being held by the Fillmore police.

The shooting of Jappas, who lived at 5406 West Jackson boulevard, was witnessed by his wife and sister-in-law, Mrs. George Jappas, who were seated in Jappas' car when two gunmen ordered him to get out. Jappas got out and attempted to strike one of the bandits, the women said. Both bandits opened fire and Jappas fell. The thieves fled without attempting to take $300 which Jappas was carrying.

Jappas' widow failed to identify the prisoners, who said they are Philip Pasfara, 22 years old, 2838 Fulton street; Samuel Covino, 24 years old, 1057 Taylor street, and Tony Fanilli, 24 years old, 762 Taylor street.

CASHIER ROBBED OF $250.

Clarence Meyer, cashier of the Securities Acceptance corporation, 15337 Broadway, Harvey, was forced to hand over $250 to a robber, who also menaced Miss Victoria Mikora, a stenographer, with his gun.

PEORIA-ST. LOUIS U. S. BARGE LINE DUE BY SPRING

Railroad Lodges Protest Against Service.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Government plans now call for the inauguration of a federal barge line service between Peoria, on the Illinois river, and St. Louis, on the Mississippi, some time early next spring, according to a statement made today by Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Ashburne, chairman of the Inland Waterways corporation.

A total of $3,000,000 is available for financing this service as soon as terminals are completed at Peoria and other points and the Illinois river channels are ready, Maj. Gen. Ashburne said.

Work on the St. Louis-Peoria barge project will be expedited as fast as possible in the interest of the unemployed, as well as prospective shippers, the Inland Waterway corporation head said. Plans call for two towboats and twenty or thirty barges at the beginning. The barges will have a capacity of 2,000 tons in 9 foot channels.

Railroad Lodges Protest.

According to a statement submitted by the Southern railway system to the interstate commerce commission today government barge line service on the Illinois river is not necessary in the public interest and will menace the maintainance of necessary rail transportation service if the river service is authorized at rates 20 per cent under the all rail rates.

Denial of the Inland Waterways corporation's application for a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the extension of the government barge service to the Illinois river and the establishment of rail-barge rates and routes is asked by the Southern. But if the commission refuses to do that, then the Southern seeks smaller differential under the all rails rate than those sought by the barge line.

"There is no more need for a new water line than there would be for a new rail line," asserts the Southern.

Sees Application Refusal.

The commission, it adds, would deny an application for construction of a new railroad in the territory to be served by the barge line.

Railroads are now facing serious difficulties because of lack of traffic, it is declared, and the proposed barge service, if established, will develop no new traffic but will take traffic away from the railroads.

Another declaration by the Southern is that it knows of no case in which the commission has dealt with barge differentials where there was any real showing as to barge and rail transportation being cheaper than all rail transaportation, and that the 20 per cent differential under all rail rates is a relic of the world war period when the government arbitrarily fixed the barge rates 20 per cent under the all-rail rates.

RODENT SOLOMON SOLVES A TRICKY FAMILY PROBLEM

Troubles Are Ended by Adding to Them.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Gwendolyn and Gwenevere have solved their problem or perhaps it was solved for them. Gwendolyn and Gwenevere are the servants of science. In their modest way they help instruct the youth of Evansville High school in the study of biology.

Gwendolyn and Gwenevere, when as young white rats they first came to school, were known to the students under various names. Sometimes it was John, or Bill, or Pete, or sometimes Mary, or Jane, or Kate. But the instructor decided that Gwendolyn and Gwenevere fitted better, at least, than Bill or Pete or John.

Kidnapings and Abductions.

Gwendolyn and Gwenevere proceeded to prove him right. Gwendolyn became the fond parent of five little white rats and the very next day Gwenevere displayed six blind offspring.

Then came complications. Gwendolyn slipped over to Gwenevere's nest and kidnaped the six ratlets. Gwenevere, waiting her chance, abducted six and carried them back.

She took the first six she found, but later, after some consideration, carried two back to Gwendolyn for exchange. Gwendolyn instantly threw them out, disowned and disinherited. She scampered across and got two others of her own choice.

Back and forth they kidnaped and abducted; no time to eat or sleep, and the families became more and more mixed up. Both parents were hopelessly confused.

Call for Expert Advice.

Finally they entered what the biology class insists was a peace conference. They called Old Tom, the doyen of the rat colony, as mediator. Old Tom was a wise old rat—had he been gray instead of white he would have been a corncrib champion. While the two ladies chittered and squeaked and squealed, Old Tom sat silent, twitching his whiskers.

When they had done, Tom gave some sage advice and the two mothers set up housekeeping in a communal nest with their eleven children.

Dissention again sprang up; Gwenevere turned the communal family over to Gwendolyn and got herself a brand new family of seven pink eyed little ones. At least the eyes will be pink when they open.

Old Tom, the mediating philosopher, still sits silent, twitching his whiskers. He's solemn and grave and his look is more knowing than ever before. Occasionally he winks a broad wink.

Girl, 3, Hides in Fire and Is Burned to Death

Spencer, Ia., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Norma Jean Fletcher, aged 3, was burned to death in her farm home last night. When the fire started, the father, Norman Fletcher, broke a window and rescued a son, Vernon, 7 years old, but the girl hid behind a dresser and could not be found. Both the mother and father were seriously burned.

President Masaryk's Niece Fractures Skull

PARIS, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Miss Lydia Ferguson, niece of President Masaryk of Czecho-Slovakia, was taken today to the American hospital suffering from a fractured skull received in a fall at a friend's house here. She was pronounced out of danger.

CUBA'S ELECTION ORDERLY; LIGHT VOTE RECORDED

HAVANA, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Cuba's congressional election day came to a close here tonight without disorders but with voting light and many polling places failing to open. In nearly all parts of the island the voting was light, and particularly was this true in Havana, though it had been expected that there would be a heavy descent on the polling stations.

In the suburb of Marianao, well known pleasure resort with a population of 50,000, it was reported that only 520 votes had been cast. President Machado, after casting his own vote for the Liberal ticket, personally visited a number of polling places in Havana and its suburbs.

Polls that had not opened at 11 o'clock owing to the failure of attendants to appear may cause the holding of later elections in the districts affected. Announcement was made that the names of the 58 successful candidates among the three competing parties, Liberals, Conservatives, and Populars, for the house of representatives and of the 18 senators might be made public within 24 hours.

'TANNHAEUSER,' 'MANON' GIVEN BY CIVIC OPERA

Mary McCormic Praised by 'Manon' Role.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The French "Manon" in the afternoon, the German "Tannhaeuser" in the evening were the pair of attractions offered by the Chicago Civic Opera company yesterday.

"Manon" presented Mary McCormic in the name part, the first time that she has ever done it in this city. It was by a considerable margin the best operatic rôle she has ever sung here. Possibly her performance did not add a great amount to the world's knowledge of the acting possibilities of the part, but she was safe in it, and vocally she was considerably more than safe. She sang correctly, expressively, neatly, and consequently she may be credited with an unmistakable success.

Praise for These Singers.

There were a number of other reasons to make the afternoon pleasant. Chief among these was Charles Hackett as the Chevalier des Grieux, singing his finest, which is Mr. Hackett's case is very fine, and carrying the spirit of romance into his impersonation. Likewise there was Jean Vieuille as Lescaut, a baritone of excellent voice, an artist of great value. Also add the distinguished manner and singing of Edouard Cotreuil as the Count des Grieux. And there were several lesser characters, Octave Dua was one, who added to the picture, not forgetting a charming set of court dances presented by Harriet Lundgren, Edward Caton, and the ballet.

Emil Cooper conducted in a way to emphasize most of the drama and suave melody of the opera, occasionally, however, taking a slow pace at the expense of lightness and sparkle.

Commends Wagner Interpretation.

The evening performance was another instance of what will probably turn out to the greatest advance of the Civic Opera company this season; that is, the development of its German wing. Lotte Lehmann, Paul Althouse, and Hans Hermann Nissen, having helped to make "Die Walkuere" a success a few nights before, were equally potent in the "Tannhaeuser" cast, and to them were added Cyrena Van Gordon and Alexander Kipnis, whose great services to the lyric stage were known before and expected—and fulfilled—in this case. As in the other German opera, Egon Pollak conducted.

This was a cast to make "Tannhaeuser" an occasion of importance. Possibly from its dimensions, the orchestra was not always full toned enough to support the singers, and occasionally grew strident when it tried to be, a state of things not so noticeable in the lighter scoring of the afternoon's opera. But Mr. Pollak conducted with a firm and spirited hand, and the singing throughout was of a kind to banish all previous unkind legends about how Wagner must be shouted and not sung.

For the opera was sung, and sung beautifully, with fine tone and sustained melodic line. With such a performance there is complete justification in presenting Wagner largely and often.

Novelist Weds

MISS REBECCA WEST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Miss Rebecca West, one of England's leading novelists, was married today in the tiny parish church at Abinger Common, near Dorking, Surrey, this afternoon to Henry Maxwell Andrews, a London banker. Her cousin, Sir Henry Denny, vicar of the parish, officiated.

The ceremony was kept as secret as possible, only a half dozen of the public supplementing the crowd of a few friends. She was married as Cecily Isabel Fairfield. She adopted the pen name, Rebecca West, some years ago, after playing the character of that name in Ibsen's "Rosmersholm," an early stage venture on her part.

The couple will spend their honeymoon on the continent.

PREMIERS 'HIDE BELOW' IN BRITISH NAVAL 'BATTLE'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Having seen mechanized army maneuvers and an air display at Croydon on the two preceding Saturdays, dominion prime ministers attending the imperial conference witnessed the strength of the arm by which Britannia rules the waves in exercises in the channel today.

Every phase of modern naval warfare was demonstrated, the government party witnessing the mimic battle from abcard the H. M. S. Nelson. The dreadnaught set out from Portland convoyed by flying boats. She was attacked by submarines, and these were driven off by destroyers dropping depth bombs.

Using paravanes to cut its way through the mine field, the Nelson joined the mimic battle between the fifth destroyer flotilla and the second battle squadron. The largest part of the British Atlantic fleet was lined up in the marine battle. One phase of the maneuvers took the Nelson through a heavy bank of gas. The prime ministers were hustled below and stored in gas tight compartments until the battleship steamed into clear air.

E. H. GARY KIN IS FOUND DEAD; MAY BE SUICIDE

Gas from Auto in Garage Proves Fatal.

Hobart E. Gary, 35 years old, a cousin of the late Elbert H. Gary and a grandson of the late Jude P. Gary, one of the founders of Wheaton, was killed by automobile exhaust gas yesterday. The authorities said there was evidence of suicide.

Gary, who lived at 139 West Prairie avenue, Wheaton, was found unconscious in his garage early yesterday by his wife, Elizabeth. He was in his pajamas, the garage doors were closed, and the motor of the automobile was running.

Wife Becomes Apprehensive.

Mrs. Gary said she became apprehensive upon arising yesterday when she did not see her husband in the house. She noticed the garage doors were closed and remembered that when she and her husband returned home Friday night they had left them open. Dr. A. B. Jones and Wheaton police administered three tanks of oxygen in a futile effort to revive the man.

Mrs. Gary, who is a daughter of Albert J. Nystrom, school supplies and map manufacturer of Chicago, said her husband had lost heavily in the stock market. He formerly was a bond salesman and later became a broker, she said, but during the wave of speculation last year he gave up his brokerage house and became a private speculator.

Were Losing Home.

The family was to have lost their home yesterday through the foreclosure of a mortgage and they had planned to move to Wilmette and live with the Nystrom family. Mr. Nystrom had arranged for a position paying $350 a month for his son-in-law.

Mr. Nystrom was at the home of his daughter yesterday. He declared that such an act on his son-in-law's part was uncalled for, that he would gladly have settled all his debts had he been informed by either Gary or his wife of their circumstances.

ROB 15 IN STORE, ESCAPE.

Three thieves yesterday escaped with $1,250 in cash after they had held up John Remm, manager of the Remm and McCaffery cigar store, 133 East 22d street, and 15 customers yesterday. Remm said he had been held up six weeks ago and robbed of $7,500 by the same gang.

Would Be Citizen

ROBERTO MORANZONI.
[Daguerre Photo.]

Roberto Moranzoni of the Chicago Civic Opera company, applied to the United States District court yesterday for naturalization papers. This was the second request of the opera star, a return to Italy on the previous occasion necessitating the second application. He gave his age as 50 years old and said he was born in Bari, Italy, coming to this country in 1924.

URGE LAW TO PUT MORE ALCOHOL IN FINNISH BEER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Nov. 1.—Twenty-six delegates of the Finnish parliament under the leadership of Erik Frenchell, leader of the Swedish party, have introduced a new bill urging the alcohol percentage of beer to be increased from the present two per cent to three and two-tenths.

The newest attack against prohibition in Finland followed the government's proposal to increase the tax on the present insipid beer. Frenchell declares that should the proposed tax increase be authorized it would only increase the consumption of bootleg beer and decrease the beer tax, whereas his proposal to make beer palatable will increase the government's revenues about $1,818,000 yearly.

Finnish papers have published reports that the United States is contemplating authorizing the manufacture of beer and comment on the odd fact that both Finland and the United States have had prohibition for the same length of time and that at the present time both countries are considering legalizing beer. The Lapua league, though comprised of some of the strongest religious elements of the country, favors another reopening of the prohibition question on the ground that no law is good law which it is impossible to enforce.

OFFICE DEVICES TO BE SEEN AT BUSINESS SHOW

More than 100 inventions, designed to conserve the energy of office workers, as well as to increase efficiency, will be on display at the National Business Show at the Stevens hotel, Nov. 10 to 15.

One of the exhibits will be an electric typewriter which operates with a two ounce pressure per key instead of the 32 ounces required on present machines. Another typewriter may be used for writing in 40 languages.

Other displays, according to C. H. Hunter, general manager of the show, will be the Telecord, a device which records telephone conversations of both parties; a super-automatic calculating machine which figures up to one million dollars; an envelope addressing machine which inscribes letters at the rate of 8,000 an hour, and a bill making outfit which automatically balances books.

Good Performance at Low Cost

MANY SEVERE TESTS SHOW THE SUBSTANTIAL WORTH THAT HAS BEEN BUILT INTO THE FORD CAR

Ford

THE STURDINESS and reliability of the new Ford, so evident in the every-day uses of a motor car, are revealed also in many unusual tests of stamina and endurance. Over deeply rutted roads, through desert sands and deep snow, it has gone forward to new conquests of time and distance. From every corner of the world come reports of its good performance.

In England, the new Ford won three gold medals, one silver medal, and one bronze medal in the run from London to Exeter. In Peru it won first and third places in the reliability run over the tortuous Amanceas Road.

A Mexican general tells how one of the first of the new Fords in that country was driven from Acapulco to Atoyac "over a difficult country where there are no roads at all and the land is strewn with rocks and soft sand. Natives along the way saw their first automobile with positive wonder."

In Java, a new Ford was driven to the top of the Dieng Plateau, one of the highest mountains in Java. Previously the ascent to the old Hindu statues at the summit had been made only by horseback to the rest-house, thence on foot. In Poland, a new Ford won the 2000-mile international race from Warsaw to Lemberg to Warsaw.

Two years ago, a new Ford fought its way along rough wagon trails to become the first car in history to cross the Peace River Block from Fort St. John to Hudson Hope, from the Alberta boundary to the western border of the block.

In 1930, the new Ford won the winter race arranged by the Royal Automobile Club of Sweden. This race was over slippery mountain roads. At times the car was half hidden by snow. Frequently the temperature was 20 degrees below zero.

These severe tests show the enduring quality that has been built into the new Ford and its ability to stand up under gruelling driving conditions. Long, hard service will confirm your first impression of quality and increase your pride in its capable performance. The value of simplicity of design, good materials and accuracy in manufacturing is especially apparent after the first twenty-five thousand miles.

See the nearest dealer and have him give you a demonstration ride in the new Ford. Check up every point that goes to make a good automobile and you will know that it is a value far above the price you pay.

GETULIO VARGAS TO GIVE BRAZIL DICTATOR RULE

Bares Wide Reform Plans Without Congress.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 1.—Dr. Getulio Vargas, pampas chieftain, will formerly take possession of the government of Brazil as president with discretionary powers Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. He will govern without a congress and his first act as president will be to dissolve the presently constituted senate and chamber of deputies.

Dr Vargas made this announcement personally in the silver garden salon of Cattete palace this afternoon when he emerged smiling from an hour's conference with junta members and Dr. Oswaldo Aranha and Gen. Juarez Tavora.

Confirms Previous Promise.

His action is in full accordance with the proclamation he issued from the general headquarters at Ponta Grossa last Monday before starting his triumphant march to Rio to bring the three weeks' revolt to a close. He will exercise discretionary powers "in view of the situation created by the triumphant revolution," as he expressed it.

In giving out an outline of his proposed reforms Dr. Vargas said that the dissolution of the congress would be followed by the appointment of technical commissions to study each problem under consideration.

His aids in the capital see in this an effort to bring about reconciliation of the views of the southern rebels, which he represents, and those of the northern rebels represented in the person of Gen. Tavora. The new platform of Dr. Vargas will be therefore a modification of the one he proposed to the electorate at the time he was candidate for president and was defeated by Dr. Julio Prestes by chicanery at the polls.

Rebel Chieftains Friendly.

Dr. Vargas's renunciation of his viewpoints is said to be quite voluntary. No split is seen in the announcement that Gen. Tavora will leave Rio next week for a triumphal return to the nine northern states which his generalship won over to the revolution. Aside from some points of difference, the fullest cordiality exists between the two chiefs. Furthermore, Dr. Aranha, chief friend and lieutenant of Dr. Vargas, yesterday wore a badge bearing Gen. Tavora's picture on his coat lapel, and both chiefs have been seen exchanging compliments.

Financial and judicial reform are the two main planks of the new regime's reforms, but other principles of the administration include simplification of legal processes, slashes in bureaucratic expenditures, free public education, electoral reforms, and institution of the secret ballot.

Retains Junta Appointee.

The new president explained that his cabinet has not yet been decided upon. According to those close to him tonight, Mello Franco, who is now acting as foreign minister under the junta government, will retain that post under Dr. Vargas, indicating that a reconciliation of viewpoints between Dr. Vargas and the junta had been reached in this afternoon's conference.

The single certainty in the situation tonight appears to be that Dr. Aranha will be the new minister of justice and minister of the interior. Other cabinet possibilities mentioned tonight are Joao Neves, Gen. Tavora, Gen. Flores de Cunha, Lindolpho Collor, and Gen. Miguel Castro.

FIVE KILLED BY FURNACE GAS IN N. Y. APARTMENT

New York, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Coal gas seeping up from a furnace directly under their apartment killed a family of five in the Bronx today. The dead are Gustave Peterson, 55; his wife, Susan, 48; two daughters, Rose, 17, and Kathleen, 9, and son, Gustave, Jr., 13.

They lived on the first floor of a five story apartment building on Melrose avenue of which Peterson was superintendent.

Mrs. Peterson and her daughter Rose, apparently were the only members of the family to become aware of the fumes. Their bodies were found in the dining room of the four room apartment, where they apparently had fallen while trying to reach a window. The bodies of the father and the other two children were found in their beds.

Peterson, as was his custom, had started a fire in the furnace at 6 o'clock. Evidently he shook the furnace so hard that a pipe elbow was dislocated and when he turned on a blower the fumes were forced into the building rather than out through the pipe.

Finds Lord Nelson's Shaft 'Grown' 14 Feet in 90 Years

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Lord Nelson's column in Trafalgar square has "grown" 14 feet 4 inches in the 90 years it has been erected. This discovery was made by a steeplejack named Larkin, who compared its height today with the official records in the office of works. The government has ordered scientific measurements to be taken to find out what is wrong with the famous London landmark.

BULGARIA'S TINY TOTS PARADE TO SEE NEW QUEEN

20,000 Toss Bouquets at Royal Pair.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Bulgaria's youngest generation is a little disappointed in the lovely Ioanna whom King Boris has brought home to reign as his queen.

For one thing, she didn't wear a crown and ermine robes today as she stood on a palace balcony beside the handsome Boris while 200,000 school children marched by, cheering and tossing bouquets at the royal pair.

Flashes Tender Smiles.

She was more like a big sister, flashing a tender smile at the tiniest of her subjects who come close to hand their flowers over the balcony, than like a queen whom one sees only in the movies.

But Ioanna won the hearts of more mature Bulgars in this day's celebration. She smiled for two hours with the sun in her eyes; she refused to sit down, and she took ill-aimed bouquets on the chin like a veteran.

She drew upon her experience as a princess of Italy when she opened the schools of the vacation colonies named in her honor.

Sure to Be Popular.

Her subjects were almost lyrical in her praise tonight and in every quarter of the city it was evident that her tender sympathy for the children today held rich promise for her life-long popularity in the future.

This morning the queen attended the All-Saints day mass in the private Catholic chapel of the palace and later went with her husband to the orthodox mass in the cathedral in honor of the national saint-hero, Ivan Rilskey.

Ioanna, it appeared, has been granted a special ecclesiastical dispensation permitting her to attend ceremonies of the orthodox church when they gave national Bulgarian significance so that her absence on such occasions might not be misconstrued.

Claim Rifle Shot Accidental.

The accidental discharge of a rifle by a Bulgarian army recruit who was patrolling the railway line near Philipopolis as the train bearing King Boris and Queen Ioanna passed was given today as the official explanation of a report yesterday that the train had been fired upon.

The young soldier, the ministry of communications said, stumbled as he was walking and the gun discharged

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 1.—[U. P.]—Herbert Hoover Jr. arrived in Asheville today for an indefinite period of rest, accompanied by Dr. Joel T. Boone, White House physician; Lawrence Ritchie, secretary to President Hoover, and an attendant.

Dr. Boone stated that the younger Hoover was in good physicial condition and rapidly recovering from a minor tubercular infection.

PETER'S RECIPE FOR EASY MONEY IS SIMPLE ONE

For the handy man about the house there is nothing simpler than Peter Theros' recipe for doubling your money. Buy a live chicken and hang it by its feet over a candle. Light the candle and leave the chicken there till it dies. This may take two or three days. Theros, who is 32 years old and a steel worker living at 12302 Houston avenue, bought his on a Tuesday.

"The chicken isn't dead yet," he reported Wednesday to the gypsy couple from whom he had received the recipe. "What'll I do?"

"Better bring us $800 more," they advised. Incidentally, Theros had already paid them $1,400 for the recipe. So when he brought them the $800, that made $2,200, or his entire savings. However, it worked, for on Thursday the chicken died.

The gypsies had stepped out when he went to collect the $2,400, he reported to the east side police. They are still out. So is Theros.

ENGINEER DIES IN WRECK.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 1.—(U. P.)—Engineer Pickett of the Baltimore and Ohio express train, No. 17, en route to Washington from Cumberland, was killed, and Freman Pumphrey was probably fatally injured when the train jumped the track near Kearneyville, W. Va., early today.

CLEVELAND LINES ELECTRIFY; PUT GOLD IN POCKETS

Hand City New Terminal on Silver Platter.

Following is the twelfth of a series of articles by Mr. Henning based on a survey of the rail situation in the east.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Railroad terminal electrification was handed to Cleveland on a silver platter. The railroads occupying the $88,000,000 Union station opened last June were only too willing to electrify the terminal and their approaches thereto, for it meant money in their pockets, and big money, too.

The new Cleveland terminal, representing probably the greatest public improvement so far in the history of the city, is only part of a tremendous real estate venture on the part of the Vanderbilts and other owners of the New York Central in partnership with the Van Sweringens of the Nickle Plate system—a venture to the success of which electrification was essential. The profits to the railroads from this real estate deal bid fair to put railroading profits in the piker class.

The station at present is occupied by the New York Central, the Big Four, which is a part of that system, and the Nickel Plate, the approaches of which to the terminal are electrified for 17 miles in the aggregate. It is not unlikely that in the near future the Baltimore and Ohio, the Erie and the Wheeling and Lake Erie roads will be brought into the terminal, in which event their approaches will be electrified.

Abandons Lake Front Station.

Under the revised city plan, however, the Pennsylvania and other roads with right of way on the lake front are to reduce their tracks in that locality from 42 to 16, cover them over and electrify them.

Thus in various ways Cleveland is in process of banishing the steam locomotive from the heart of the city and is already half way to the goal.

The start Cleveland has achieved in electrification was due, not to public pressure upon the railroads, but to the shrewd foresight of young O. P. and Mantus J. Van Sweringen, who got into railroading as a side issue of the real estate business and of the late A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central which in the course of electrifying its New York terminal had stumbled into a most lucrative real estate business as a side issue of railroading. When Smith and the Van Sweringen brothers put their heads together on this deal Cleveland got electrification hot off the griddle.

Plan to Beautify Cleveland.

The original plan for the beautification of Cleveland worked out by the late D. H. Burnham of Chicago and his associates thirty years ago provided for a great union railroad terminal on the lake front which was to be the diamond in the center of the jewel. It was to be of classic design and to loom up like the Parthenon at the end of every vista.

The New York Central, the Big Four, the Nickel Plate and the Pennsylvania were to occupy this station but electrification was not provided for. Electrification was then in swaddling clothes and nobody knew whether it would ever grow up.

At that time the Union station project was regarded by the railroads as a luxury which they were not disposed to squander money on. In consequence the city dreamed of the realization of the plan but the plan slept for nearly two decades.

When the plan was in its infancy the young Van Sweringen go-getters appeared on the scene, going in for real estate development schemes in a big way. They bought up the Shaker Village subdivision on the heights a few miles from Cleveland and proceeded to lay out a suburb calculated to attract the rich and the near rich.

This was before the automobile was a common mode of conveyance even among the rich and the near rich, and the first conclusion reached by the Van Sweringens was that they never would make that suburban venture go until they got rapid transportation to the city. That was how the Van Sweringens came to get into the railroad business, in which they now are among the ruling powers.

The Van Sweringens obtained control of the Cleveland and Youngstown railroad, the location of which with reference to Cleveland the Shaker Village subdivision suited their purposes admirably. With extensions of this road here and there they could provide the suburb with rapid transit.

The extension on the Cleveland end the Van Sweringens proposed to run right down to the Public square, in the heart of the city, where it would be but a step for the commuters between their offices and the trains. There was a ravine running through the city, into which the railroad tracks would fit quite snugly, and the right of way through which could be obtained at bargain prices, for nobody attached much value to that ravine.

Square Covered with Shacks.

The Van Sweringens planned to terminate this extension of their railroad in a stub-end station on an unsightly tract below the surrounding grade and covered with shacks, which flanked one corner of the Public square. This tract of 35 acres also could be had cheap, nobody but the Van Sweringens perceiving its possibilities, and even they but dimly.

While the young real estate dealers were perfecting their plans for their first railroad venture, the interstate commerce commission ordered the New York Central to divest itself of control of the Nickel Plate. This was in 1916. Mr. Smith went to Cleveland and surveyed the situation. He met the Van Sweringens and learned their plans. And that veteran railroader opened the eyes of those two young men as to the real possibilities of the project with which they were toying. Also he made a good stroke of business for the New York Central, which as a result of his foresight fell into another real estate bonanza.

Mr. Smith's railroad four years before had completed the electrification of its New York terminal and was beginning to realize enormous returns from leasing the air rights over its underground tracks in the Park avenue district, real estate profits that are reimbursing the road for its electrification outlay many times over. Mr. Smith looked at that ravine in Cleveland, the air rights over which would some day be worth a billionaire's ransom, he gazed out over that 35 acres of shacks below grade, with potential air rights even more valuable, he listened to the Van Sweringens' plans for a little stub end station, and he smiled. Like the old prospector, Mr. Smith knew "thar was gold in them thar gulches, and he proceeded to tell the Van Sweringens whar."

Right of Way Is Acquired.

The Van Sweringens by this time had acquired the right of way in the ravine and enough land for their stub end station, and were in a position to gather in the rest of the 35 acres. They had the land and Mr. Smith had the big idea. They proceeded to pool their resources for the profit of all concerned.

Mr. Smith's big idea was that the old plan for a union station on the lake front, where the real estate development possibilities were extremely limited, be abandoned and that the New York Central join the Van Sweringens in expanding their little stub end station into a great union terminal. They would electrify all tracks entering the terminal so that they could be kept underground and with the tracks underground there would be air rights, the value of which would be limited only by the extent of the future development of Cleveland. They would have a station that would be paid for, not by passengers and shippers, but by office tenants. And the profitable investment would be the property of the New York Central and the Van Sweringens, who would lease the terminal facilities to any other roads desiring to come in.

The upshot was that the Van Sweringens took the Nickel Plate off the hands of the New York Central and then negotiated an agreement whereby the New York Central was to guarantee 93 per cent and the Nickel Plate 7 per cent of a $60,000,000 bond issue to finance the construction of the terminal.

When the approval of this project by the city council was sought obstacles were encountered. There was much opposition to an abandonment of the original city plan with the union station on the lake front. It became necessary for the railroad interests to initiate the legislation under the initiative act which had been devised to circumvent the control of legislative bodies by railroads and other corporations.

The New York Central and the Nickel Plate put their best foot forward in the ordinance they initiated. They provided for electrification of the terminal. They presented plans of a breath taking civic improvement on what was virtually a waste area. They showed how it could be fitted into a revised city plan. The city council made innumerable amendments which the companies accepted. In 1919 the ordinance was submitted to the voters and approved.

The roads had yet to surmount the hurdle of the interstate commerce commission the consent of which to the bond issue guarantee was necessary. Peter Witt, a single taxer who was a protégé of "Golden Rule" Tom Johnson, had been leading the fight against public acceptance of the ordinance. He continued the fight at Washington and in 1921 won an adverse decision from the commission.

Then They Hire Their Enemy.

Thereupon the roads took a trainload of prominent Clevelanders to Washington to plead for a reversal. They got it, while Witt was in Seattle directing a reorganization of street railways, though Witt now concedes they would have got it, any way. Witt for many years in an annual public meeting assailed the Van Sweringens and other capitalists as predatory interests. Not long ago the Van Sweringens retained him to advise them on reorganization of their rapid transit lines. He now has faith in them. "They are builders," he says and points in proof to the enormous terminal the building of which he fought for so many years.

The terminal is the last word in railway station facilities. It is no cathedral, though it is a majestic and a beautiful structure. It is a 52 story skyscraper that is a railway station below ground and an office building above, with utility the first consideration in the disposition of every foot of space. In and out of the bowels of this man made mountain noiselessly glide the Twentieth Century limited and scores of other through and local trains behind the electric locomotives that relieve the steam locomotives for passage through the city.

The entire terminal represents an investment of $179,000,000. In addition to $88,000,000 expended for the station and electrification, $46,000,000 went into improvements on the properties of the occupant railways.

ENGINES CRASH

Wreckage of Wabash and Illinois Central engines at 76th street and Lowe avenue yesterday after crash in which three were injured.

3 INJURED AS TRAINS COLLIDE; DAMAGE $150,000

Three men were injured and twenty-five freight cars were derailed in a head-on collision yesterday between two freight trains on the Belt Line tracks at 76th street and Lowe avenue. Damage of $150,000 was done.

Those hurt were Charles Scheihing, 59 years old, of Homewood, a fireman; S. F. Greek, 51 years old, of Montpelier, O., an engineer, and James Davis, 34 years old, also of Montpelier, a switchman. They were taken to the Auburn Park hospital.

A switcher's error on the Belt line was blamed for the crash. According to officials a string of 85 freight cars of the Wabash road was south bound when it collided head on with a north bound freight of the Illinois Central lines. Both freights had been given clearance on the same tracks. Locomotives of both trains buckled, and were damaged to the extent of $75,000. Cars of both trains were telescoped and derailed.

TURNS BURGLAR, HE SAYS, TO EASE HIS CONSCIENCE

New York, Nov. 1.—[U. P.]—Bernard Benson, 18 year old draftsman, confessed to Magistrate Sabatino that he committed burglary to ease his conscience.

Benson told the judge he had been imprisoned on a burglary charge of which he was innocent, and in order to "deserve" the sixty-three days he spent in jail he stole seventy-five cents, he said.

"The inactivity of jail left time for a large amount of brooding," he said. "This led to a desire to deserve punishment by committing the crime I am charged with now."

CROWN 'MODERN' KING TODAY AMID AFRICAN POMP

Ras Taffari Opens Lavish Coronation.

—BY W. J. MAKIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ADDIS ABBABA, Abyssinia, Nov. 1.—Amidst blaring bands and booming guns, with airplanes flying overhead, the first official ceremonies connected with the coronation of Ras Taffari were performed at 3 o'clock this afternoon when a huge golden statue of King Menelik II. astride a prancing horse was unveiled.

Ras Taffari, accompanied by the crown prince, arrived early clad in a gold brocaded purple cloak. He was surrounded by squadrons of lancers. The streets were guarded by riflemen. In the central square costly Persian rugs had been spread before St. George's cathedral. The golden throne was carried from the palace, followed by a procession of Ethiopian dignitaries dressed in blue, yellow, black and gold brocaded cloaks, together with various foreign representatives.

Tribesmen Dash Through Streets.

During the unveiling, crowds of fierce looking tribesmen, mounted and afoot, dashed through the city screaming wildly. They were armed with rifles and long spears.

Among the foreigners present at the ceremonies were H. Murray Jacoby, representing President Hoover; Marshal Franchet D'Esperey of France, the Duke of Gloucester of Great Britain, and the Prince of Udine of Italy, all dressed in gorgeous uniforms and covered with glittering orders.

When all had gathered before the statue, Ras Taffari pulled a cord and the Ethiopian colors, green, yellow and red, with which the statue was covered, fell away and revealed a statue of gold.

At 10 o'clock tonight, dressed in a simple white shamma, Taffari entered the church for all night prayer and meditation. A battalion of troops will surround the church until dawn, when the sacred coronation will begin.

Coronation at Dawn.

ADDIS ABBABA, Nov. 1.—(AP)—There was no sleep in the mud thatched cottages of this amazing town tonight; none in the field of tents pitched about its edges, nor in the palace of Ras Taffari Makonnen, for when the dawn breaks tomorrow over the 8,000 foot mountains which hem in the capital of Abyssinia, Ras Taffari will be crowned Emperor Haile Selassie I.

Emperor Haile Selassie, Ras of Razzes, Lord King of God and the Light of the World! The little man whose luxuriant hair and coal black beard contrast so strangely with his frail frame is to bear those titles as descendant in the royal line from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Americans have come 6,000 miles to bear the good wishes of their president; England has sent her Duke of Gloucester; all the kingdoms of the world have sent their representatives bearing costly gifts, and tens of thousands of native tribesmen have come out of the hills to take their part in the coronation of their emperor.

Shut Off Water for Baths.

There was no sleep in the palace because Ras Taffari and his buxom wife, the Princess Waziru Menen, were on their knees in the church of St. George, where the coronation ceremony is to take place.

Early tonight the entire water supply of the capital was shut off until the emperor and his empress could take a ceremonial bath before beginning their all night vigil in front of their crowns in the cathedral.

Addis Abbabd, sprawled over two mountains and surrounded by forests of eucalyptus trees, looks like an African Coney Island. Flags of a dozen nations wave in the sharp breeze which comes with the evening. The hum of extraordinary activity comes from the city of tents. American automobiles swing toward the curb to pass swaying camels. Barefoot natives astride donkeys move about their business.

New Era for Ethiopia.

It is the beginning of a new era for Addis Abbaba and for all of Ethiopia, for the Taffari's wish is to make of his country a counterpart of the European civilization he admires. He wants new factories to rise above the forests; he wants his people to know of the world with which he can keep in touch by the elaborate radio receiving set an American company has sent him.

It was but one of a thousand lavish gifts. There is a refrigerator which makes ice cubes for the cocktails Ethiopia has come to like; modern rifles from the king of England; motion picture cameras and the reels of Admiral Richard E. Byrd's antarctic explorations.

In the open spaces near the tents of the encamped thousands, black warriors of imposing physique ride through the evolutions of the demonstration which will come tomorrow. Amazon women, heavily armed, ride horses and donkeys in the gaudy costumes they will wear tomorrow. Petals of flowers are thrust into their ears and noses, and the pagan custom contrasts strangely with the gold crucifixes about their necks.

A $3,000,000 Coronation.

For Abyssinia, the only unconquered empire left in Africa, has been a Christian nation for 1,600 years. Addis Abbaba itself was founded only 40 years ago by King Menelik after his armies had routed the Italians in a battle among the protecting mountains. Its name, translated, is "blossoming flower."

Nothing has been left undone to impress the world with as splendid a ceremony as it has seen in generations. Preparations for this celebration have cost the government nearly $3,000,000, it is said, and Ethiopia's technicians have worked wonders in the construction of roads and the provision of electric lights.

Hoover Sends Greetings.

Washington, Nov. 1.—(AP)—President Hoover in a message to the Ethiopian emperor today extended the felicitations of the government and people of the United States to the new ruler on his coronation.

"On behalf of the American people and government I have great pleasure in extending to your majesty my most sincere felicitations on the happy occasion of your majesty's coronation and my best wishes for your majesty's health and happiness," the message said.

ABSINTHE SEIZED IN NIGHT CLUB IS POURED IN SEWER

David Zinnamon, caretaker of the Maison Ritz at 20 East Adams street, which is said to be operated by Dave [Cockeyed Mulligan] Ablin, was discharged yesterday by Judge Edgar A. Jonas when he was arraigned in the South State street court on a charge of violating the state prohibition law. Twelve bottles of absinthe which were taken by police in a raid on the cabaret Friday were emptied into the sewer by order of the court.

Sergt. Stephen Leddy of the Central station testified that a man had delivered the absinthe to the cabaret checkroom while the police were in another part of the place. The deliveryman had disappeared when the police reached the checkroom, he said, and so they had no proof of possession.

"I don't know that Ablin has anything to do with the cabaret, but if he does, I will find out," Capt. Willard Malone of the Central station said yesterday when asked about the license for the place. "Milton Weil has a perfectly legitimate license, I know, to operate it."

REALIZE YOUR DREAMS of HEALTH and HAPPINESS

THE greatest things in life are frequently the result of good health. It follows then that men and women who protect their health have greater promise for happiness.

Of the dangerous communicable diseases which threaten the health and happiness of individuals, "Social Diseases", syphilis and gonorrhea, are outstanding. While Osler, a wise physician, has declared syphilis the leading killing disease, gonorrhea is a grave danger to men, and an even greater one to women and children. Unless checked by an unusual bodily resistance, or prompt and efficient treatment, the germs of this disease often invade delicate tissues, causing acute inflammation which may be remedied only by serious surgical operations. Because of this, more women than men die from the effects of gonorrhea.

In addition—an expectant mother with uncured gonorrhea may infect her child's eyes during birth, causing blindness. Three out of every five cases of blindness of the new-born are caused by gonorrhea. For this reason it has become a required medical practice to treat the eyes of every new-born baby with certain silver solutions which kill the germs and save the baby's sight. In communities where every new-born child receives this treatment, there is practically no blindness of children due to gonorrhea.

Sterility in husband or wife is another disability often due to this disease, adding lonely, childless homes to the long list of gonorrhea's tragic consequences.

These are some of the reasons why health authorities are so emphatic in urging prompt and thorough medical examination and treatment for infected persons as early as possible in the course of the disease. This is especially important before marriage or during pregnancy. Neglect leads to disaster more commonly in the wife than in the husband. Attempted self treatment may cause irreparable damage.

Good medical treatment for either gonorrhea or syphilis, including Wassermann and Kahn blood and other necessary laboratory tests, can be secured within your means from an experienced family physician, or from the Public Health Institute. Treatment also is available through the Institute and many free clinics for those without funds.

The Public Health Institute was organized more than ten years ago to combat "social diseases" (syphilis and gonorrhea) in Chicago. Every facility necessary for competent and reliable medical service is provided. Members of its medical staff are experienced and are registered by the State. All treatment and advice are given by these men and women physicians.

The fees are within the reach of all. The first examination is only $3.00, and includes Wassermann and Kahn blood and other laboratory tests. Six consecutive treatments in the Urological or Gynecological Departments for $4.00. Examination and treatment are available to those without immediate funds. No one is turned away because of inability to pay.

More details of this subject will be found in Leaflets Nos. 1 and 2 sent free on request.

Announcement . . . This advertisement has been submitted to and been approved by the Medical Advisory Board which has been formed at the invitation of the Trustees. It is published by a health agency established for public service to inform the public of the dangers of "social diseases," of the importance of securing good medical care, and the facilities whereby this can be obtained.

PLANNING GROUP URGES NEW ROAD LINK WITH GARY

Favors Calumet Parkway Development.

With the relief of traffic congestion east of Gary assured by the recent awarding of contracts for the construction of a 40 foot highway to be known as the Dunes Relief road, the Chicago Regional Planning association is seeking a link to Chicago in the proposed Calumet parkway. The Indiana highway commission has commented favorably on the project, but has not committed itself definitely.

The Dunes Relief highway is situated south of the present Dunes highway, a 20 foot pavement, and will connect Gary with the Indiana-Michigan state line. The two highways will give motorists 60 feet of outlet to the east of Gary, which will shift congestion to the west of that city.

The most popular route from Chicago to Gary at present is the tortuous route along South Shore drive, Indianapolis boulevard and winding along the lake cities. A second route, which is longer, is by way of Calumet and Sibley avenues, entering Gary in 15th street. These are for the greater portion of the distance 20 foot pavements. The third route, by way of Torrence avenue and Ridge avenue to 23d street, Gary, is rarely traveled.

Wants New Connection.

"It is evident that with the completion of the new eastern route the problem of congestion will move westward," said Robert Kingery, secretary of the planning association. "It is imperative that there should be an adequate connection with Chicago if the new road is to be of full service."

The planning association proposed several years ago a 40 foot pavement along the banks of the Little Calumet river. The route was suggested for completion for the 1933 World's Fair. Under the plan the Indiana state highway commission would complete a stretch from Gary to the Illinois-Indiana state line and later from Gary to La Porte.

The Cook county board has declared itself willing to complete two miles of paving to Torrence avenue and later an additional mile to Stony Island avenue, the widening and improvement of which is part of the program of the Chicago Plan commission and the Calumet harbor improvement.

"Would Give Adequate Link."

"Lake Calumet presents a difficulty in linking Chicago with Gary," Mr. Kingery said. "However, the construction of Calumet Park way and the development of the southern portion of Stony Island would provide adequate connection with Chicago. Such a connection is imperative for the best interests of northern Indiana as well as the Chicago community."

KILLS DIVORCED WIFE AND THEN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Miss Frances M. Brown, 22 years old, 2136 W. Garfield boulevard, was shot to death early yesterday while riding with her former husband, John M. Rork, 32 years old, a salesman of Pontiac, Ill., on the Dunes highway near Miller, Ind. Rork was shot twice in the chest, apparently by his own hand, and was in a serious condition at the Mercy hospital, Gary.

The couple were divorced last April, and according to the woman's father, George M. Brown, Rork had been trying to effect a reconciliation for several weeks and had become so threatening in his demands that the father had caused him to be placed under a peace bond of $1,000. Rork is believed to have met his former wife on Friday night when she left work at the J. W. Johns Paper company, 2201 South Union avenue.

The one witness to the shooting was James Frederick, 303 West Marquette road, who was driving a truck on the highway and saw the Rork car approaching him about 5 a. m. The car swerved suddenly, swung to the side of the road and stopped. Frederick left his truck and found that the woman, who had been driving, was dead, a bullet wound in her head. Rork gasped, "I'm shot," and lapsed into unconsciousness. A pistol was at his feet.

In the rear of the car was a letter addressed to Rork's mother, Mrs. J. W. Rork, Pontiac, Ill., which contained $300 and a crude will directing that his property be turned over to the mother.

Mother of 17 Children Wins Divorce for Cruelty

Mrs. Mary MacDonald, 1947 West Washington boulevard, the mother of seventeen children, yesterday won a divorce from Peter MacDonald, a laborer, before Superior Judge Lewis. Mrs. MacDonald testified her husband has been extremely jealous of her during 27 years of married life and has often beat her because he believed she had flirted with other men. Mrs. MacDonald is 55 years old and her husband is 61. They were married in 1893 at Lake Linden, Mich.

FROM COLOMBO, CEYLON

This letter, from W. F. Wallace in Colombo, was in response to a classified ad in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE. Mr. Wallace wrote the Wagner company:

"I have just noticed your advertisement in the Classified ads of Chicago Sunday newspaper. I wish you will send me the green Tag booklet. . . I will be very glad to hear from you, and receive any literature you have. Thanking you ever so much."

Colombo is the principal seaport and modern capital of Ceylon. World tourists recall it as one of the ports of call. Its harbor has been greatly improved by the building of a great breakwater.

Ceylon, a crown colony of Great Britain, is an island in the Indian ocean. It lies just off the coast of peninsular India.

STATE GASOLINE TAX PYRAMIDING BRINGS PROTEST

Dangerous Practice, Says Auto Body Head.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Pyramiding of state gasoline taxes and the use of gasoline tax money for other than road building purposes were condemned as dangerous practices today by Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association.

During the 1929 sessions of the state legislatures no less than 21 states increased the taxes on the motorist by boosting the gasoline tax. Mr. Henry pointed out. While the year 1930 opened with every state in the Union collecting the tax New York passed a gasoline tax law for the first time in 1929 and Illinois repassed the law eliminating provisions which caused the first act in 1928 to be declared unconstitutional.

Points to Easy Collections.

Because of the ease with which it is levied and collected, a number of states have yielded to the temptation to keep pushing it up and to divert a part of the proceeds for special projects aside from highway construction, he said.

Mr. Henry cited the proposal coming before the New Jersey voters on Tuesday for the floating of two bond issues for purposes that have no connection with highways, although the bonds would be retired by an increase in the gas tax rates.

Warns Against Precedent.

"As if it were not thought that the gas tax in some states should be diverted for schools, sea walls, and fish hatcheries," he said, "New Jersey now comes along with the proposal to saddle the expense of state institutions and inland waterways in the amount of $17,000,000 on users of the highways. If the proposal is successful and the precedent followed by other states it will ultimately prove the undoing of the gas tax."

Protesting against the tendency in many states to pyramid gasoline taxes year after year, Mr. Henry said that in 1925 only one state had a rate of 5 cents a gallon; thirteen had a rate of 3 cents, and twenty-two had a rate of 2 cents. Today, he added, three states collect 6 cents a gallon; eight collect 5 cents a gallon; twenty collect 4 cents a gallon, and nine collect 3 cents a gallon.

Trustee of Policemen's Pension Fund Elected

After campaigning for a month, Frank Sullivan, a retired policeman, yesterday defeated George Dihel in the election for trustee of the policemen's pension fund to represent the retired members of the police department. Sullivan received 1,209 votes and Dihel, 787. The term of office is three years.

NAB 3 POLICEMEN CHARGED WITH SHAKEDOWN PLOT

Three Chicago policemen were arrested by federal prohibition agents yesterday on charges of posing as federal officers to extort protection money from a Lansing roadhouse operator. They were Patrolman James O'Donnell, 8557 Justine street, of the Maxwell street station; Patrolman William Bresnahan, 5222 South Union avenue, of the Woodlawn station, and Patrolman John Walsh, 7938 South Michigan avenue, of the Gresham police.

According to Agent Al Aman, the policemen promised to protect Herman Horn, operator of a roadhouse at Schultz drive and Ada street, Lansing, against raids for $500. Horn said he paid them $400 and arranged to pay the other $100 in front of a glue factory in Torrence avenue, Lansing, at noon yesterday.

In the meantime, Horn's place was raided and a still was found, whereupon he complained of the policemen's promise. He was given marked money to pay the patrolmen, but this had not been turned over when the arrest was made yesterday. The officers were taken to the detective bureau to be held without charge until tomorrow, when they will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Walker. Acting Police Commissioner Alcock suspended the men pending the federal inquiry. The defendants refused to answer questions of the investigators.

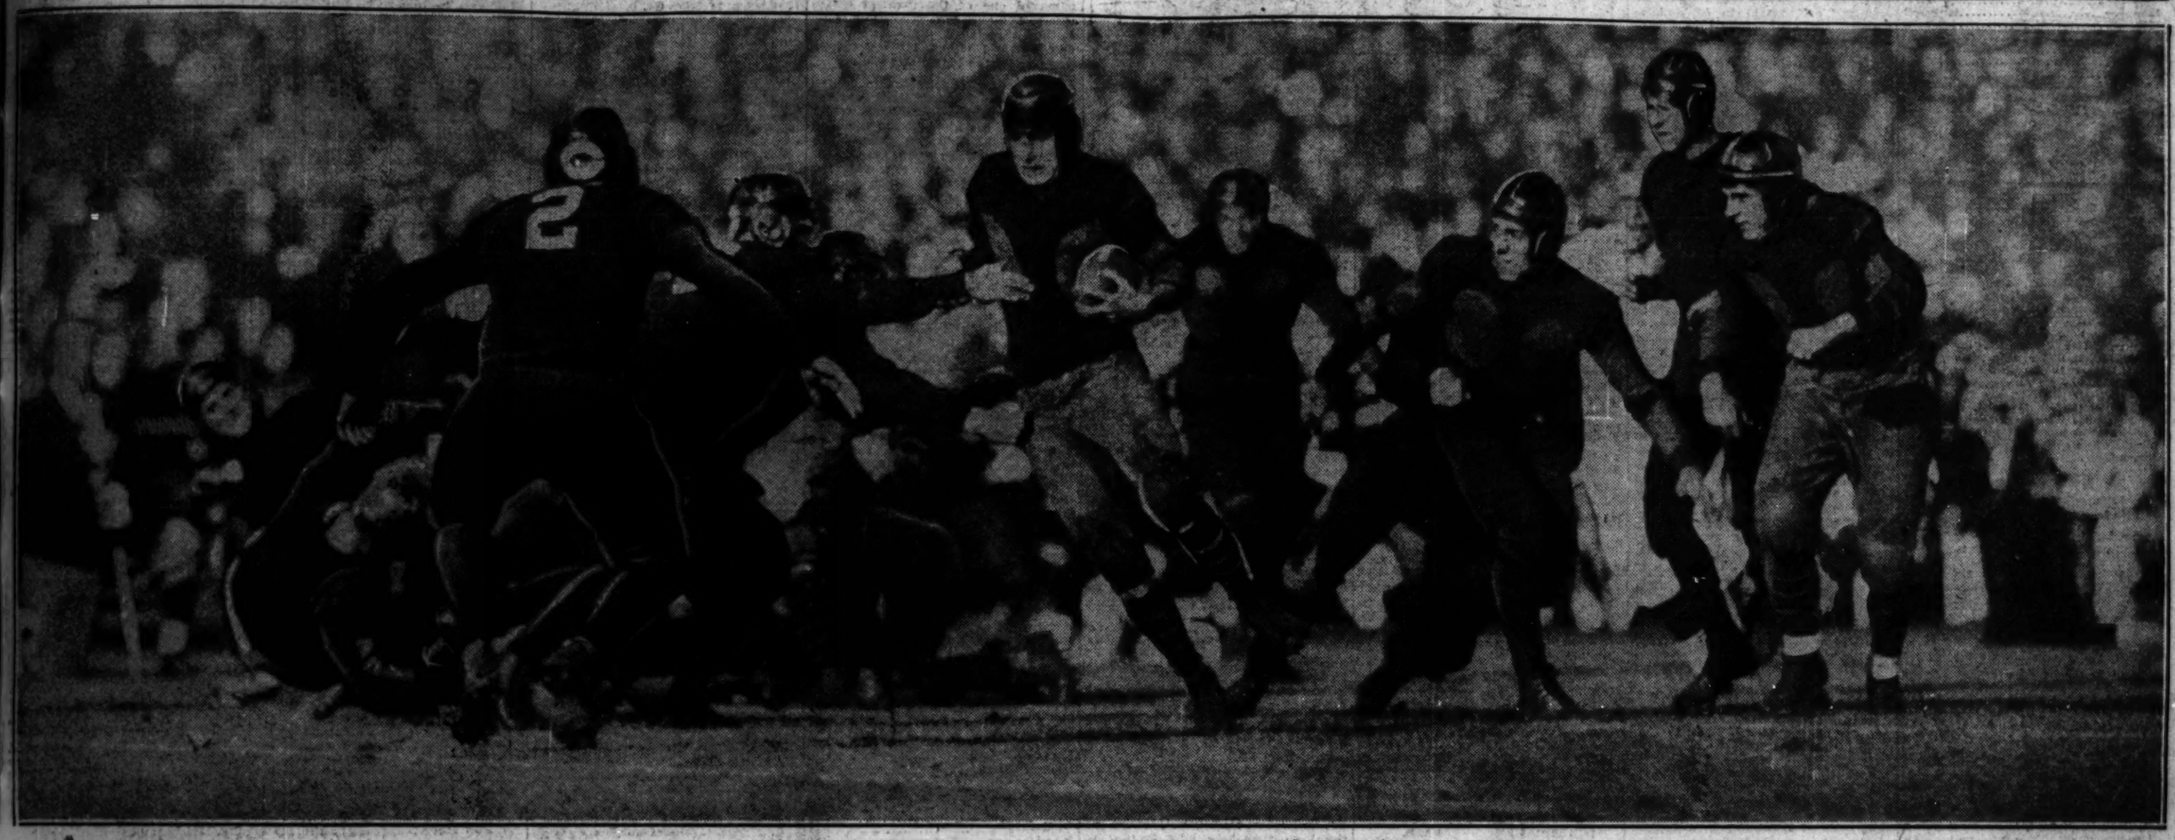
N. U. PASSES, PLUNGES TO 27-6 VICTORY

CHICAGO AND PRINCETON BATTLE TO 0-0 SCORE BEFORE 35,000

WHEN EAST MEETS WEST IT'S NOBODY'S FOOTBALL GAME



Chicago and Princeton battled to a scoreless tie in the fourth football contest between the two schools yesterday on the Midway, but Maroon fans received a scare late in the final quarter when Princeton blocked a punt and recovered on Chicago's thirteen yard line. Scenting a touchdown, Princeton sent in Trix Bennett at half back. He immediately was given the ball and is carrying it for a three yard gain at right tackle. On the next play Bennett hurled a pass which was incomplete and then he picked up two more yards in a smash at the line. On fourth down, Bennett tossed another pass, but it rolled over the goal line for a touchback and Chicago's goal was safe. The game ended a few minutes later without either team threatening again.

MAROONS BRACE FOUR TIMES TO REPULSE TIGERS' THREATS

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Chicago and Princeton football eleven yesterday played to a scoreless tie in a combat which, for lack of a better name, was termed for the cultural championship. It attracted 35,000 to Stagg field.

Alternately the Maroon of Chicago and the Orange and Black of Princeton carried by 10,000 Old Nassau partisans, waved on high with the varying fortunes of the opposing teams.

The tied count accurately reflected the respective prowess of the teams. While Chicago gained more ground from scrimmage and registered nine first downs to six by Princeton, the Tigers had four opportunities to score against two for Chicago.

Those had not known the previous records of the teams, studded with events, and had wandered into the enclosure open minded, he easily could have come away with the impression that he had seen a great gridiron combat, full of thrills, daring attack, desperate defense and all the prowess thrown at winning eleven. It was that kind of a game.

Long Passes Frequent.

If one were sour minded in advance, he would say neither eleven had an effective attack, that Princeton did not earn one of its six first downs by crushing, and that the issue was full of passes of the "prayer" rather than the "spot" variety.

It is true neither Maroons nor Tigers had an attack which gained consistently. Neither had the offensive punch to take the ball over the line by rushes when in the scoring zone. This impotency was due in large part, however, to lines which practiced more defense than offense. Time and again, linemen charged through to take opposing ball carriers for a loss.

Conservatism in tactics, which might be expected from cultural contenders, was more notable for its absence than its presence. Passes when punts were the orthodox procedure were numerous. Often these passes were from deep in the passing team's own territory. The oval several times was changed hands in a manner to make an old time "safety first" advocate gasp. These young men on both teams were trying to win, not to tie, and their tactics indicated just that.

The first scoring menace, belonging to Princeton, came in the second period when Chicago lost the ball on downs at the Tigers' 46 yard line as several passes failed. On second down Bonsor shot an aerial to Howson at Chicago's 22 yard line. Three downs netted only 7 yards and then the oval went over on an incompleted pass.

Tigers Muff Second Chance.

Near the end of the period Princeton had another opportunity. Bogar intercepted a Chicago pass at the Maroon 45 yard line. Bogar then added two heaves of 15 yards each to Howson and the oval rested on the Maroon 15 yard mark. Wister was unable to grasp a pass over the line into the end zone as the half ended.

Another Tiger opportunity offered in the third period when Knudson's punt was partially blocked and James returned to the Maroon 47 yard line, where Chicago was penalized 15 yards for some unexplained reason. On third down thereafter Bogar completed a pass to Byles at Chicago's 17 yard line. Three downs yielded no gain, so Purnell was called from the side lines for a place kick, which failed.

In the fourth period Chicago recorded a wasted opportunity. Stackler intercepted a pass and was on his way to a touchdown when brought down by McIver at Princeton's 13 yard line. Wallace and Knudson gained 7 yards. Then a pass into the end zone grounded.

Shortly thereafter Birney's punt on fourth down was blocked and Princeton had the oval at Chicago's 13 yard line. Desperate Maroon linemen resisted two thrusts at their right tackle, a pass grounded, and James, with Bennett holding, took position for a place kick. It was a fake with a pass into the end zone, which was incomplete.

Maroons Come Close.

Toward the end of the period Chicago gained the ball on downs at Princeton's 45 yard line. The Tigers elected to pass rather than punt to safety, which created the situation. Stagg completed a long pass to Wien at Princeton's 15 yard line. The first Maroon pass failed. Then Stagg sailed a pass into the scoring zone with Maroons and Tigers jumping for it. It bounded off to Kanne, who seemed to have it and the ball game, but it escaped him as he fell to the ground clutching desperately to keep the elusive sphere from hitting the turf. Princeton thus took the ball at its 20 yard line, and the game ended a minute later.

Statistics show that Chicago gained nine first downs, four from scrimmage, four by passes and one on a penalty, to six for Princeton, all by passes. Chicago gained 71 yards from scrimmage and Princeton 36 yards. Chicago completed 5 of 20 forward passes for 42 yards, with 3 intercepted. Princeton completed eight of 27 for 133 yards, with one intercepted.

Outsiders Top Winners on Chicago Turf

BY FRENCH LANE.

Except that 35 per cent of the favorites raced first past the winning post, the racing season of 156 days which just ended in Chicago brought numerous upsets.

One would naturally suspect that the leading trainer would hail from Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland, New York, or some other center where the thoroughbreds have been running many more years that they have in Chicago.

Yet the leading trainer of the Chicago season was A. A. Baroni of Reno, Nev., who admits he doesn't know much about horses, having been engaged in the taxicab business longer than he has in the race horse game.

It ordinarily would be a good guess that the leading jockey of a 156 day season would come from Louisville, Lexington, Baltimore, New York, New Orleans, Mexico, Havana, or some other city where horses are constantly in training and where there has been much racing in the last dozen years.

Hanford Leads Jockeys.

But the leading jockey of the Chicago season was Buddy Hanford, a kid from Oklahoma, and his nearest rivals were Charley Corbett, from California, and George Depeso, a lad from around Chicago.

The owners and horses ran true to form. Hal Price Headley of Kentucky was the leading money winning owner. Gallant Fox, bred in Kentucky, but owned by William Woodward of New York, whose Belair stud farm is located in Maryland, was the highest money winning horse because he captured the rich classic at Arlington. So the Kentuckians, Marylanders, and the New Yorkers all cheer over this victory.

Attendance at the four big Chicago tracks and Aurora was probably 10 per cent lighter than it was the year previous, which means that there was a season's paid attendance close to one million. But due to business and industrial conditions, the track managers, particularly during the August, September and October racing, handed out many more passes than in any previous year, so perhaps the total attendance at the tracks in the Chicago district was close to 1,250,000.

Mutuel Figures Are Secret.

And the betting handle. The exact or even approximate figures are a secret as far as the track proprietors are concerned. The state collects no revenue off the betting so the records of the wagering are not available, except when the track owners desire to make them public.

At some of the Chicago tracks, it has been learned, that the betting was 30 per cent lighter than last year. At others it was off 20 per cent. It held up better at Arlington Park and Washington Park than at the other courses and was off at these tracks only a little more than 10 per cent, according to reports.

Players of form will probably be shocked to learn that a higher percentage of favorites won at Aurora last spring than on any other track

Passes were flying thick and fast late in the second quarter of the Maroon-Tiger game. After intercepting a toss on the Chicago 45 yard line, the eastern eleven completed two aerials and the ball was on the Maroon 15 yard line. There was just time for one more play and Princeton again attempted a pass which rolled harmlessly across the goal line as the half ended. A Maroon is pursuing the bounding oval while Wister, to whom the pass was directed, is sprawling along with a Chicagoan. McKenzie and Knudson are the two Chicago players at the right.

BOILERMAKERS HAMMER ILLINI FOR 25-0 VICTORY

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 1.—The Boilermakers from old Purdue hammered to a third Western conference victory this afternoon in Memorial stadium. Once in each quarter the golden shirted lads, defending champions, thrust aside the blue of Illinois to wrest their first victory in 25 years from their neighboring rivals.

Purdue, 25; Illinois, 0. By this score did Purdue win its third consecutive Big Ten triumph and by this score did Illinois lose its third straight battle.

Fighting, but Inexperienced.

Fighting Illini? Yes, but inexperience sat heavy on their shoulders. Their frenzied defense, cheered by thousands who came to laud gameness in the face of almost certain defeat, broke repeatedly of its own fury. Outweighed, they yielded before the power that was Purdue's. Yielded, but did not quit. And these fighting youngsters were praised in defeat as many are not praised in victory.

Thirty thousand banked between the goal lines of the field Illinois has dedicated to its heroes watched the unequal combat. At no time did Illinois threaten. Its attack along the ground could not gain; its attack by air was also impotent. But at the end of the battle these thousands rose, for one last cheer, a cheer for Illini courage.

Purdue played as champions play. Its veterans were cautious, yet con-

Trojans' Reserves Defeat Denver University, 33-13

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The University of Southern California first team was in the lineup only three minutes today, but the Trojans defeated Denver university, 33 to 13, in an uninteresting contest before 20,000 spectators. Denver's scores resulted from passes.

U. S. Army Polo Team Wins in Argentine Series

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Led by Capt. C. W. Wilkinson, the United States army polo team defeated Los Pinguinosh quartet of Argentina, 13 to 5, in the opening match of the Argentine national championship.

WISCONSIN, OHIO GO NOWHERE IN 60 MINUTES, 0-0

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Nov. 1.—Year after year Wisconsin's football disappointments continue to pile up. Its best team in a decade ran into another here today before 40,488 paid spectators. Doped to win, and confident that they would, the cardinal clad athletes were held to a nothing to nothing tie by an underdog Ohio State eleven which previously had been mangled by Northwestern and Michigan. Through it all there was a trace of Badger superiority, but it wasn't enough to shove the Scarlet and Gray back across their goal line. That one point defeat at Purdue a week ago undoubtedly left Wisconsin a bit groggy.

Badgers Start with Rush.

No lengthy dashing back and forth by speedy, eel-like individuals marked this fight. It was just a steady grinding for a few yards at a time, with the Badgers always having an edge which proved worthless. The Badger line was too much for the Buckeyes, but not enough to keep Ohio's secondary defense from being effective. As for Ohio's attack, it was mainly a matter of Wes Fesler and Lewis Hinchman, but neither ever went very far. The longest journey of the pair was taken by Fesler in the fourth period when, a badly bruised youngster, he staggered out of the picture. It was his first removal for injury in three years of collegiate effort.

AERIALS START GOPHERS' ROUT IN 2D QUARTER

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 1.—Northwestern this afternoon flashed about everything in the book, including an old fashioned guard around play for a touchdown, to crush Minnesota, 27 to 6.

The variety of the Purple attack made the game an interesting spectacle despite the topheavy score. And there was solace, too, for the homecoming Maroon and Gold partisans, for they saw a brave team, outclassed in skill, fight like everything until the final gun. Also they had at least one big thrill, for it was Peewee McDougal, a 140 sub half back, who supplied the most stirring episode of the afternoon.

McDougal got the ball in midfield on a lateral pass and squirmed through the entire pack of Wildcats for a 50 yard run to a touchdown, Hank Bruder and other stars sprawling in startled consternation after futile efforts to tackle the little fellow.

First Quarter Scoreless.

The score was nothing to nothing at the end of the first quarter, but in the second half the Evanston fellows opened up their highly advertised aerial attack. A pass, Rantner to Baker, was good for 40 yards and the first touchdown of the game, and a little later in the quarter another pass play, Rantner to Baker to Hanley, was good for a 72 yard gain and a touchdown.

In the third quarter Jack Manders, a crashing full back whose aim in life is apparently to carry on the Joesting-Nagurski tradition for bone crushing, undertook to give the Evanstonians a few lessons in severe line bucking. He did quite well for awhile, but he put notions into the head of Reb Russell. And the rest of the way Reb showed the 51,379 paid customers something to remember in line pounding. Through his irrepressible hammering Russell easily became the standout of the contest and further established himself as one of the leading powerhouse boys in the conference.

Guard Around Play Scores.

The third Northwestern touchdown was started after Moore had intercepted a pass on his own 43 yard line. Russell then started the first of his drives and as pretty a series of line bucks as you ever saw. Reb carried the ball on eight successive plays to the four yard line. Then, when the whole Gopher team was focusing its defense on the young man for the next play, the red headed Mr. Woodworth pulled out of his guard position, took the ball, and ran around his left tackle for the number 3 touchdown.

Both teams scored in the fourth quarter, Northwestern doing it first and Russell again functioning as the big shot of the enterprise. This time Reb continued his thrusts to the end of the act, making the touchdown on his

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 1.—Notre Dame turned on the power for about twenty minutes this afternoon, and with Marty Brill, Marchy Schwartz, and Joe Savoldi ripping the Indiana line to shreds, marched to a 27 to 0 victory.

The shock troops started the game with the understanding that they would stay in as long as they could stand the going, but the Hoosiers proved a bit too tough and when the second string boys failed to score after nearly two quarters, they were taken out.

Even the regulars were held off a few minutes and the half ended, 0 to 0, but immediately after the intermission the fire works began.

Joe Savoldi, heavy duty man of the Irish back field, slanted off tackle and without swerving a hair's breadth from a bee line, trampled over three or four Hoosiers and went 35 yards for a touchdown.

Notre Dame took the next kickoff on its own 30 yard line and the big parade began once again. With the Irish forwards opening great holes in the Hoosier line, Schwartz, Brill and Savoldi lugged and plugged to Indiana's 27 yard mark. There Schwartz slid through tackle and shook loose for another touchdown.

Start Another March.

Again the Irish began a long march. End runs, plunges, and a penalty made first down on the Hoosier 45 yard line. Savoldi split the forward wall wide open and on the next play Brill galloped around end for 33 yards and a touchdown.

This was the first time that Brill has carried the ball over the goal line in his two seasons at Notre Dame. All last year he was used as a blocking half back. But this season he has been given a chance to do some plain and fancy ball carrying on his own hook, and he has proved himself one of the ablest of all.

Carideo missed the kick after this score and it was the only one he missed all day long. He played his usual flawless game at quarter back, directing the team as though he were an engineer with his hands on the throttle, turning on the power at will.

Schwartz Runs 78 Yards.

But the thrills weren't over yet, for immediately after the next kickoff, Schwartz made the most spectacular play of the afternoon. He found a hole at left tackle, shook himself into the clear and dashed 78 yards. He was dragged down just short of the goal line.

It looked as though Notre Dame might lose this chance to score, for they were penalized five yards for off side on the first attempt. But on the next play Brill hammered off tackle and hurled himself over the goal line for the final touchdown of the day.

Indiana showed themselves a scrappy team and held their own against the shock troops by some splendid work by Koken and Mullins who is rated on a par with Savoldi. They even made Notre Dame regulars perk up a bit just before the intermission.

Saluski Dashes 23 Yards.

They made first down on Notre Dame's 43 yard line and then Stan Saluski, former star at Parker High of Chicago, broke through to the 30 yard line. But they were held without gain on three plays and lost their one chance to score when Dauer's place kick was short.

In yards gained from scrimmage, Notre Dame totaled 433 to Indiana's 76 and the Irish had the best of their opponents on first downs, 14 to 4. Neither team was able to do anything by way of the aerial route, each completing only one pass. Notre Dame attempted 14 and Indiana six.

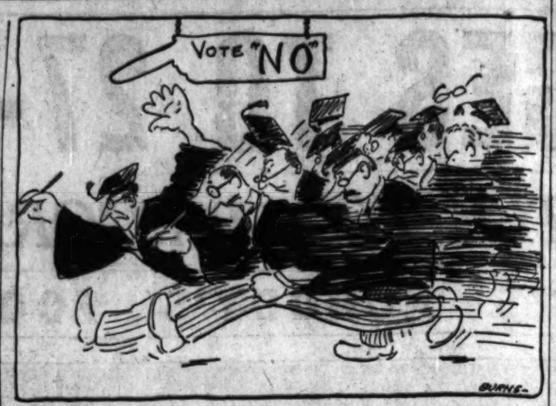
Now It Is Revealed Why Three Big 10 Schools Freeze Out Authors

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 1.—For several years now we've been wondering how it happens that the press sections in the three northernmost stadia of the Big Ten are the only ones with inadequate shelter facilities.

Now we have a clew. We suspect that the architects who designed the football plants at Minnesota, Michigan, and Wisconsin suggested it would be a good idea to inclose the press boxes in glass, and the jolly nine professors of the Western conference just naturally had to vote "no."

It is an established fact that the jolly nine professors have a passion for voting "no" and here was a swell chance for a big rousing negative. The architects erred when they did not so word their suggestion that the habitual faculty "no" would in effect have meant "yes." The jolly nine professors are not vicious gentlemen.



Probably Wouldn't Have Frowned on Inclosure.

If they had been able to exercise their "no" prerogative, no doubt they would have had no objection to the installation of modern press facilities at Minnesota, Michigan, and Wisconsin. But maybe we're wrong about the whole thing.

Understand, we're not mad at the jolly nine, or any other group of professors, or any one professor. We always have loved the campus and class room environment and the last big cry we ever had was when, on commencement day, we discovered at the last minute, that the moths had been at our rented cap and gown, completely gnawing the tassel off the former.

All the professors we know are sincere, polished gentlemen and, as we have observed before, molders of character. We do not attribute to any professor any of the baser reactions, such as jealousy, and some of the bloodiest fist fights we have ever been in were arguments with fellows who hinted that it burned up the professors because football coaches got such heavy dough, not only as salary but in side industries, such as authoring, broadcasting, after-dinner speaking, and inspirational luncheon appearances.

Gets Into Fight with Fellow Belittling Prof.

Why, just the other day we got in a fight with a fellow while we were talking about Knute Rockne getting twelve grand for eight magazine articles, and he said he knew a professor who worked 27 years on material for one thesis for which he got $20. This fellow said that was too much for the professor and that the $13,000 was not enough for Mr. Rockne. We like Mr. Rockne, but this fellow's dig at the professor made us furious.

It seems that the professor got curious about what a freshly weaned amoeba would do if fed cologne spirits. This was in the spring of 1902.

According to this fellow's story, the professor worked until late in October, 1903, before he could catch an amoeba that had just been weaned. Then he discovered that the laboratory janitor had used his cologne spirits for beverage purposes. It was two more years before the professor could catch the right kind of an amoeba and have the spirits at hand. At first, the amoeba rebelled at taking spirits in its food vacuoles, but finally surrendered, and when it did, became hilarious for a time, then sullen, winding up by growling at its grandma.

Prohibition Interferes with Research Work.

The professor, so the fellow said sneeringly, kept giving cologne spirits to young amoebas over a period of years, not making a cent out of same. In fact he would have been out of money but for the fact that he was professor at a state university and the taxpayers were paying for the cologne spirits.

Then came prohibition. The professor quit feeding cologne spirits to the amoebas and lived up to the letter of the law in every way. But he still was deeply interested in his research.

Now this professor had a brother-in-law who was a traveling salesman, and one night when the brother-in-law came out to the house for supper, he pulled a flask of gin out of his satchel. This shocked the professor, who had no idea such things were going on, but in the end the professor yielded to temptation and took a tablespoonful of the gin and saved it, never hinting what he wanted it for.

27 Years of Work Finally Rewarded.

In a few weeks the professor had caught a beautiful young amoeba—strong, vigorous, spirited and with a clear eye. As the professor pumped the traveling salesman's gin into the amoeba's food vacuoles the poor thing writhed hysterically. As the poison spread the amoeba's contractile vacuole disappeared. Then the amoeba died.

The professor collected all his 27 year's data and wrote a piece which he sold to a professional temperance reformer for $20, $10 of which he actually received.

Penalty Nullifies Touchdown by Booth, So Yale, Dartmouth Produce Two Zeros

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 1.—Like a congressional committee investigating conditions, Yale and Dartmouth indulged in a great display of sound and fury in the bowl this afternoon for a net result of nothing at all. Neither side scored and the end of the contest was a let down for the sixty odd thousand people who sat by expecting something substantial to happen in a stormy mêlée of more than two hours' duration.

Dartmouth's great line wavered and broke before the rush of the Yale line in the first half and Albie Booth, who played the entire game, got loose once to scamper off to his right behind a powerful sweep of interference, only to be called back from the goal because some one on his side had been guilty of holding way off to the left, far from the course of the play. It was an upsetting incident for the Yale people to lose the touchdown, but Albie tossed the ball back in and gave every indication of having nothing to say.

Bitter Medicine for Yale.

Before that, on a fourth down, about sixteen yards from the goal and with only a couple of yards to go for another first down, Albie had grounded a forward pass in the end zone, so the Yale bowl was near brimming over with bitter medicine when things came to a close. The final play was an attempted drop kick for a field goal.

Dartmouth, invigorated by some oratory in the intermission, came out for the second half in a much more combative mood and the last rush found the Indians thirteen yards from the goal on their third down. At this point, with only a few seconds to play, Bill McCall of Muskegon, Mich., a substitute back, withdrew a discreet distance and drop kicked in a final play for a victory that would have been Dartmouth's first in almost half a century of intermittent conflict. He missed immortality by a very perceptible span and play ended as the referee's arms wigwagged the melancholy verdict: "No good! no good."

That young man might have had statues built for him if the football had flown true. The way of things in the first half was quite surprising because the stout Dartmouth forward guard of Barber, Bromberg, Andres, Hoffman, and Crehan, a group of the most impressive repute, found themselves being pushed around and walked upon by opponents who were popularly imagined to be no match for the likes of them.

Dartmouth Star End Out.

Stan Yudickey, Dartmouth's regular right end, was unable to play because of injuries suffered in the Harvard game a week ago and there was a weakness amounting almost to a vacancy as the Yale backs escorted Booth and Crowley around that way. Two young men, Branch and Connelly, tried to fill in for Yudickey, but it just seemed that somebody was always moving them out of the way.

He got no mention in the statistics, but if any checkup were possible it probably would be learned that Fred Loeser, the Yale center, nosed into more turmoil than any other individual seen on the field all afternoon. He was always the key log in the jam, and in the first half, before he began to feel the effects of his labors, he was generally the one who stopped the Dartmouth plunges, immovable, enthusiastic, and apparently immune.

Dartmouth's attack was stopped before it could develop in the first half of the game, as the Yale men slid through their line and hustled the backs into premature flights. In this portion of the fight Booth was calling on Crowley, the big, loping full back, and Dunn for errands with the ball to deceive and upset a defense that was watching principally for him.

Yale Makes First Down.

The first period was nearing the end when Albie's team got the ball on a punt about midfield and rushed it to a first down at Dartmouth's 25 yard line, with Crowley and Booth running the ends or sliding off the tackles. Crowley and Dunn then made three apiece in two assaults straight into the line and Booth got about three in a cut back play, whereupon, with another first down to be had for the trouble of calling the play, Albie called for a pass and fired the ball into the end zone.

A few minutes later, Mackey of Dartmouth, a substitute end, swept in and blocked one of Booth's punts. There was furious action for an instant as half a dozen men hurled themselves at the ball and Andres, the Dartmouth captain, landed on it at Yale's 25 yard line. The Dartmouth offense did a stationary march, however, and when Yale got the ball at the same spot on downs, Booth made a quick kick over Morton's head to Dartmouth's two yard line. Booth had the wind with him and this was no little help in the long gain on the punt, but the stratagem of the unexpected kick was partly responsible for the turn that was now leading to Albie's mock touchdown.

Albie's Called Back.

Dartmouth couldn't gain from the two yard line and Morton's return punt went only to his 30 yard line. From this spot, on the next play, Albie loped slowly out toward the wing, with Crowley, Dunn, Parker and, perhaps a running guard for an escort, got clear, dodged the despairing lunge of Morton the safety man, and dashed over the goal.

Then he had to give the ball back and Yale, instead of winning the game right there, took a fifteen yard penalty for some lineman's disrespect of the law.

Albie tried to kick a field goal before the first half ended, toeing a drop-kick from the forty yard line, but it was exceedingly futile, fetching far off to the side line and ten yards short of the goal.

Their indiscretion cost both sides great yardage, Yale 50 and Dartmouth 55, but there was only one conviction for undue cussedness, that one when some Dartmouth boy bore down on Albie as he got away a punt and dealth him a double straight arm poke on his chest, knocking him flat.

Costs Indians 15 Yards.

Albie bounced up, not angry, but terribly, terribly grieved and the bump cost Dartmouth 15 yards. Otherwise the greatest consideration was shown Albie and often when he was laid hold of, he quietly surrendered without putting his captors to the necessity of slamming him flat. When the game ended, Albie rushed over to two of the Dartmouth boys, Nims and McCall who had been snatching at him an instant before, grabbed their heads, and pummeled them with the familiarity of a friend and neighbor of long standing.

Prize fighters often do this as showing that everything has been all in fun, or anyway, all in the day's business, but it was a new gesture in football and the crowd seemed to appreciate the assurance that all was pleasant at closing time.

Morton Leads Green Attack.

Morton was the mighty man of Dartmouth's late drive down the field and there was a moment there in the final quarter when he looked like Al Marsters in his great series of smashes at Yale, this date a year ago, which ended when he cracked his spine. Morton, too, suddenly seemed to give out and was replaced by a fresh and skittish back, McCall.

Yale scored six first downs, all by rushing, in the first half, to one for Dartmouth. In the end they had eight first downs apiece. Booth carried the ball thirty times, and it was no fault of his that he didn't win the game for Yale.

MARQUETTE WINS OVER BOSTON, 6-0, ON FIELD GOALS

Graney Kicks 38 and 40 Yards for Scores.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Marquette university of Milwaukee, Wis., beat Boston college's football team, 6 to 0, here today when Myles Graney kicked two field goals from placement. It was Marquette's sixth consecutive victory of the season.

Graney's kicks, one in the third quarter and the other in the fourth, climaxed one of the greatest defensive battles ever seen at Fenway park. Boston threatened three times, but was repulsed either by intercepted passs or by the Marquette wall.

Sisk Returns Kickoff.

The Milwaukeeans' third quarter score came after an advance which began with the kickoff. Johnny Sisk ran the kick to his own 45 yard line and a pass took the ball to the Eagles' 33 yard line. Another pass put play on the 19 yard line, but a fumble halted the rush. Boston took the ball, only to fumble, and Wendt recovered for the Golden Avalanche on the Eagles' 21 yard line. Two tries at the line and a pass failing, Graney stepped back for the place kick at an angle and scored a 38 yard kick.

Frank Deig, Marquette full back intercepted a Boston pass with four minutes left in the fourth quarter and hurried the ball to the locals 32 yard line. Sisk made a first down with a 10 yard sweep at right end. Again line plays failed, and Graney went back on his 28 yard stripe and booted over the second place kick.

King Intercepts Pass.

A Marquette threat in the first quarter was stopped on incompleted passes after Joe King of Chicago, Hilltop guard, had intercepted a Boston throw on the easterners 23 yard line. Another intercepted pass by King on his own 8 yard line halted the Eagles principal threat in that round. The gun ended another Boston drive.

A 15 yard penalty placed the Eagles on Marquette's 35 yard line after the vistors had scored in the third quarter, and a pass advanced the locals to the 12 yard line. Four straight punches at the Milwaukee line netted but 8 yards, and Marquette punted out of danger. The game ended with Boston trying frantic passes, one of which was completed for a 10 yard gain to the Marquette 45 yard line as the game ended. Lineup and summary:

BROWN TIES SYRACUSE.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Brown football team battled Syracuse to a 16 to 16 tie in Archbold stadium today. Brown, blanked in the first period, the only one in which Syracuse scored, slowly built up its total, gaining six points in the second, seven in the third and three more in the fourth.

Syracuse scored all its 16 points in the first period.

In the last period with Syracuse regulars showing strain under the stubborn march of Brown and with only a few minutes to play, Gurli of Brown kicked from Syracuse's 25 yard mark. It went over. Before another play could be run off the game ended, tied.

Since 1905 Brown has not defeated the Orange. Today's clash was the eighth since 1905 and on each occasion Brown went scoreless. A scoreless tie in 1922 was the Bruins' best previous effort.

N. Y. U., 20; CARNEGIE TECH, 7.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 1.—[U. P.]—New York university's football team, its chances for a perfect season ruined by Fordham last Saturday, came back to defeat Carnegie Tech before 25,000 fans at Pitt stadium today, 20 to 7.

N. Y. U. scored two touchdowns to one for Carnegie in the first half, and completely outplayed the losers in the last two quarters, although they tallied only once.

The La Mark brothers, Joe and Herman, with Bob McNamara and Ernie Vavra, were the mainstays of the visitors' play. Joe La Mark made two of his team's touchdowns, and McNamara made the other. Vavra's work on the line helped N. Y. U. considerably. Dutch Eyth was the big ground gainer for Carnegie.

FORDHAM WINS, 18—2.

New York, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Uncovering a high stepping back field man who heretofore was wont to fumble at inopportune times, Fordham today turned back the Mountaineers of West Virginia for their sixth consecutive victory. The score was: Fordham, 18; West Virginia, 2.

W. AND M. TIES HARVARD.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 1. — [Special.]—An alert William and Mary football team which took advantage of a number of Harvard miscues prevented the Crimson varsity eleven from again crashing into the win column today. The teams battled to 13-13 before 20,000 surprised spectators.

NAVY STOPS METHODISTS.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Navy swept over West Virginia Wesleyan, 37 to 14, with new found power today. Middle touchdowns were scored by Tschirgi, Hagberg, Castree, and Hurley, while Battles and Wholf scored for the visitors on forward passes from Bachtel.

Kirn, most consistent of Navy backs, occupied the bench, resting for the Ohio State game next Saturday.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The University of Detroit was pushed from its place among the nation's undefeated football teams by the University of Iowa today as the Hawkeyes turned loose a substitute half back in the last period and won, 7 to 3.

John Warrington, the star of the day, replaced Leo Jensvold at the half during the second period. On the first play in the last quarter he scampered 52 yards for a touchdown. Jensvold kicked the extra point.

Parsacca Makes Field Goal.

Detroit had taken the lead in the third period when Bill O'Neill ran the ball back 30 yards to the Iowa 20 yard line. The Titans gained 12 yards on three line smashes and then Parsacca went back to the 32 yard line and kicked a field goal.

The game between the two teams today marked their first football meeting and the first time Detroit had played a Big Ten team. It was Iowa's first victory in four games and Detroit's first upset in five starts.

First Half Is Punting Duel.

The first half was scoreless, both teams trading punts, but seldom getting within scoring distance. Neither the Detroit nor the Iowa lines yielded to the onslaughts of the backfield men, Iowa failed repeatedly to complete forward passes.

After Detroit scored in the third period Iowa gathered its forces together and kept the ball in Detroit territory most of the period.

Washington State gained the first break when Ahlskog deflected Thompson's punt from behind his own goal line and Schwartz downed the ball on the Oregon State 9 yard line early in the first period. On the fourth down, Ellingsen reeled around left end and across the goal line.

Ohio's six yard mark, where an aimless pass over the goal brought the advance to a conclusion. In the second period they were back as deep as Ohio's 13 yard line, but the pistol marking the end of the half sounded before they could go farther.

Ohio in its attack had just as much sport as the Badgers so far as getting within scoring distance was concerned. In the opening period, after Wisconsin had been turned down with six yards to go, the Buckeyes ripped and passed on their way until they were halted with three yards to go. In the third period they ripped and passed some more for 45 yards, but there still remained 25 yards to travel when the advance ended. After this it was a matter of reckless passing by both factions, each of which was playing for the break that didn't appear.

Enemy Line Floors Fesler.

The end of Fesler, all-American, as a combatant resulted from his persistency to star in the rôle of a passer. Just as the third quarter ended Rebholz made the only bad punt of the fight. The Badgers had halted Ohio's march on the 25 yard line and after first down in three plays had been missed by a yard, Rebholz kicked. The punt went straight up and came down on Wisconsin's 42 yard line. As soon as the fourth period opened Fesler made a poor pass. He tried another and this time was rushed with such fervor that in the ensuing play he was completely flattened and had to leave.

Although it didn't score, Ohio carried out its practice of excelling its foe in yards advanced. They moved 164 yards against 159 for the Badgers. In the first two periods, however, Wisconsin had an edge of 82 yards against 64. Wisconsin had another edge in first downs, the records giving them 11 against 8. The Badgers accomplished 8 of their 11 by rushing and Ohio half of its 8 by passing.

Sammy Behr, the Badgers' right half, who played until exhaustion forced his removal near the close of the battle, was the busiest man of the day. He was in 18 plays for a total advance of 79 yards. Rebholz moved up this same distance in nine plays. Oman, Wisconsin's best plunger, netted 27 yards in 9 attempts. Holcomb led the Ohioans with 23 yards in 7 tries. Fesler was so well stopped that in 5 efforts to run or plunge he picked up only 16 yards.

Right after the first kickoff and a Wisconsin punt Horn, the Ohio full back, fumbled. Gnabah fell on the ball for Wisconsin on the foes' 35 yard line. Behr smashed the line without gain and then tried a pass which failed. Behr switched to the job of receiving a heave by Lusby, and it netted a first down on Ohio's 22 yard line.

Then Wisconsin Stops.

Gnabah slipped inside tackle for 4 yards and Lusby plunged for another first down on the 11 yard mark. It looked as if the Badgers weren't going to stop, but they did. Goldenberg, the Cardinal quarter, who played the entire game, was held in a smash at center. Gnabah also failed. Behr met the same fate. Behr's pass grounded, but the play was called back and Ohio was penalized five yards for offside. Then Lusby sailed a pass over the goal, but it went wild and the threat of a score faded.

Before the first period came to a close Ohio came up with one of its few advances into Wisconsin territory. Goldenberg threw a pass to Behr, but Horn blocked it and the ball shot into the air to come down into the arms of Bell, Ohio's Negro tackle. He was flattened on the Badgers' 34 yard line.

Hinchman tried the line without success and then shot a short lateral pass to Fesler. The Badgers were caught napping on the trick and Fesler scooted to the 19 yard line before being forced out of bounds. Fesler threw a forward to Hinchman for 14 yards, leaving the goal only 5 yards distant. Two line plays picked up two yards as the period ended.

The second period opened with Hinchman trying to break through his right tackle without success. As a last resort Fesler passed, but it was incomplete and the Badgers were relieved from this situation by getting possession of the ball on their own 3 yard line. Lusby lost no time punting out of danger.

Early in the third quarter Lusby punted to the one foot line. Fesler kicked back, and Rebholz returned it 10 yards to Ohio's 30 yard mark. Behr tried a line plunge and failed. Then he went back to the passing game. He threw one which was knocked down. He threw another, and this revealed Wisconsin's prize bit of bad luck for the day. Rebholz had scooted around to receive the toss. He was on about Ohio's three yard line and nobody was near him. He started to move to one side to make the catch, slipped, fell flat on his face, and what might have been a touchdown was just another incomplete pass. Lusby then punted over the Ohio goal.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

MICHIGAN FOOTBALL.

HARRY KIPKE.

AT about this time last year, just before the Harvard game, Michigan undergraduates and alumni in various cities were saying: "Harry Kipke is a fine fellow personally. He was one of Michigan's greatest athletes. But is he a football coach such as we need to bring victories?"

At that time Michigan had lost to three conference opponents in succession—Purdue, Ohio State, and Illinois. That was an unusual happening in Wolverine gridiron annals. Harvard was next; then Minnesota's powerful eleven and Iowa. The Grand Rapids alumni had not convened on the subject, but a few gloom specialists predicted Michigan would go through the season without taking a single major game.

The Wake went to Ann Arbor to report the Harvard game. We had not seen Michigan previously. We found a group of young men working hard for Harry Kipke, the fine fellow personally who had been one of Michigan's greatest athletes. We found Michigan spirit as we had known Michigan spirit of the past. Harvard, a good Harvard team which lost no other contest except to Dartmouth, was beaten, 14 to 12. Call it a lucky victory if you choose. It was accomplished by determined playing. Then Michigan beat Minnesota, 7 to 6, by a point after touchdown and played a scoreless tie with Iowa.

Now it is time for another Harvard game. Michigan has defeated Purdue, Ohio State, and Illinois, by which it was vanquished last year. Harry Kipke still is a fine fellow personally, one of Michigan's greatest athletes, and undergraduates and alumni now believe he is the kind of coach needed to bring victories.

Aside from the fact that this is his second instead of his first year at the coaching helm, Kipke has been aided by other conditions. Michigan's 1929 eleven lacked inspirational leadership and generalship.

Capt. Ducky Simrall of this year's team is a peppery chap—what Kipke calls "a good competitor." Then Harry Newman, sophomore quarter back, appeared on the scene as a forward passer and field general. So Michigan goes east to play Harvard next Saturday at least an equal choice in the minds of western football followers.

Coach Harry Kipke, for whom this yarn was intended, was a nine letter man at Michigan, playing half back on the eleven, center fielder on the baseball nine, and guard on the basketball five, graduating in 1924. Previously he had played four years of football, one year as captain; four years' baseball as catcher, and four years' basketball as guard, on the East Lansing High school teams.

The late Walter Eckersall awarded Kipke all-American honors. In 1922 he also gained half back position on Walter Camp's honorary team. Mr. Camp attended the opening of Ohio State's stadium in 1922 and saw Kipke score two of Michigan's three touchdowns after runs of 26 and 33 yards through broken fields. His exceptional punting kept Ohio State on the defensive. He was one of the greatest exponents of placed punts the west has ever known.

Following graduation Kipke was married to his Lansing boyhood sweetheart and went to the University of Missouri as assistant football coach and head baseball coach. He returned to Michigan as an assistant football coach the following fall and was there for three years. In the season of 1928 he was head coach at Michigan State college. He succeeded Tad Wieman as head coach at Michigan last fall.

Associated with Kipke in development of the varsity are Franklin Cappon, who played in the back fields of '20, '21, and '22; Jack Blott, all-American center of 1923; Benny Oosterbaan, all-American end of '25, '26, and '27, and George Veenker, besides several others to guide the B team and freshmen.

This young man of 29 years takes his work seriously, but he enjoyed football as a player. Therefore he believes that unless the boys enjoy their practice they will not be great football players. So he tries to think of ways to lighten the drudgery as such and to make it a playtime despite the Michigan policy of knowing the fundamentals of following the ball and blocking, which involve a certain amount of drudgery.

Another factor which has kept harmony at high pitch in the Wolverine coaching family is that Kipke is such a recent pupil of Director Yost, former coach, and knows his ways so well that he does not resent suggestions either to himself or his players from Yost. Now Yost, watching practice in civilian clothes, simply cannot refrain from a demonstration now and then, no matter how hard he tries. Especially is this so when critical games are ahead. By Kipke this is regarded rather a compliment than otherwise.

This summary, Wake readers, is the difference in Michigan football fortunes in twelve months.

Florida Halts Georgia Title March, 0 to 0

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Georgia's march toward national gridiron honors was blocked here today by a courageous Florida eleven which presented a steel-plated defense to halt every Georgia thrust and hold the Bulldogs, conquerors of Yale, to a scoreless tie.

Twice Georgia pounded at the doors of Florida's goal, but the slashing drives of Roberts, Chandler and Downes could do little more than knock off small chips from the Florida forward wall.

History repeated itself today, for two years ago on the same green turfed gridiron a determined band of Florida sophomores upset a heralded Georgia team, 26-6. These same sophomores, now seniors, rose to the zenith of their power today and withstood every assault on land and air that Georgia offered.

Georgia's powerful back field quartet ripped off long gains in midfield, and Jack Roberts, the full back, slashed through for 42 yards on one play, but whenever the Florida goal was near the Bulldogs lacked the touchdown punch.

ALABAMA SCORES 19 TO 0 VICTORY OVER KENTUCKY

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Alabama battered another Southern conference foe into oblivion today, defeating the University of Kentucky, 19 to 0.

John Henry Suther caught a 44 yard pass in the first period and ran five more yards for the Tide's first touchdown.

Kentucky tried time and time again to use the air route but to little avail. Kentucky lost one of its best chances to score soon after the first Alabama touchdown when Cavana stood in an open field and dropped a long pass from E. Johnson.

Widgeon Fast of Wing and Musical Bird

BY BOB BECKER.

Beautiful to look at, distinctly musical in flight because of its shrilly, feeble whistle which sounds like whew, whew, whew, the baldpate or American widgeon is one of the showy, good looking ducks which is now found throughout the central states.

It was great fun to sit in a blind near Lacon, Ill., and watch the speedy widgeons do their stuff over a broad lake while keeping in the parade with the pintails and the mallards. Throughout the morning in our blind we listened for the unusual notes of the widgeon.

Sounds Like Frog in Throat.

Probably the best description of the shrill call which it has is to compare it to a young puddle duck trying out its voice for the first time and the best it can do is a sharp wheeze. Or imagine a grown duck with a "frog" in its throat and you have a widgeon's whew, whew, whew broadcast.

In addition to this vocal effort the widgeon, which old timers will tell you can do 100 miles per hour, also makes music with his wings. With a white "bald" spot on the top of his head a band of green from the eye to the back of the neck, and extensive white under his wings the baldpate is a handsome bird and quite easily identified by the novice hunter.

Duck hunters who secure widgeons this fall need have no hesitancy in serving them, because this bird is delicious eating, especially after it has had a chance to feed on wild rice or celery. Then the epicure will have a hard time to distinguish it from the famous canvasback, which in our estimation has been much overrated as a table duck.

Refuse to Decoy Well.

When we were at Lacon the baldpates did not decoy well, so the few we shot had to be reached for. First we secured a hen. Later we picked up a couple of drakes.

One swung around to the left of our blind to create an amusing situation. We saw it coming from behind us and promising to swing within gun range. Our shooting partner got ready to take it because it was on his side. When we rose he slipped on the greasy, muddy floor of the boat and down he went. We then took a quick snap shot at the bird. It was a case of shoot and aim afterwards. That particular shell must have been filled with horseshoes because, much to our surprise, down went Mr. Baldpate.

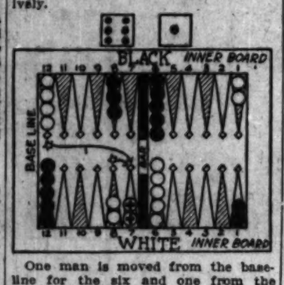
Six-One and Three-One Good Opening Plays in Backgammon

BY DR. O. E. VAN ALYEA.

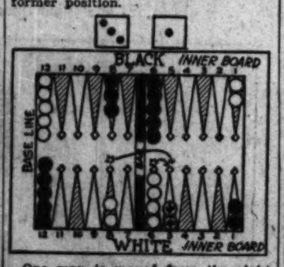
(This is the fifth of a series on backgammon. Another will appear in next Sunday's Tribune.)

Two of the most desirable of the initial plays are the six-one and the three-one. These make the bar or seven point and five point, respectively.



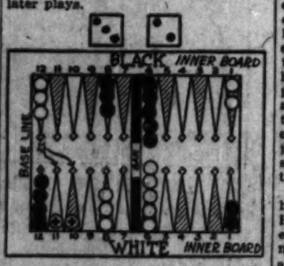
One man is moved from the baseline for the six and one from the player's eight line for the one.

Note: In the accompanying charts the cross marked white men are the ones moved and the star marks their former position.

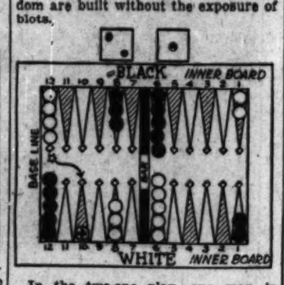


One man is moved from the eight and one from the six line to make the five point.

Four-two is played in a similar manner to the three-one and the four point is covered in the inner board. Two-one, three-two, four-three, and five-four as initial shakes are not point making numbers. Men are moved into the open to serve as builders in later plays.

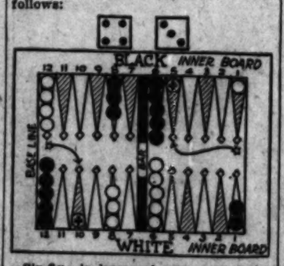


A beginner has a tendency to seek cover and generally brings one man over from the baseline for a three-two. There it rests in safety on his eight point. This ultraconservative style of play never will win any games in backgammon. A player who has not yet learned that chances must occasionally be taken still is playing in the elementary class. Boards seldom are built without the exposure of blots.



In the two-one play, one man is moved three spaces in the hope that he will not be picked up, and that he may fit in with some other man to make a point on the next play. This plan would prove successful should the next shake be a three-one, a six-three, a five-one, a five-three, or even a six four. In fact, he may be worked in in some way with most any number.

Four-three is played similarly to a three-two by exposing two blots in the outer board. An alternate move is as follows:



Six-five is known by the delightful epithets, "Leaping Lena" and "Lover's Leap," due, no doubt, to its lengthy stride. One man is moved eleven spaces from the act position to the baseline. The moves described herein apply only to the opening plays. The same moves may be made any time before the original setup of the board is disturbed. Later, however, new situations develop, and the player's style of play must be constantly regulated by the position of the opposing men.

If a player is far behind in a game he can afford to take wide chances. He encourages an open game. The enemy is safely entrenched and he must be enticed into the open. With a sudden burst of luck the game may be evened up, or the situation entirely reversed.

NORTH DAKOTA NO MATCH FOR ARMY PLAY; LOSES, 33-6

Complicated Pass Saves Shutout.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Army football players ran rough shod over the University of North Dakota today to win, 33 to 6. The Cadets took the offensive from the start and dazzled the crowd of 15,000 with a new variation of "the old army game" in the shape of tricky reverses, spinners and passes that pushed across five touchdowns in the first three periods. It remained for the westerners to pull off the most spectacular play of the game in the final period when they spoiled a shutout by tallying a touchdown.

Jarrett Scores Touchdown.

With the ball on the Army 27 yard line, Schave flung a forward to Felber, left end, who was just about to be tackled when he slipped the ball laterally into the arms of Jarrett, quarter back. Taking the pass in full stride, Jarrett raced across the line for a touchdown. Richmond's placement kick missed its mark.

Outside of occasional flashes by Felber, Schave and the hard running Jarrett, the Army with its faster, more mobile attack had things its own way most of the afternoon.

Five Cadets Score.

There was no outstanding star among the Cadets and the five touchdowns were made by as many different men—Bowman, Malloy, Kilday, Sebastian and Herb.

PENN STOPS BAUSCH

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—University of Kansas with its famed jarring Jim Bausch had its winning streak broken by Pennsylvania on Franklin field today, 21 to 6, before a crowd of 55,000 persons. It was the Jayhawkers' first defeat in five starts and their first eastern appearance since 1922.

Warren Gette and Carl Pepina scored touchdowns for Pennsylvania, the former crossing Kansas' goal line twice and the latter once. Walter Masters place kicked two extra points and Capt. Dick Gentile one.

Jim Bausch, stormy petrel of the "Big Six" conference, who is virtually responsible for Kansas being ruled out of the conference at the end of the present season, failed to last the entire game. He was injured in the third period and had to withdraw.

The real star for Kansas was Johnny Madison, third string quarter back, who scored their lone touchdown in the third period on a fourteen yard run off left tackle. Madison entered the game after Paul Fisher and Carnie Smith, the Jayhawkers' first and second string quarter backs, were injured and had to leave the field.

In the final period Penn opened up its air attack again, and another pass, Masters to Gette, gained 42 yards, placing the ball only two yards from Kansas' goal. Gette carried it over on the second play.

COLUMBIA, 10; CORNELL, 7.

New York, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—A smartly coached Columbia team, with a beautifully synchronized double wing back attack and a line of steel, put Morningside Heights back on the football map today. Lou Little's rejuvenated eleven sent Cornell's unbeaten team down to a stunning defeat at Baker field to register the first major triumph for the Blue and White since 1927.

It was only by the margin of an amazing 52 yard drop kick from the toe of Ralph Hewitt, the hero of the victory, that the game was won, 10 to 7, but there was never any question for the first three-quarters of the struggle as to Columbia's superiority.

Until Hewitt, who also scored the Lions' touchdown with a spectacular 99 yard run back of the opening kickoff of the second half, was forced out of the struggle with a twisted ankle early in the final period, the Morningsiders played the Cornellians off their feet.

KANSAS AGGIES' ATTACK DOWNS MISSOURI, 20-13

Manhattan, Kas., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Forward passes flew all over Memorial stadium here today and when the last one had been tossed the Kansas Aggies emerged the victor over Missouri in a Big Six conference game, 20 to 13.

As far as line play and running attack were concerned, the Aggies had a wide margin over Missouri, but in the matter of forward passes the Tigers were equal, if not better, than the Aggie Wildcats who, by winning today, marked up their first conference victory in three attempts.

TEXAS AGGIES NIP CENTENARY COLLEGE, 7 TO 6

College Station, Tex., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The rejuvenated Texas Aggie eleven bowled over Centenary, 7-6, today.

The Aggie touchdown came in the opening minutes of the second quarter, after Stiteler unleashed a passing attack to Hewitt, Tracy and McPadden. Then Stiteler went over for a touchdown. Stiteler also kicked the extra point. Murff of Centenary scored a touchdown by returning a punt 96 yards. Brown failed to kick the extra point.

De Paul and Loyola university football teams will meet in their seventh annual game this afternoon at Soldiers' field. The contest, a benefit for Rosary college, is expected to draw 40,000 spectators.

The traditional brown barrel, a victor's trophy similar to the old oaken bucket for which Purdue and Indiana play, or the little brown jug, which is fought over by Minnesota and Michigan, has been in the possession of Loyola since its triumph in 1928.

In the six games to date, De Paul has won three, Loyola two, and one, the first meeting in 1913, resulted in a tie.

Loyola in Good Condition.

Coach Eddie Norton reports Loyola is in excellent physical shape, with the exception of Ted Connelly, regular quarter back, who is out with a broken collar bone.

Capt. Les Molloy will be back at his left half back position. Without Molloy, Loyola was powerless against Coe. Stadler, his running mate, is also exceptionally fast. Full Back Durkin and Weimer, an end, will do most of the receiving, although Napolilli may be in there snaring throws before the afternoon is over.

Dr. Eddie Anderson, confident he has the strongest team since he began coaching at De Paul, has every man on the squad ready for action. Frank Hartman, a fast, hard blocking back, will start his first game of the season at quarter. Ernie Butcher and Mat Steffen, a nephew of Judge Walter Steffen, Carnegia coach, and Eddie Stafford, full back, will complete the De Paul quartet.

De Paul Pass Attack Ready.

Eddie Lyons, who may be started in place of Coan at end if De Paul receives the kickoff, O'Connor, Butcher, and Red Harrington, who will be at one of the half back positions in the course of the game, will figure in the De Paul passing attack, which has played an important part in victories so far.

Knox Defeats Beloit, 12-0, at Homecoming

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—A pair of touchdowns, both on end runs by Lewis Nichols, gave Knox a 12 to 0 homecoming victory over Beloit here today. The first score came on Knox's second play of the game when Nichols went through right guard and, side stepping the Beloit safety man, ran 10 yards to cross the line. A few minutes later he repeated the trick, scoring after an 18 yard run. His attempt to place kick for the extra point was outside as was center's kick after the first score.

Beloit threatened to score but once, taking the ball on a fumble on the 22 yard line. On fourth down a pass across the goal line was incomplete and Knox kicked to safety.

The visitors made four of their six first downs on passes, completing four out of 17 tosses attempted. Knox connected on two out of five aerial attempts and made nine first downs.

Porter and Watt were Beloit's best ground gainers, while Nichols, Thompson and Bellinger were outstanding in the Knox back field.

Northwestern Passes and Smashes Line to Overwhelm Minnesota, Before 51,000

fourth successive play despite an intervening penalty.

The only Minnesota touchdown and the last of the day was the aforementioned sensational dodging exhibition by little Mr. McDougal.

Gopher Punts Well.

The game was played under ideal weather conditions and the fact that only a slight breeze was blowing not only added to the comfort of the capacity crowd but also enabled the kickers to do their stuff. Munn averaged 41 yards, including a blocked punt which showed a negative in his yardage compilation. It was his kicking more than any other factor that held the Wild cats scoreless in the first quarter.

The center of the Northwestern line, which Minnesota had suspected of being weak, was anything but that, except for the brief span when Manders got going early in the third quarter. But the boys stayed at their posts and eventually stopped the Gopher battering ram before he could carry the ball into the danger zone.

Though the game was hard fought and sometimes unsually rough, there were few casualties even of a minor character, except in the case of Pug Rentner, who was injured in the latter part of the game and taken to a hospital. His trouble was diagnosed as a nerve injury in his right arm, but he was able to leave for home with the team.

Eye Indiana Game.

Aside from the possible extended incapacity of Rentner, the squad is said to be in excellent shape to carry on in the now active dream that the Wildcats have for a claim on the national championship. Next week they play Indiana, whom they expect to be battered from their Notre Dame clash, though they have a wholesome respect for the Hoosiers because of past upsets.

After Indiana the Purple must trim Wisconsin to keep Big Ten championship dreams intact, and after Wisconsin, Notre Dame. With this outlook Northwestern was indeed glad to escape today with a minmium of accidents.

The first touchdown came well in the second quarter shortly after Minnesota had suffered the disappointment of seeing an intercepted forward pass become transformed into a Northwestern first down. Swartz grabbed the pass on his own 35 yard line, and there was loud cheering in the Gopher section. The cheering halted when the play was canceled and Minnesota penalzied five yards for offside, which was just enough it make it first down for the Purple.

Baker Dives Over Goal.

Hanley got through tackle for eight yards, and Rentner and Leach made it another first down by making a yard each through the center of the line. Rentner made two yards around left end, which placed the ball about ten yards inside the sideline. Pug then took the ball, ran back to Minnesota's 40 yard line and threw kitty corner across the field to Baker, who was on the five yard stripe near the sideline. By a skillful twist Frank stayed inside and dived over the line for a touchdown. Bruder's kick was blocked, but the point was awarded because Minnesota was offside.

The second touchdown came with about four minutes of the second quarter still to be played. The Purple opportunity opened up when Munn kicked to Hanley, who stumbled and fell on his 28 yard line. Rentner then dropped back to his 20 yard line and passed over left tackle, 20 yards to Baker. Just as Baker was about to be tackled on the 40 yard line, he flipped the ball five yards to his left to Hanley.

Capt. Win Brockmeyer, safety man, was the only obstacle in the 60 yards between Hanley and the goal, and he was taken out when the van of the Purple parade reached the Minnesota 38 yard line. Engebritsen then replaced Riley and kicked the extra point.

Fumble Gives N. U. Opportunity.

The foregoing touchdowns were enough to put the ball game on ice, so we won't supplement our previous description of the subsequent scoring, except to say that the fourth touchdown resulted from the only costly error of the game, a fumble by Brockmeyer which gave Northwestern the ball on Minnesota's 20 yard line on the first play in the final quarter, Baker having recovered.

Russell plunged inside left tackle and fell under his own terrific momentum on Minnesota's two yard line. Northwestern was penalized five yards for delaying the game, but Russell drove to a touchdown on two more plays. Bruder failed to kick the point.

LANE, HARRISON ELEVENS CLINCH SECTION TITLES

Geske and Pitney Lead Victors.

Lane and Harrison practically clinched the titles in their respective divisions of the City league yesterday, the former defeating Roosevelt, 24 to 13, in a north section game, while the latter scored a 7 to 0 west division victory over Crane at Mills stadium.

Gustavson plowed through the Roosevelt line for two first downs and then a touchdown in the first quarter. Wiskes took a pass from Gustavson for another score in the second quarter. Roosevelt then started a march up the field and Aronson plunged for the touchdown. Roosevelt scored again and went ahead when the kick for extra point went over.

Geske received the kickoff that followed and ran 70 yards for a touchdown. Gustavson passed to Geske for another touchdown shortly after.

Harrison had the ball on Crane's 1 yard line three times, but was unable to score until the third quarter, when Andy Pitney received a punt, and aided by excellent interference, ran 65 yards for a touchdown. OKLAHOMA RALLY DEFEATS IOWA STATE, 19 TO 13

Ames, Ia., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Oklahoma continued its campaign for a Big Six conference football championship today by coming from behind to defeat Iowa State college, 19 to 13. It was their third Big Six victory and left them tied with Kansas for the conference leadership.

Iowa State scored both of its touchdowns in the second period when Richard Grefe, a lightweight who never played high school football, flipped two forward passes to teammates waiting across the goal line. The Sooners' first touchdown also was the result of a pass, Mills' throw to Massad placing the ball on State's one yard line, from where Massad scored.

Oklahoma scored twice in the last period. Warren's pass to Kirk for 20 yards enabled the Sooners to score in five plays from the 11 yard line, Massad plunging for the score. Two subs, Boxton and Snell, collaborated for the final tally, a 34 yard pass enabling Snell to score.

VAN BIBBER FAILS ON 3 KICKS, BUT NOBODY CARES

George Van Bibber, giant Purdue tackle, kicks the extra point after a touchdown for the Boilermakers—that is, sometimes he does.

Last week George was a hero. He sent Wisconsin reeling with a well directed effort, the Boilermakers winning by the margin of his one point boot. A couple of Saturdays ago George was a goat. He had a chance to bring joy to Purdue by making a kick at Michigan, but he missed and Purdue lost, 14 to 13.

Yesterday Big George walked back behind his line and tried three times to boot a solitary point over the cross bar and three times he failed. Two of his tries were blocked and one was wide. George wasn't a goat this time, because Purdue won anyway, 25 to 0.

PUT NAGURSKI IN BEARS' LINE TO STOP JOESTING

Injuries Also Make Change Necessary.

Stopping Herb Joesting this afternoon will be the objective of the Bears, and to accomplish this purpose Coach Ralph Jones, due to injured linesmen, is expected to start Bronko Nagurski at tackle when the Minneapolis Red Jackets and Bears clash at Wrigley field.

Steinbach, the 211 pound tackle, who formerly played at St. Thomas college [Minn.] and who has turned in some excellent performances in his first season in the National league, was one of the four linesmen injured last week in the game with Frankford and Nagurski will replace him on the left side of the line.

Pulling Bronko out of the full back spot necessitated another shift, so Joe Lintzenich will start at full instead of half back and Larry Wahlquist will take Joe's place. Red Grange and Joe Sternaman will be in there as usual.

Murry, Lyman, and Paul were the other boys who were bruised up last week. Murry is the only one who is to start this afternoon. Brumy Brumbaugh, flashy quarter back from Florida U., limped around until yesterday and Coach Jones will not use him unless it is necessary.

Ken Haycraft, Minnesota end who was accorded all-western honors, is another familiar figure who also will play. Haycraft shares with Lewellen of the Packers the distinction of being the only football playing barristers in the league. Ken has a law practice in Minneapolis.

FIGHT MANAGER BLAMES FATAL INJURY ON LAW

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 11.—(AP)—The boxing law of Nebraska, which bars a fighter's handlers from tossing in a towel as a sign of defeat, today was declared responsible in large measure for the fatal injury to Sammy Disalvo, 20, last Thursday night. Disalvo suffered a paralysis of the diaphragm in the bout and died Friday morning.

Lyle Smith, manager of the rising young Iowa middleweight, issued the statement blaming the boxing law. Smith said that during the time between the end of the third round and the start of the fourth, he endeavored to persuade Disalvo to discontinue, but the boxer, despite his difficulty in breathing, wanted to go on.

Smith said that soon after the fourth round started he threw in the towel but that Referee Andy Graves kicked it out. Later in the round the bout was stopped but not until Disalvo himself had once indicated surrender only to plunge back into the fray when the crowd hooted him.

OLD GRADS DRIVE TO HOMECOMING; FIND IT'S NOV. 22

Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Football fever in their blood, Sam Gilstrap and Jack Kadane, Oklahoma A. and M. alumni, arrived in Stillwater today.

All night and all day they had driven their automobile from Lebanon, Tenn., where they are attending Cumberland university law school.

"Hurray for homecoming!" they shouted to friends.

"Homecoming," queried the friends. "Why, homecoming is Nov. 22."

Sorrowfully the motorists learned the Aggie eleven was resting today from the exertion of a game last night with Haskell institute.

Levinsky Rises from $5 Class to Place Under Fistic Sun

Harry Krakow, alias King Levinsky, who twelve months ago was a $5 a match boxer, wedges farther into the charmed circle towapd acclaim and gold this week when he meets Jimmy Slattery, twice light heavyweight champion of the world, at the Stadium Thursday night.

Levinsky's chances against Slattery, one of the most accomplished boxes and ring generals in the game, depend solely upon his terrific punching ability. Upon this prowess depends also the king's future. But so singular is this one and only attribute of the king's that his legion of followers entertain a supreme confidence in this match.

Pointing to his quick and sensational knockouts of Leo Lomski and Tom Kirby, they declare Thursday's affair will be just another link in the unusual career of the one time Maxwell street fish merchant, who was run out of his job and neighborhood for weighing about five pounds of hand with every order.

Born in New York.

Levinsky's biography started back in the Bronx in New York, where he was born of poor parents. At the age of 2 the Krakow family moved the king to Chicago, settled down on Maxwell street, and there eked out a living until the elder Krakow died about 15 years ago. Harry was in school at the time, but he had to leave the third grade to aid his two brothers and four sisters in the strife for livelihood.

The Krakows had a fish market then. They have several now. About all the king can remember about those days is that he developed a craving for hot dogs. This peculiar appetite, which is in keeping with the rest of the incongruity ever present in the life of Levinski, is what really started the king to fighting, he insists.

"I got fired from the fish market when a big riot started one day. A customer saw me weigh my hand with a sturgeon," the king mused in his dressing room. "That wasn't what started the riot really. The riot started when I smacked one guy and his head hit another guy on the head and both guys were knocked out. My sister Lena ran me out of the market and the cops ran me out of the neighborhood. So I started going down to 12th and Halsted. I lived mostly on hot dogs.

"I used to go to all the amateur shows because they sold better hot dogs at them, and finally I thought I would like to be a fighter, because the amateurs were getting money for fighting."

Here the King dropped the amateur story. But Al Miller, his manager sufficed by admitting that the King won only one fight out of 55 as an amateur. He captured the welterweight championship of Joliet by winning a three round decision over the only other welterweight entered.

Eddie Seigel took the King under his wing and started him off on a professional career. But the King was a bust and Seigel put him on the market. His price was $250, but when Miller tried to buy him, Seigel asked $500. He finally compromised on $400 and the King's sister, Lena, purchased the contract. She later gave the King, who had been so named by Seigel, to Miller.

Takes Interest in Boxing.

Then things began to happen to Harry Krakow. With the sanction of his stepfather, Rabbi Goldwater, the King took an active interest in boxing. Miller, however, had to take a course in psychology to put the King on his feet. Every ruse imaginable was employed to make the King believe in himself. Around home, his family calls him "Champ."

Fearing that Levinsky was being awed by the prominence of Lomski, Miller planned on telling the King a weird story just before the bell. But before he got started, it was announced from the ringside that Jimmy McLarnin had knocked out Al Singer.

"Did you hear THAT?" Al fired at the boy-man boxer.

"What?" the King asked uninterested.

"An Irishman knocked out a Jew! An IRISHMAN knocked out a JEW! Do you know what that means? It means you got to get even for the Jews and knock out an Irishman. You got to go over and knock out that Irishman," shouted Miller, pointing straight at Lomski.

The effect was electrical. Levinsky immediately forgot about Lomski's reputation—and everything else. He actually won the fight on the first blow struck, which dropped Leo for a count. Since that time Levinsky has become convinced the Irish are the easiest to lick.

CARDINALS HAVE FULL STRENGTH FOR GAME TODAY

The Lineup

CARDINALS.		FRANKFORD.
Kenneally	L. E.	Kane
Williams	L. T.	Richter
Kissling	L. G.	Arm
Erickson	C.	Bruno
Weaver	R. G.	Van Sickle
Slater	R. T.	Cruz
Kassell	R. E.	Tesar
Maple	Q. B.	Cooke
Baker	L. H.	Wright
Belden	R. H.	Cooke
Nevers	F. B.	Rogers

The Chicago Cardinals, with a 16 per cent squad, will play their last National Pro league football game of the season at Comiskey park this afternoon. Their opponents will be the Frankford Yellowjackets of Philadelphia, a team which heretofore has been up near the top of the league but which has this season suffered several setbacks.

Frankford, led by Clyde Crabtree and with Bob Tanner of Minnesota and Ray Richards, Nebraska, starring at end and on the line, should give the Cards a harder game than in a week when the south siders whipped them, 31 to 6, in Philadelphia. The Yellowjackets have been resting for today's game and will not be handicapped by bruises of the day before, the condition in which the Cardinals caught them in Philadelphia.

For the first time this year Ernie Nevers has his entire Cardinal team field available. The Warner system of attack, in which the ball changes hands many times in the back field and which uses plenty of forward and lateral passes and double and triple passes behind the line of scrimmage, will be in full evidence.

Dr. David Jones, Cardinal owner, is pointing for the New York game next week, and the Green Bay struggle the following Sunday.

There are no more mid-week games on the Card's schedule, before Thanksgiving day, and the club stays at home, so there will be nothing to interfere with conditioning for the three big games of the season, after Frankford is disposed of this afternoon.

fident. They knew their strength and knowing waited until it best could be used. Only in the first minutes, when Eddie Risk, on the fourth Purdue play from scrimmage, ran 50 yards to the Illini goal, did these stalwarts reveal their power. Rather they waited until Illini errors produced scoring opportunities.

Purdue wasted no time securing the touchdown which meant victory. Winning the toss, the Boilermakers chose to defend the south goal with the chilly autumn breeze at their backs. Stan Bodman kicked off to Lew Pope, who was thrown viciously on Purdue's 24 yard line. Time was called and Pope, his ankle twisted, was helped from the field. Eddie Risk took Pope's place at left half.

Purdue Takes Ball in Midfield.

Taking advantage of the wind, Moss punted on third down deep into Illinois territory. From his 16 yard line Berry dashed off tackle for four yards, but a plunge by Robinson and another run by this Evans was short of first down by a yard. Bodman punted and Purdue had the ball in midfield.

Risk slashed outside Bodman on the first play. He sped along a path cleared by his mates between tackle and end. Into the secondary he dashed untouched. Ten yards farther and the Illini backs crowded in, seemingly stopped his progress, but Risk pivoted, jerked free, and went on.

George Van Bibber, whose placement defeated Wisconsin last Saturday, prepared to try for the extra point. But Tommy Wilson, Illinois' left end, crashed through to stop the ball as it left the ground. Purdue led, 6 to 0.

Purdue, with Risk cutting through the line, advanced to Illinois' 11 yard line. But Risk fumbled and Wilson recovered. Illinois kicked out of danger.

Then Moss got away a quick kick, which rolled out of bounds on Illinois' 3 yard strip. Bodman's best effort from behind the goal line and against the wind gave Purdue its opening 31 yards out. For a second time Illinois called a halt. Don Munch intercepted Risk's forward pass, but when tackled on his 26 yard line fumbled as the quarter ended and Purvis recovered for Purdue.

White Goes Over.

This time Purdue could not be denied. Three plays, the first an 18 yard sprint around Illinois' left end by Kissell, and the touchdown was accomplished. Risk covered all but a half foot of the journey on a plunge through center, but White went across the double chalk line which Illinois defended behind the giant Miller at center.

Van Bibber's placement was wide. Purdue led, 12 to 0, a lead it protected until the end of the half.

Berry received Purdue's kick off to start the second half. Straight up the field he came to meet the rushing Boilermakers. He went down under the impact of three tacklers, and the ball, rolling free, was recovered by Buttner on Illinois' 23 yard line. Four running plays, the last a five yard dash wide around end by Risk, and the Boilermakers had added a third touchdown. For a third time Van Bibber failed to kick over the cross bars.

Victory assured, Purdue continued its cautious tactics. Only once did the vigilance of the Boilermakers relax, and as a result Gil Berry, spurred by his costly fumble, almost neutralized that misplay.

Berry Dashes 56 Yards.

He seized a long bounding punt, eluded the first tacklers, came flying up the eastern side line, turned squarely across the field and finally went out of bounds on Purdue's 34 yard line. It was a gain of 56 yards, but again the Illini attack could not penetrate Purdue's line nor could passes delude an alert secondary.

Ernie Useman replaced Berry and it was Useman who offered Purdue its fourth opportunity to score.

Useman, back in kick formation for a wide end run, fumbled Bauer's pass from center, and Ben Mers, Purdue end, charging in, fell on the ball on Illinois' 16 yard line. On the third drive into the line Hal Chasey, one of the army of Boilermaker reserves, shot through guard, bowling over all opposition in his path to the goal. Chasey place kicked the final point of the game.

Purdue gained 294 yards by rushing, ample proof of its power. Illinois totaled 41 yards. Purdue made first down ten times. The Illini accomplished five first downs, two by rushing, two by penalties, and another by a pass. The Boilermakers attempted three passes, two of which were intercepted. A third was incomplete. Illinois tried 18 passes, with one completion and two interceptions.

WESLEYAN HANDS EUREKA COLLEGE 18 TO 0 BEATING

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Illinois Wesleyan university's football team defeated Eureka college, 18 to 0, here today. Cooke, Hensel, Campbell, Mitchell, and Presley galloped with ease through the lighter Eureka line.

Wesleyan used about three teams during the contest, and not once did Eureka seriously threaten.

Headly Leads Owners.

The Valley Lake stable owned by Dick and Pat Nash of Chicago was the highest money winning Illinois owned establishment. The stable raced here throughout the season and accounted for $34,250. The horses which run in the silks of Mrs. John Herts made an even more remarkable Illinois record. They were here only for the July racing at Arlington, yet accounted for $26,000. L. M. Severson was third on the list of Chicago owners. His horses, which included the early season star, Paul Bunyan, won $23,850.

The leading owners of the Chicago season follow:

BIKE RIDERS TO BEGIN SIX DAY WHIRL SUNDAY

Chicago's twenty-fourth international six day bicycle race will get under way a week from tonight at the Stadium with 15 teams competing. Eight nations are represented by the 30 riders, nine of whom will make their initial appearance in a six day race here.

Ten of the 15 teams have been named as follows: Freddie Spencer and Normal Hill, Franco Georgetti and Paul Brocardo, Gerard Debaets and Gaetano Belloni, Ernest Kockler and Micky Rodak, Franz Deulberg and Jimmy Walthour, Reggie McNamara and Tony Beckman, Pietro Linari and Alfredo Binda, Harris Horder and Cecil Walker, Paul Buschenhagen and Emil Richili, Alfred Letourner and Marcel Guimbretiere.

Kramer Will Referee.

The new riders are Alfredo Binda, Pietro Fossati, and Raffaele Di Pocco of Italy; Roger De Nef and Adolf Charlier of Belgium; Thomas Saetta and Al Crossley of America; William "Torchy" Peden, a red headed youngster from Toronto, and Paul Buschenhagen of Germany.

The eight nations represented in the race are the United States, Italy, Germany, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Australia, and Canada.

Split French Combination.

In looking over the field it is difficult to pick an outstanding team. Debaets and Beckman won the last race here, but they have been split up. Debaets is riding with Belloni, who, incidentally, was Debaets' partner when he won the last six day race in Madison Square garden. Beckman is paired with McNamara.

Georgetti, American motor paced champion for the last four years, is teamed with Brocardo. The pairing of these two riders broke up the popular French combination of Letourner and Brocardo. Letourner will ride with Guimbretiere. Brocardo appears to have the advantage of the shakeup, for Georgetti has won nine six day races, more than any rider in the grind with the exception of McNamara. Guimbretiere is a youngster with speed and endurance.

Binda, Italian and champion of the world on the roads, will ride with Linari, another strong rider. Experts figure this team as one of the strongest in the race.

Warm Up Races Saturday.

Germany is sending its outstanding rider in Buschenhagen. Paul has won four six day races in Europe and finished in four others. "Bushie" is riding with Richili, a Swiss. The Chicago team will be the veteran Kockler and the youngster, Mickey Rodak.

America will pin its hopes on Freddie Spencer, thrice American sprint champion, and Norman Hill, California boy. Deulberg, popular German youngster, and Jimmy Walthour, who won a race in the Coliseum, stand out as a strong combination.

Saturday night there will be a program of professional and amateur races featured by a motor paced match race.

Cornell and Coe Teams Tie, 0 to 0; Students Fight

Mount Vernon, Ia., Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Cornell college battled Coe to a scoreless tie here today in the annual homecoming game. The Cornell eleven piled up a total of seven first downs to two for Coe.

A terrific battle between Coe and Cornell college students, the second in two days, took place on the Cornell campus here early this morning when 75 men from Coe tried to obtain revenge for the treatment they received yesterday morning when they were forced to remove painted signs from Cornell campus buildings.

As the Coe men ran from their cars to the campus they were met by 40 Cornell alumni and about 200 students.

COLD TEST that we wish it were possible to show to every motorist personally

Examining Oil on Gauge Rod

New Iso-Vis is the only motor oil that will not thin out from dilution. Avoid the excessive dilution of your oil, that comes with cold weather.

These premium-priced oils are all well behind New Iso-Vis in this simple cold test demonstration. Each has the same body at normal engine heat. However, only New Iso-Vis shows the ability to give immediate lubrication when the temperature dips down below zero.

INCREASED engine wear in cold weather can be avoided. Demonstrations have proved that New Iso-Vis has these necessary protecting qualities.

1. New Iso-Vis lubricates from the instant your engine starts, even at below-zero temperatures—and it gives equal protection at the highest temperatures your engine can reach.
2. New Iso-Vis ends all danger of excessive dilution. This feature comes from a patented step in the preparation.
3. New Iso-Vis cuts harmful carbon formation to a half of the average of various extra-priced oils.

New Iso-Vis is wholly distilled. It contains no undistilled parts of the crude. It is made by a new method of refining and then dewaxed. Be sure to get the right winter grade for your car when you change this week to New Iso-Vis.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

EXPERTS SUGGEST CO-ORDINATION OF SIGNAL LIGHTS

Would Use Bond Issue, if Passed, to Do It.

Traffic experts of the Chicago Motor club and the Chicago Association of Commerce are urging that in the event the public approves the $500,000 traffic light bond issue—to be voted upon Tuesday—this fund be expended on coördination of the existing signal system so that it will operate at maximum efficiency rather than on the installation of additional lights at comparatively obscure locations.

The city hall is asking approval of the bond issue without publishing a program for expenditure of the money.

These experts advocate connecting present signal lights wherever possible so that they can be operated progressively. They hold that the operation of a system of lights so that each unit flashes the same signal at the same moment often checks traffic instead of giving it the continuous flow possible under a progressive system.

A Case in Point.

A case in point is the operation of signals on State street and on Michigan avenue. Signals on State street are operated under the progressive system, while lights on Michigan each flash the same signal at the same time. Despite considerably greater complications, traffic on State moves only a few seconds slower over an equal distance than traffic on Michigan. The experts hold that were the lights on Michigan operated under the progressive system a considerably higher average speed for traffic could be maintained.

Here is an example cited by the experts where coördination of lights would operate to expedite traffic movement. Say there are two east and west thoroughfares on which lights are operated without consideration of each other. Traffic on north and south streets might be checked at one of the east and west thoroughfares and after it had cleared the signal of the first be confronted with a red light at the second, thus suffering unnecessary delay. Coördination of the signals on the two east and west streets would expedite traffic on the north and south streets.

High Accident Toll.

Where lights are found to be troublesome to motorists, drivers are apt to leave the proper thoroughfare for side streets that are not under regulation. The consequence is that a high accident toll is suffered on the side streets. For instance, motorists on the north side often leave Sheridan road to travel north and south on Kenmore and Winthrop avenues. Both these streets have high accident figures.

Then traffic conditions change and where once a traffic control signal was highly important at a given thoroughfare intersection new developments make it useless. Now the traffic experts want the signal system to be flexible so that changing conditions may be met.

The engineering department of the Chicago Motor club has prepared the following statement on the situation:

"The proposed bond issue of $500,000 for traffic signals opens a way to the elimination of much delay and congestion throughout the city. There are about 150 intersections under the jurisdiction of the city where traffic signals are now in operation and only those in the loop and on Broadway between Wilson and Devon avenues are timed in an up to date manner.

Want Flexible System.

"This $500,000 should be used in improving operation of signals now in use. Where possible, this improvement should take the form of tying the signals on one street, such as Ashland avenue, into a flexible progressive system, or should provide a more flexible control at isolated traffic installations.

"A flexible progressive system of [illegible] timing will permit motorists to drive at a predetermined rate of speed along a thoroughfare without stopping at any intersection, thus maintaining a higher average rate of speed than is possible with the present timing system. On State street in the loop traffic seems to move very slowly because of the number of street cars, trucks, horses and wagons, and pedestrians using that thoroughfare. As a result automobile drivers usually use Michigan avenue.

"Actual checks taken during the middle of the day when traffic on Michigan moves rapidly show that on an average 3 minutes and 9 seconds are required to move on Michigan from Van Buren to Lake streets as against only 3 minutes and 35 seconds for traveling through the loop on State. During the rush hour when cars begin to jam Michigan it is possible to maintain a higher relative speed on State.

"Recent developments in signal timing make it possible to have the traffic at an isolated signal installation move with a minimum of delay by use of the 'traffic demand' apparatus."

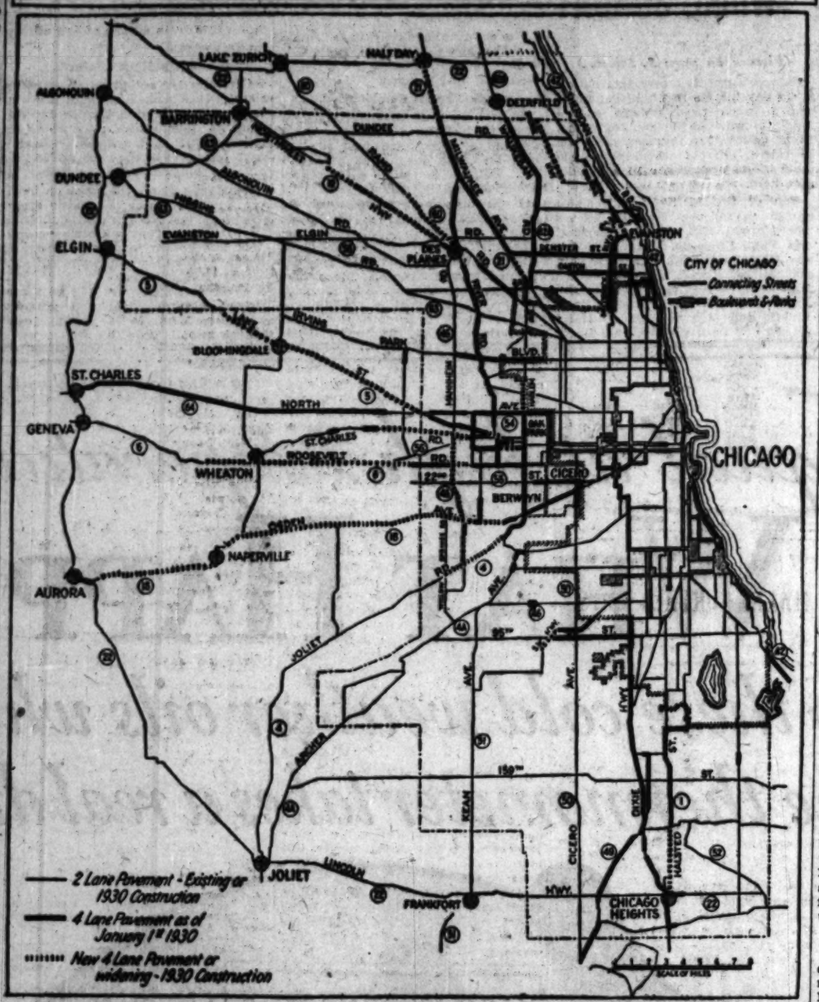
BOND ISSUE TO RELIEVE JAMS ON SOUTH SIDE UP

Relief of congestion in automobile traffic from the southeast is promised Chicago motorists if the bond issue of $500,000 is approved by the voters Tuesday to cut Indianapolis boulevard through to 100th street, thus breaking the bottleneck at Ewing avenue and relieving South Shore drive.

Traffic then could avoid the bumpy stretches south of 83d street by entering the city on 100th street, Escanaba avenue, Anthony avenue, and either Yates or Jeffery avenue. This is known as the southeastern boulevard system and is being improved under the south park commissioners.

In addition to militant support by practically every major south side civic organization, the bond issue has the indorsement of the Chicago Motor club, the Association of Commerce, Chicago regional plan commission, and the Civic federation.

CHICAGOLAND HIGHWAY SYSTEM



The above map illustrates the highway situation in the Chicago area. The slender black lines indicate two lane pavement, either existing or 1930 construction. Heavy black lines indicate four lane pavement which was in use on Jan. 1, 1930. And the heavy broken lines indicate new four lane pavement or widening which is to be ready for travel by Jan. 1, 1931. Here we see the great superhighways which radiate fanwise from the city insuring considerable expedition of traffic for the 1931 motor season. Principal among these are Roosevelt road, North avenue, Lake street, Northwest highway, Rand road, Milwaukee avenue, and Waukegan road.

ACTION AGAINST BILLBOARDS IS BEING PLANNED

Legislative action directed against the disfiguration of highways by billboards is expected to be enacted in Springfield this winter. State Senator Thomas Courtney, Democrat, seeking reëlection from the eleventh district, has pledged himself to instigate action against the billboard nuisance if he is returned to office. If he should be defeated Senator Courtney says he will work through friends in the legislature.

Senator Courtney is now making studies preliminary to the drafting of a bill for introduction into the legislature. At the moment he is undecided as to what teeth the bill should contain; whether control should be secured through taxation, a zoning ordinance or other regulatory measures.

Dunes Highway Improvement.

And in the meantime efforts are being made in the Chicago district, including the bordering counties of Indiana and Wisconsin, to improve the appearance of the highways through control of billboards and other factors which are destroying the scenic beauties of the region.

Planning officials are endeavoring to correct conditions such as exist along the Dunes highway. In this case a highway passing through one of the most picturesque regions in Chicagoland is cluttered up with such a conglomeration of signs, hot dog stands and other unsightly objects as to practically rob it of its birthright of scenic beauty.

One highway expert puts the billboard-highway situation in this manner: "The highway by reason of its existence gives to contiguous lands a value for display purposes. Land distant from a highway or remote from a point passed by great numbers of people is valueless for billboard purposes. Therefore, those responsible for the maintenance of a highway should have some say regarding the billboards that border it."

Wisconsin Has Laws.

The Chicago Regional Planning association is actively working to improve the appearance of highways in the Chicago metropolitan areas. One thoroughfare, for instance, which it is endeavoring to protect is the Dunes relief road, a forty foot highway which Indiana proposes to build just to the south of the Dunes highway to relieve it of congestion. It is hoped to make the new highway a boulevard and thus make applicable to it the Indiana law which prohibits billboards within fifty feet of a boulevard.

Racine county in Wisconsin has laws which give it mild control over billboards erected along its highways and Kenosha county has some control over billboards, though in a lesser degree than in the first named county.

Organizations have been formed in the Fox river valley district of Illinois to control billboards which threaten to destroy entirely the beauties of this picturesque region so far as motorists are concerned.

COLLECTING OF TAXES.

It costs an average of only $24,000 yearly for a state to collect gasoline taxes, while it takes $400,000 to collect registration fees and administer registration laws, according to the United States bureau of public roads.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Henry Ford's program for 1931 is a large one. Besides building at least one-third of all cars produced, he will spend about $23,000,000 on expansion projects. Five new assembly plants are to be built—at Buffalo, N. Y.; Edgewater, N. J.; Richmond, Cal.; Seattle, Wash., and Long Beach, Cal. Another major project will be the completion of a water tunnel at his Detroit plant which will be two miles long and will supply his plant with 1,000,000,000 gallons of water daily.

In response to widespread requests from dealers, Nash is advertising delivered instead of factory list prices. This move follows a recent announcement of new models at the lowest prices at which Nash cars of comparable size, power, and quality have ever been built.

Fifty Buicks purchased by one family in the last six years is a record claimed by Buick for the Garbutt family of Los Angeles. The record shows purchases to have been made by Frank A. Garbutt; his son, Frank E. Garbutt, and Miss Theodora Garbutt and Mrs. Melodie Garbutt Hathaway, daughters.

Official registration figures just released, covering the first eight months of 1930, show increases for Diamond T trucks in eighteen states as compared with the same period of last year. In some states the gains assumed sensational proportions.

Three interesting oil filter tests by C. W. McKinley, research engineer of AC Spark Plug company, showed that the oil filter removed as much as one teaspoonful of abrasive material in every 1,500 miles of driving; that wear with unfiltered oil was five times more than with filtered oil, and that in 10,000 miles driving the oil filter removed more than two pounds of dirt, sludge, and abrasive matter from the oil, thus making servicing of the filter necessary at this mileage.

One hundred and fifty or more Chrysler distributors and dealers from central western states came to Detroit by special train last week to take deliveries of several hundred Chryslers for their respective states. The cars were driven to their home territories.

Interesting developments in custom coachwork styles and types are authoritatively promised for introduction at the sixteenth annual Chicago automobile salon opening at the Drake hotel Nov. 8. There will also be a number of new developments disclosed in chassis engineering and this famous exhibition will serve to mark the debut of a number of new models of fine cars introducing new 8's, 12's, and 16's.

A sign of the aggressive policies to be adopted by the automobile industry toward making 1931 rank with past years in volume is seen in the announcement that Chevrolet's annual dealer meetings are to get under way next week, two months in advance of the customary date. Four groups of sales officials from the home office are scheduled to hold fifty meetings at as many central points during the next five weeks, which will be attended by upwards of 20,000 Chevrolet dealers and associated bankers located in every section of the country.

AVIATION

PLAN CHANGE IN U. S. REPORTS OF PLANE ACCIDENTS

BY ROBERT WOOD.

As a result of suggestions made by aviation leaders who have questioned the value of the present means of analyzing aircraft accidents, a new system of classifying such crashes may be adopted in order to bring them into divisions which will make them more readily comparable with accident statistics of other countries.

England, France, Russia, Germany, Italy and the United States, countries which do the bulk of the world flying, for some years have been keeping elaborate statistics on the causes of plane accidents, bringing the compiled figures down into such general classifications as "failure of personnel," "pilot's error," "power plant failure," "structural failure," "weather," "terrain and airport conditions."

Averages Vary Little.

The complete aircraft accident reports of these countries have made interesting comparative studies, the reports showing for the most part that reasons for airplane accidents and the percentage of the individual causes to the total number of accidents were about the same in all countries.

Reports studied in this way showed that most aircraft accidents were due to the failure of the human element, so much that this could be called a universal failing and the largest single contributing cause.

There was one outstanding exception to this in the case in the official government report on American aircraft accidents, and it is the objection to this feature which may lead to the establishment of a new system of classifying aircraft accident causes in this country. The 1929 accident aviation report of the United States showed that the second largest number of accidents were due to power plant failures.

Power Plant Failures.

In the report in question this factor was responsible for 18.98 per cent of the total number of accidents. The percentage attributed to power plant failures was considerably higher than in any of the other national reports, despite the fact that American aircraft engines are universally recognized as the most reliable in the world.

In checking back for a reason it is found that in this country when an airplane which had crashed had gotten into serious difficulties through loss of power or failure of power plant that accident was automatically listed as due to engine failure.

In most of the other countries where statistics of this kind are kept, inspectors carefully examine the terrain where the accident occurs and if in the opinion of these experts a safe emergency landing should have been made with a disabled motor, the accident is not attributed to power plant failure but to "error in piloting."

Accuracy in such methods of analysis, is of course, impossible, but in fatal accidents where the testimony of the pilot is lacking and the airplane itself is wrecked, there is little left on which to base a conclusion as to the cause.

MOTOR CLUB'S REPORT TELLS OF ROAD WORK

Setbacks Have Hampered Original Program.

Cook county's 1930 road construction program which was formulated last spring by a joint committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago Regional Planning association has suffered a number of setbacks which has prevented the expenditure of $8,450,000 on highway improvements as originally proposed.

Revision of the program in September to meet existing conditions was accomplished and the new estimate calls for the expenditure of $5,268,000 on the 1930 development. In addition a few projects provided for in the 1931 program have been put under way and bids were taken last week on additional projects which will entail the expenditure of about $460,000.

Club Compiles Report.

It is expected that bids will be taken before Jan. 1 on thirty-five miles of road costing about $1,750,000 in addition to the foregoing.

According to a report compiled by the Chicago Motor club 38 per cent of the 1930 construction program of the Cook county highway department is under contract or under construction. Bids opened too recently to be classified account for 19.6 per cent and 18 additional miles of the 1930 program and 35 miles of the 1931 program will be placed under contract before 1931. Therefore Jan. 1, 1931, will see about 71.6 per cent of the 1930 program under contract, although a good portion of the work provided for will not be put under way before the 1931 construction season.

Project Explained.

Herewith is a list of projects included in the 1930 program which are now under contract or completed. Explanations of the purpose of the various items are provided by officials of the motor club.

ASHLAND AVENUE—119th to 115th, .5 mile, 40 feet. This bit of construction is necessary because it will act as a city connection to the Governor's highway, route 49.

BUSSE HIGHWAY—Miner to Lunderman, 1.1 miles, 20 feet. This construction will be useful because it will provide another city connection to highways on the northwest, such as the Northwest highway, route 19, and Rand road, route 60.

CENTRAL AVENUE [center strip]—Grand to Higgins, 3.5 miles, 17 feet. Central avenue is a very important north and south street and the center strip is needed to permit vehicles to pass one another on this street.

CHICAGO AVENUE—Bridge over Des Plaines river. This bridge will not benefit through traffic to any great extent, but will serve chiefly to provide a better inlet to the city for residents in Melrose Park.

DEVON AVENUE—Milwaukee avenue to Lecett, 2 miles, 20 feet. Devon avenue when opened through will provide an excellent east and west connection for the north side of the city, which is badly in need of this connection at present.

DIXIE HIGHWAY—Flossmoor road to Holbrook road, 3 miles, widening. This eliminates one of the bottlenecks on the four lane Dixie highway.

FIRST AVENUE—Bridge over Des Plaines river south of Fullerton.

FIRST AVENUE—Bridge over Salt creek near 40th street.

FIRST AVENUE—Ogden avenue to 28th, 1.6 miles, 20 feet. When the First avenue connection is completed from Cumberland avenue east of the Des Plaines river on the north to Joliet road, route 4, on the south, an additional belt line highway will be available to traffic. This will serve to relieve traffic on such north and south roads as Harlem avenue.

GUNNISON STREET—Harlem to Nagle, 1 mile, 80 feet.

GUNNISON STREET—Nagle to Austin, .5 mile, 20 feet. Gunnison street is an extension of Lawrence avenue and will provide an outlet from Lawrence avenue to Mannheim road.

HARLEM AVENUE [River Forest]—Central to Chicago avenue, .5 mile, 20 feet. This is a repaving job which will improve the Harlem avenue route.

JOLIET AVENUE [Lyons]—Joliet road to 45th, .3 mile, 20 feet. This construction is of purely local interest.

KEDZIE AVENUE—Rexford to 127th, 1 mile, 80 feet. Kedzie avenue is now under construction from the city limits south to 127th street. This short connection will permit traffic to by-pass Blue Island by using Crawford avenue south of 135th street.

92ND STREET—Hamlin to California, 1.2 miles, widening.

95TH STREET—Cottage Grove to Yates, 1.9 miles, 40 feet. These two sections are a step toward making 95th street 40 feet wide from Lake Michigan on the east to Cicero avenue on the west. This is an extremely important thoroughfare and widening and reconstruction are badly needed.

OAKTON STREET—Bridge over Des Plaines river.

OAKTON STREET—Milwaukee to River road, 2.3 miles, 20 feet. When this construction is finished Oakton street will be paved from Mannheim road on the west to Lake Michigan on the east, and will serve to relieve the congestion on Touhy avenue and Dempster street.

POTTER ROAD—Busse highway to Ballard road, 1.1 miles, 20 feet. This construction is of local interest, not serving through traffic.

RAILROAD AVENUE [Evanston]—McCormick to Isabella, .7 mile, 40 feet. This is a link in the four lane highway paralleling the Chicago and North Western railroad through the northern suburbs. When completed this route will provide an excellent connection from McCormick boulevard to Green Bay road in Glenecoe.

SOUTHWEST HIGHWAY—119th to 99th, 3.9 miles, 40 feet.

SOUTHWEST HIGHWAY—Will county line to Wolf road, 1.8 miles, 20 feet. A good deal of money has been invested in the construction of the Southwest highway in laying 40 foot pavements and in constructing excellent highway grade separations. Will county is building the Southwest highway from Joliet to the Cook county line. It is advisable that this project proceed as rapidly as possible to make this costly route available to traffic.

TOUHY AVENUE—Lincoln to McCormick, 1.6 miles, 40 feet [reconstruction]. The pavement on this section of Touhy avenue is badly broken up and should be relaid 40 feet wide because of the tremendous volume of traffic which uses this highway.

26TH STREET—Pierce avenue to Des Plaines avenue, .5 mile, 40 feet. This connection is purely of local interest.

WASHINGTON BOULEVARD [River Forest]—Thatcher to Lathrop, .8 mile, 20 feet. For some time previous to this summer Washington boulevard has been closed because of this rough surface. This route is one of the most important outlets from the city on the west.

On 1931 Program.

The following project is listed under the 1931 program, but is already under contract:

MADISON STREET—Des Plaines river to Thatcher, .6 mile, 40 feet. Madison street serves through traffic as well as local traffic and the north side of the street in this section has been in very poor condition.

The following list includes projects on the 1930 program upon which bids were taken recently:

CALDWELL AVENUE—Cicero avenue to Touhy avenue, 2.7 miles, 40 feet. Caldwell avenue will act as an extension of the very wide Peterson avenue, permitting this street to be used more effectively. It is planned to extend Caldwell avenue north of Touhy avenue to connect with Waukegan road. When that is done, traffic from Waukegan road may enter the city over Caldwell and Peterson avenues, a much more desirable route than that now available.

CICERO AVENUE—Elston to Devon, .6 miles, 20 feet. This construction is necessary because Cicero avenue will act as a city connection to the new Skokie highway, route 47.

CRAWFORD AVENUE—Bryn Mawr to Devon, 1 mile, 20 feet. Crawford avenue is being extended from the city limits north to Glenview road. It is advisable, therefore, that the rough pavement between Bryn Mawr and Devon be replaced.

CRAWFORD AVENUE—33d street to 71st street, 4 miles, 20 feet.

CRAWFORD AVENUE—73d place to 95th street, 3.6 miles, 20 feet. Recently new structures were completed across the Chicago river, drainage canals, etc., just south of 31st street. It was impossible for motorists to use these structures unless the street were paved to the south. The north and south connection through this district is badly needed.

DEVON AVENUE—Lecett to McCormick [south half of street], 2 miles, 10 feet. There is now a 20 foot pavement on Devon avenue and at the present time traffic does not warrant the additional width. However, when Devon is cut through to the western city limits the additional width can be used to good effect.

McHENRY ROAD—Elmhurst road to Lake county line, 1.8 miles, 20 feet. This pavement will connect Elmhurst road to the Lake county line. The Lake county highway department intends to extend the pavement into Lake county.

MAGNE AVENUE—Irving Park boulevard to Northwest highway, 2.3 miles, 36 feet. This pavement will open up a new north and south route in connection with Ridgeland avenue and it will prove quite useful.

The following list includes roads listed on the 1931 program, upon which bids were taken last week:

BURNHAM AVENUE—130th to Glenwood-Dyer road, 2.6 miles, 20 feet. The extension of Burnham avenue is not of prime importance at this time as far as through traffic is concerned, but may serve to relieve some of the congestion now found on exterior Indiana.

CENTRAL ROAD—Road to Milwaukee, 3.6 miles, 20 feet. This section of Central road, in connection with Glenview road, will provide an east and west connection between Wilmette and Mount Prospect, and will probably prove beneficial to through traffic.

139TH STREET—Vincennes to Indiana avenue, 2.7 miles, 20 feet. This section of 137th street in connection with 139th street between Indiana and Torrence avenues will provide an entirely new route east and west south of Lake Calumet. The need for this route has been felt for many years.

Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath for Autos, Women Suggest

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

Take a club car, add to it a lounge, throw in a parlor, bedroom, and bath; then give it the line of a greyhound, the safety of a perambulator, and the compactness of a vanity case, and your result will be most women's dream of the automobile of the future.

Not that they all want all of these little details, but one here and another there add up to the general result. But they all agree that in spite of their dreams, today's car does very well.

One wants telephone connections; another hopes for adequate and convenient ash trays; a handy pocket for parking babies is suggested by a third in place of a gadget for flowers; wing chairs for added comfort in the back seat is another hope.

Convenience Before Beauty.

Beauty is considered rather less than convenience. Most women believe that cars are as beautiful and as elegant as one could hope. Though there were some suggestions for longer, lower lines without added bulk and for the use of other materials than metal for bodies.

Warning signals, say a petcock that will blow off steam or a mechanical rattlesnake that will give an unmistakable rattle when something is about to go wrong with a car is the chief improvement that Miss Leone Gould, 1429 Judson avenue, Evanston, would like to see in automobiles.

"I'd like to see some sort of device," Miss Gould said, "to give you advance warning of mechanical troubles before you get to the place where your car breaks down. I was caught in the loop the other day with brakes that suddenly were useless and the garage attendants were amazed that I managed to get through to them without being killed.

"I'm comfortable in almost any car. I'm crazy about driving any way as long as my car will go."

Mechanical Oil Warning.

Another suggestion along the same line was a mechanical signal to inform the driver when he should change his oil in place of the sticker system now in vogue.

"Modern cars," Mrs. Edith Hellman of Forest Park said, "are the epitome of elegance and mechanical perfection. There are all sorts of appurtenances for adults, contrivances so that one can play cards, holders for flowers and radios, though I can't say I care for the latter. But there is no arrangement for the comfort of children.

"I think there should be a nice little elegant pocket for infants. My young married daughter tours a great deal with her two children, one 4 years old and the other a year.

"They've had to rig up a basket for the infant, but it's an ugly contrivance, like all of them. And the 4 year old is continually sitting around on people's laps. But you talk to salesmen about it and they look at you askance and 'my dear' you."

Telephone connections in automobiles are the hope for the future of Mrs. Osborn M. Norcott, 1330 North State street, who drives out to Lindblom High school every day, where she is an instructor in mechanical drawing.

Telephone Connections.

"I've usually just left the house," Mrs. Northcott said, "when my calls come in. What a convenience it would be to be able to accept your calls in your car. Another suggestion is to be able to carry a complete change of clothing in a wardrobe arrangement. In fact, I would like to see in a car all the modern conveniences of an apartment, even to a shower."

A busy young business woman advanced the idea of writing desk arrangements combined with better springs to make it possible to work on the wing. Stoves such as are used in England so that one can stop and have a bit of tea would be pleasing to another woman.

"I wish they would install ash trays that are really serviceable and convenient," Mrs. Gordon A. Mullen, 835 East 50th street, suggested. "Most of the present ones are so small and so far away that no one ever bothers to use them."

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Recently one morning I had occasion to make a left turn from Michigan to drive east on Jackson boulevard. Drawing up behind an expensive car, I waited. Immediately with the appearance of the red light the expensive car turned left. I started to follow suit in my moderate priced car, whereupon the traffic officer bawled me out. "G'wan. Straight ahead. Whaddya mean pulling up with that car? Straight ahead."

Coming back several minutes later from delayed parking near the lake, I crossed Michigan at Jackson on foot and again took notice of the officer. He was still routing most but not all motorists desiring to turn east on Jackson straight south on Michigan.

An hour later, at about noon, returning to my car, I approached Jackson and Michigan and observed that this traffic king still refused left turns, in spite of the sign to the contrary. Each of several motorists who started to turn left were ordered straight ahead, and after hesitating near the middle of the street were forced on south.

But in a few moments a change occurred. Another officer relieved the first, and he permitted south bound traffic to turn left on to Jackson.

Why should Chicago have such representation at one of its most prominent corners? Why contend with domineering ignorance at Jackson and Michigan when intelligent police are available? Isn't it only logical to assume that an officer with such perverted ideas of justice will influence unfavorably many of the visiting millions who may have occasion to come in contact with this man? It is a foregone conclusion that such service reflects on his entire organization—on the competent and conscientious police—as well as on the "world's greatest city."

A. CARLYLE SHELDEN.

A CONFESSED JAY WALKER.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—In your "Voice of Traffic Columns" very little if any suggestions are made that would tend to help the hundreds of thousands of cripples on crutches, canes and blind persons who are obliged to use the streets. I am one of these unfortunates, just a used pedestrian victim of a speed crazy driver and will never again be able to jump or dodge.

Every time I cross a street I violate the law, as I cross in the middle of the block. I am a "jay walker" for the reason it is safer; there are no corners around which an auto can dart and get us. I know it looks wrong to others, but just hobble yourself so you can't run, then take crutches and try it out at the corner crossing. You will not be handicapped by aches, pains or a short stride, but see how much you will have to spare starting with the green lights.

Safety islands are a blessing to us, especially if we want to get off or on street cars, and the help needed, according to my ideas, is longer intervals between changing of lights and more safety islands.

FRANK R. PROSSER.

EFFICIENT POLICE.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—From time to time there are comments from different sources that the Chicago police are inefficient in the discharge of their duties. In my opinion such remarks are unfounded. Any one doubting the police may easily be convinced of their efficiency by simply going downtown and observing the efficient manner in which the sheep are separated from the goats when it comes to parking in the no parking zones.

Take the north side of Van Buren street, between Michigan and Wabash avenues, for a good example. Certain people arriving in certain kinds of high priced cars have the freedom of the street and they enjoy protected parking privileges seemingly without limit as to time any time of the day.

But just let some obnoxious intruder driving a low priced car attempt even to hesitate in this area. Then a police officer will appear as if by magic and the intruder with his undesirable conveyance will be dispatched with amazing efficiency. Apparently the police department handles the downtown parking problem in a manner that is in keeping with the plans for a city beautiful. Certainly the expensive automobiles parked in the no-parking zones have a more appealing appearance than the small low priced cars would have.

FAIRMINDED.

SLOW DRIVERS ON HIGHWAYS.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—The chief causes of retarded traffic on our wide county highways are [1] slow driving on the part of an appreciable percentage of motorists and [2] the fact that these slow drivers get in the way of others who wish to drive at a reasonable rate of speed.

So far as I know, the actual loss to the community from the slowing up of travel on our highways has not been estimated, but it must total a huge sum, and the remedy is so simple that it would be foolish not to apply it.

The first thing needed is to require every one using the concrete express highways to drive at least twenty-five miles an hour, and the second is to keep the slower drivers from getting in the way of those who wish to go faster.

To this end a resolution has been introduced before the board of county commissioners of Cook county instructing the attorneys of that body to draft amendments to the state traffic laws requiring a minimum speed of twenty-five miles an hour on forty foot highways and requiring all vehicles on such highways to keep to the right hand or outer traffic lane except when passing the machine ahead. If the board adopts the resolution the amendments will be presented at the next session of the legislature.

At present signs along the express highways admonish the motorist to "use the outer lane, except when passing," but not all drivers are taking the admonition to heart, probably because they imagine that sticking to the right hand lane will slow up their progress.

In reality, however, if all motorists are required to use the outer lane except when passing the machine ahead the progress of all machines will be facilitated considerably, because there will then be in the left hand or inner lane no slow moving cars at all to check those who want to progress from one gap in the procession to the next.

Forward looking motorists who wish to improve traffic conditions would do well to lend the resolution before the county board their support, and also to support the bill amending the traffic laws should it come before the legislature.

CANDIDATES TO FIGHT BRIDGE EVIL IF ELECTED

Three Others Fail to Respond.

Congressional activity toward the relief of the open bridge nuisance seems likely. The election next month will result in some new faces in Cook county's delegation to the house of representatives. Nine of the candidates seeking their first opportunity in Washington have pledged their constituents to work toward abatement of the practice of blockading thousands of motorists while a tug or sand barge passes up the river.

Congress is the final authority in regulating the bridges over the Chicago river. As a navigable stream, the water traffic is under federal jurisdiction. Street traffic is under municipal regulation. Street traffic has suffered through privileges given water craft. Cook county's representatives in Washington have accomplished little in the past on this problem.

Make Joke of Chicago.

Michael C. Walsh, "dean of hobo college" and Democratic nominee from the Second district, declared that "the boat men are making a joke out of Chicago." He advocates sending to Washington some men "able to awaken congress to the fact that the traffic on our streets is much more important to Chicago than the navigation on the river." He is a candidate against Congressman Morton D. Hull [Rep.].

Edward A. Kelly, Democratic candidate opposing the reëlection of Congressman Elliott W. Sproul in the Third district, promises to sponsor a congressional investigation of the delays to thousands of motorists and pedestrians caused by the frequent opening of the bridges.

In the Fourth district, both the Republican and the Democratic candidates have given their word to fight against this bridge nuisance. Congressman Thomas A. Doyle is not seeking reëlection.

Lundblad to Give Aid.

"I will exercise all the power in my command," wrote Harry P. Beam, the Democrat, "to eliminate the unnecessary interruption and delay caused the people of Chicago by the opening of bridges for river navigation."

"Please be informed," reads a letter from Frank G. Zeleznikoi, the Republican nominee, "that if I am elected congressman I shall put forth all my efforts to have congress pass legislation making the Chicago river nonnavigable. In my opinion that is the only proper and practical way to do away with the bridge nuisance."

Henry R. Lundblad, Republican opponent of Congressman James T. Igoe in the Sixth district, said he will father any congressional act to carry out a remedy to be devised by engineers representing Chicago and the government.

The Seventh district is another with candidates of both major parties pledged to work as friends of vehicular traffic. They are Leonard W. Schuetz, Democrat, and James G. Moreland, Republican.

Old Basic Law.

"If the old basic law of the greatest good for the greatest number is applied to the bridge problem," wrote Mr. Moreland, "the bridges over the Chicago river will be closed to such craft as are unable to pass beneath them, or at least they will be regulated to keep them closed during the hours that the bridges are most used by autos and pedestrians."

Peter C. Granata, Republican candidate opposing the reëlection of Congressman Stanley H. Kunz in the Eighth district, is another advocate of taking control of the Chicago river away from Washington and giving it to Chicago by an act of congress declaring the river nonnavigable.

Three Fail to Respond.

John E. Hesse, Democratic nominee in the Tenth district, favors an immediate extention of the hours that the bridges are not opened, but for a permanent solution he proposes a development of harbor facilities so that the river will be used only by those craft able to pass under the bridges.

Three candidates seeking the seats of incumbents did not respond to requests from THE TRIBUNE to publish their views on the bridge problem for the information of the motorists who will visit the polls on Nov. 4. They are: Harry Baker [Dem., 1st dist.], who is opposing Congressman Oscar De Priest; Frank V. Kara [Rep., 5th dist.], who is opposing Congressman A. J. Sabath, and Thomas Rohan [Dem., 9th dist.], who is opposing Congressman Fred A. Britten.

FOREIGN MOTORS INCREASE.

Motor vehicle registrations outside of the United States have increased tenfold in twelve years.

WHEAT PRICES SELL OFF, BUT FINISH STRONG

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Excessive bearishness prevailed in the grain markets at the start yesterday with scattered liquidation by longs strongly in evidence. The lowest prices of the day were made at the start, however, and the finish on wheat was well toward the top. An oversold condition was disclosed when commission houses started to buy.

Final sales were ¼c lower to ¼c higher, with December showing the weakness, closing at 76⅝@76⅞c, while March was 81@81⅛c; May, 83⅜c, and July, 83⅝c.

At the inside figure on the early break wheat prices were within ⅝@¾ of the lowest of the season, but the action of the market during the last week was rather surprising as the range has been only 2¼@3⅝c. There was further buying of wheat against sales of corn to close spreads, with the difference widening to 4¼c on the Decembers at the last, corn being at the largest discount in a number of weeks.

Grains Lower for Week.

Persistent liquidation has been on in the December deliveries of all grains during the week and at the last net losses on wheat were 1⅛@2¼c; corn, 3⅛@4¾c; oats, 2¼@2¾c; and rye, ⅝@1¼c compared with a week ago. Lard finished unchanged at 2½c lower and bellies 5c higher for the week.

The continued slow foreign demand for North American wheat counts heavily against the maintenance of advances in the price, and while a short time ago the trade thought it saw evidence of a better export and speculative interest, the outside business has fallen off sharply, and a majority of operators now look for lower prices, with a widening of the difference between the December and the May. The net reduction in the open interest in the December on Friday was only 470,000 bu as compared with the previous day, and the total is still around 89,000,000 bu.

Conflicting reports as to the possibility of damage to the new Argentine wheat crop were received during the day. An early cable said rust was decreasing and with favorable weather little damage was anticipated, while later cables claimed complaints of rust in the north were increasing and it was spreading southward. No estimate as to damage was made, however. Forecast was for rain in Argentina over the week-end. The Buenos Aires market was closed during the day, but will be open on Monday. Liverpool finished ⅛@⅝d lower in sympathy with the decline in North America Friday, but there was no pressure of cash grain in that market. Winnipeg lost ⅝@⅞c.

Corn Leads Decline.

Continued liquidation in corn carried prices off ⅛@½c in the early trading, with May and July selling at a new low on the crop, but buying by shorts and by holders of weekly bids checked the decline and made a small rally from the inside figures, with net losses of ⅛@½c, old December closing at 73⅝@73¾c, March 76⅛@76¼c, May 73⅛@73¾c, and July 73¾c. Corn prices had a range of 4¾@6¾c for the week and showed a sharper recession than other grains, due in large part to the closing of spreads between that grain and wheat, the latter being bought.

Private crop estimates on corn will be given to the trade at 10 a. m. Chicago time Monday and are generally expected to make a bullish showing as compared with previous years, with the probable yield the smallest per capita in a great many years, materially smaller than in 1981 when the crop was extremely limited.

Liquidation was on in oats at the start with prices breaking ⅞@1¼c on stop loss selling, which carried all deliveries off to a new low for the season, with the finish on a rally due to buying by shorts and on resting orders. Net losses were ⅝@1c, with December 31⅝@32¾c, March 35½c, and May 34⅝@37c. Cash interests sold December and bought May at 2¼c difference.

The trade is paying little attention to the rye market, which continues to be dominated by the action of wheat. Prices held within narrow limits and closed ⅝@¾c lower, with December 61c; March, 61¼c, and May, 62¾c.

Stock Sales on Chicago Curb Exceed Sept. by 33%

Stock sales on the Chicago curb during October amounted to 492,788 shares, an increase of 33 per cent over the preceding month, but a decrease of 46 per cent as compared to October, 1929. Transactions during the first ten months aggregate 5,242,-123 shares, approximately 7 per cent under the volume for the similar period of last year. Par value of bonds traded during October amounted to $611,000, as compared to $130,000 in October, 1929. The first ten months of 1930, however, show total transactions of $1,208,700 par value, against $818,500 in the like period of last year.

Illinois Auto Sales Fail to Improve in October

Illinois new automobile sales failed to make any improved showing during October according to the Illinois chamber of commerce showing October sales of 7,943 new cars as compared to 10,618 sales in September and 14,804 during the same month one year ago. The ten months total for 1930 of 156,-800 cars is nearly 70,000 cars under the 1929 total for the same period of 225,880 sales. October, 1930, sales were among the lowest of the year. Cook county reported 3,200 new car sales for the month and downstate Illinois 4,443

Public Work Aid to Jobless Seen Limited

BY SCRUTATOR.

Something less than a year ago, when the crack of a stock market boom called attention to approaching unsettled conditions in business, great efforts were made about council tables, particularly in Washington, to remedy unemployment by increasing spending for construction by national, state, and local governments.

The program was so broad and its elements so scattered that correct figures on what it accomplished are difficult to find. At best, however, it appears that the increased spending of public money for permanent improvement resulting from the urging has not been sensationally large.

On Friday it was announced in Washington that government contracts involving a billion dollars would be under way or contracted for within two months. Those now in construction are to cost 576 million and the remainder of the contracts are to be let before Jan. 1.

Loans to Private Interests.

Such figures as these need a lot of clarification. A good many of these millions are loans made through the shipping board to private lines desiring to build new steamships—an essentially private rather than public expenditure. Besides, there is a lapse of time between starting contracts and employing labor on a big scale. The really important statistics are those bearing on just how much the federal government and the other public spending bodies have increased their outgo in the year 1930 for construction.

Under ordinary circumstances this country spends annually perhaps ten billion for construction. Three billion of it is in federal, state, and local government budgets, with the Washington administration responsible for about 300 million. The department of commerce estimate is that this public spending in 1930 will amount to three and half billion, an increase of 500 million, for which increase the federal government is responsible for 100 million.

Increases Its Employés.

The government, directly and indirectly, has increased the number it employs by 45,000, which would indicate about the difference between 300 and 400 millions of construction. State, city, and county governments in the twelve months ending with September increased their bond issues, most of which are for construction, from two billion 175 million to two billion 494 million dollars, a jump of about 349 million dollars. On this basis, it seems unlikely that any more than 500 million has been added to public spending.

That is a good deal more than a gesture. Probably it furnished a living to from 200,000 to 300,000 families. Yet it is so moderate a contribution against the enormity of unemployment that we may well wonder whether any program of public spending designed for the slack parts of the business cycle can be much more effective.

Rail Work Declines.

The railroads, according to the Railway Age, have been employing in 1930 an average of 127,000 fewer men than in 1929. The average wage of a rail employé in 1929 was $1,744, and if the men laid off drew the normal amount they would represent a pay roll loss of 221 millions. Automobiles made in eight months this year were fewer by a million and a half than those made in the same period of 1929; the pay roll loss in all branches of this industry during the current year will surely run to twice what the governments spent in increasing their construction.

Actual spending increments by all the governments has been valuable, even without any of the usual exaggerations. But they are in the nature of stop gaps, of alleviation, and only the overoptimistic can lean on the programs and believe they can be powerful enough to change economic tides.

TOTAL DIVIDENDS IN OCTOBER SHOW GAIN OVER 1930

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 1.—Dividends declared in October were smaller in the aggregate than in the previous month but showed a small increase over a year ago due mainly to payments in the bank and insurance and public utility groups. Payments amounting to $210,112,903 were declared compared with $475,094,894 in September and $206,791,420 in October, 1929.

Groups showing increases over last year, other than those mentioned above, were foods and packing, railroads and railroad equipment dividends. These below last year consisted of chain stores, coppers, department stores, mail order, motors, motor equipment, oils, steels and tobaccos.

Outstanding declarations of the month were initial payments of $1.25 quarterly on the new American Tobacco company common and class B shares; an extra dividend of $3 by the Norfolk and Western railroad, omission of quarterly payments on the common shares of Montgomery Ward & Co., and Pure Oil company; reduced payments by Chile Copper company, Packard Motor Car company, and U. S. Realty and Improvement on the common stocks, and back payments by the Worthington Pump and Machinery corporation on the preferred A and B shares.

Dividend payments changed from last year show how disbursements were curtailed in October, 64 extra payments being declared against 58 last year, 84 dividends were omitted compared with 19 in 1929 and 24 reduced payments against 1 for October, 1929.

Although dividends in many instances have been curtailed, the losses have been offset by continued payments by the majority of corporations and in many instances on larger capitalizations.

REVIEWS WORK OF GRAIN BOARD FOR FIRST YEAR

Milnor Claims 2 Big Accomplishments.

Completion of the first year of the most important experiment in the history of grain marketing, namely the government's attempt to better prices through establishment of the Farmers National Grain corporation and the Grain Stabilization corporation, was observed during the week just closed.

George S. Milnor, general manager of the Farmers corporation and president of the stabilization concern, yesterday told what has been accomplished in the last twelve months.

"The grain farmer is now marketing his produce on a national scale," Milnor said. "The Farmers National is doing a regular business in grain buying and selling, storing, and handling grain the same as elevator and commission men have done for years. They hedge their grain the same as all cash handlers. On the other hand the Grain Stabilization corporation buys and sells grain, but does no hedging. It holds 60,000,000 bu of wheat at different points from New York to the north Pacific coast. A large part of the wheat is at primary markets, but is not included in the regular visible supply.

Reviews Year's Work.

In reviewing the year's work Mr. Milnor said:

"I think we may be justified in pointing out two major accomplishments in that comparatively short period of time. We have assisted in establishing quite definitely the principle that the producer has the unquestioned right to market his own product. We have further demonstrated that through proper laws and adequate financial assistance the producer can, through his own organization, handle the grain he produces from the farms to the ultimate processor, whether that be the American miller or the foreign buyer.

"So far as I know no firm heretofore has undertaken such a wide scope of activities as has the Farmers National Grain corporation. We are buying and handling grain from producers over the entire country. In order to do this, it has, of course, been necessary to establish branch officers and organizations in the various grain areas, as well as to provide suitable facilities for grain handling.

"The terminal office at Chicago defines all policies under which all branches operate, obtains facilities at all locations, dictates all purchases and sales, and receives daily reports from all branches.

Has Many Branches.

"Branches have been established at Pendleton, Ore., for the Pacific northwest, at Kansas City, St. Louis, and St. Paul, and there are representative agents at Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Ogden, Utah.; Denver, Wichita, Enid, Okla.; Minneapolis, Cedar Rapids, Duluth, and Indianapolis.

"At present the Farmers' National Grain corporation owns and has under lease elevator capacity of approximately 30,000,000 bu," says Milnor. "Our organization facilities have enabled us to handle current crops of wheat, oats, and barley in a fairly satisfactory manner. During July and August more than 32,000,000 bu of cash grain was purchased by the corporation.

"Obviously, there is much work yet to be done. We have hardly started toward the good that we hope to reach in perfecting an effective organization for the marketing of producers' grains. In this development the producer will play a most important part and assume a large share of responsibility."

C. E. Huff, president of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, said:

"Since Oct. 30, 1929, a great cooperative institution has been set up and its operations have run far beyond the experimental stage. The Farmers' National Grain corporation is functioning as a farmers' owned and farmers' controlled institution, but not from the top downward but from the soil itself upward and outward to markets everywhere. The grain producers of America own and operate the largest grain handling organization in the world."

PRICES OF TIRES ARE BOOSTED 2½ TO 5 PER CENT

An increase of from 2½ to 5 per cent on the prices of all standard makes of tires, effective yesterday, was announced by H. B. Harper, president of the National Tire Dealers association. The association, which has 2,500 members, will open a convention at the Sherman hotel tomorrow morning. Some 1,000 tire dealers are expected to attend the convention which will end Thursday. The price increase, which was forecast some days ago, will cover all sizes of tires and tubes.

Meat Prices Work Lower During Week, Review Says

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions asserts:

"An unsatisfactory dressed beef trade was reflected in somewhat lower live cattle prices at the close of the week. Lamb receipts showed a decline over last week. Live prices advanced and the liberal supply of dressed products on sale with slow demand resulted in prices working steadily lower. Calves were again available in liberal quantities and the live market somewhat lower. Dressed trade was slow at declining prices.

"Smoked meat business continued uniformly good throughout the country. Fresh pork cuts business showed a further decline in selling prices in all sections."

FINGER'S LOSS PUTS WALGREEN ON FORTUNE PATH

Quits Factory Work for Drug Store.

BY HOWARD CARSWELL.

Signs of a definite pickup in sales of the Walgreen drug store chain are seen by Charles R. Walgreen, president and principal owner, who estimates total sales for the nine months of $32,685,000. October sales volume, he said, will not be lower than the September figure of $4,062,000. Earnings per share on the common stock should approximate $1.80 for the nine month period this year, he said.

C. R. WALGREEN. [Moffett Photo.]

The story of the rise of the Walgreen business from a neighborhood drug store on the south side to the second largest drug chain in the country, is that of a man who once thought that Chicago had too many drug stores, lost interest in his own, but came to realise that his best opportunity was in the line of business he knew best and had grown up with. His real career began near middle age.

A strange little accident of fate put Mr. Walgreen in the drug store business during his youth at Dixon, Ill. A lever on some shoe machinery in a factory where he was working caught his attention. He monkeyed with it—stepped on the pedal. Off came the first joint of a finger on his left hand.

Chicago Beckons.

His accident gave him a distaste for factory work and so he turned to different fields, becoming a village drug store clerk. But bigger things beckoned and he took the train for Chicago. He worked and studied pharmacy until the Spanish-American war called. Back on his old job after the war in broken health, he turned to another drug store where his bad health would be less of a handicap.

Here his employer wanted to get out of business and was willing to sell out to his head clerk. Mr. Walgreen drew on his savings and borrowed more for the down payment. It took him four years to pay off but he owned his first drug store at 4134 Cottage Grove avenue.

And then Mr. Walgreen became dissatisfied—he thought Chicago had too many drug stores. He lost interest in his business. The Chicago Board of Trade became his downtown headquarters—baseball a pastime. The clerk ran the store. But, loitering around the grain pit, he came to comprehend that those who made money were the professionals who knew the game and put their whole time and energy into it. He then recognized the simple fact that he had no choice but to make good in the drug store business—the business he knew best. His interest revived, Mr. Walgreen set out to make his neighborhood store pay.

Buys Second Store.

A former employer, hearing of Walgreens' rejuvenated store, walked in one day and offered to sell him his. So Mr. Walgreen bought his second drug store two blocks down the street, at 39th and Cottage Grove. He borrowed to make the first $5,000 payment on his $15,000 purchase. He had decided that Chicago might have too many drug stores, but not enough of the Walgreen kind. This was in 1912.

Another one was opened a few blocks away, putting him deeper in debt. But three stores did not require three times as much stock as one store. He could piece out from one store to another.

The Walgreen chain began acquiring new links and has now expanded to 443 stores, reaching from coast to coast, although preponderantly midwestern. Los Angeles has three. Annual gross amounts to $50,000,000. Its rapid growth is illustrated as follows:

Year.	No. stores.	Year.	No. stores.
1913	5	1926	89*
1916	9	1927	110*

Sales Increase by Leaps.

In 1914 Walgreen sales amounted to $25,000. In 1918 they had grown to $43,000, and by 1920 were $67,000. How sales volume has multiplied by leaps is show by the following table of net sales since 1923 [as of Dec. 31]:

Year.	Net sales.
1926	*$25,599,135
1928	46,022,630
1928	31,380,612
1927	20,802,047
1926	13,604,878
1925	9,313,704
1924	5,386,472
1923	3,614,340

*For six months of 1930.

In 1929 the Walgreen company listed 45,000 shares of $100 par preferred on the New York Stock exchange. Common stock and warrants are traded on the New York curb. The common is also traded on the Chicago Board of Trade, currently selling around $35. Net profit for the six months ended June 30 was $912,592, equal to 86 cents a share on the common. Net profit [as of Dec. 31] is shown over the last few years by the following:

Year.	Net profits.	Earnings com. sh.
1929	$3,130,466	$3.29
1928	2,752,425	2.98
1927	1,501,353	1.59
1926	1,000,307	.94
1925	558,286	.35
1924	439,110	.19
1923	191,634	*.13

*Deficit.

"I wish I could honestly say that I foresaw the great growth of my company, but I can't say so. No one is more surprised than I am. When the Walgreen chain was doing a $1,000,000 annual gross I was just as much thrilled as I now am at a $50,000,000 yearly sales volume. I still have the outlook of an independent store owner," said Walgreen.

A two-thirds control is held by the Walgreen family and executives. The nine directors are all in the company's employ. A son, Charles Jr., and son-in-law, Justin Dart, likewise work in the business.

STANOLIND COMPANY MAKES FURTHER CUTS IN PRICE OF CRUDE OIL

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The Stanolind Crude Oil Purchasing company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, today posted further price reductions for higher gravities of Mid-Continent crude oil. The new schedule quotes $1.07 a barrel for oil of 40 gravity and above. The lowered schedule which the company put into effect a week ago quoted up to $1.19 for oil of 44 gravity and above.

Reductions in the price of Texas and Louisiana coastal crude averaging about 20 cents a barrel lower than those made recently by the Humble Oil and Refining company were announced at Houston, Tex., by the Gulf Pipe Line company and the Gulf Refining company.

Grade "A" coastal crude was posted at 80 cents, 20 cents below the Humble company's quotation, which in turn had reduced that grade 15 cents a barrel. On grade B Gulf posted a price of 69 cents on below 35 gravity, 6 cents below the Humble's price.

OTHER REDUCTIONS.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The price of Pennsylvania grade crude oil was cut today by leading purchasing agencies for the second time within two weeks. Pennsylvania grade in New York transit lines and Bradford district oil in national transit lines were cut 10 cents a barrel and the others were reduced 15 cents.

FINDS UTILITY STOCKS AT LEVEL OF TWO YRS. AGO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 1.—Public utility stocks are presently selling at practically the same levels as they were two years ago at this time, according to compilations of the New York Times, including twenty-nine principal utility stocks traded in on the New York Stock exchange. The actual change in value of these stocks from Oct. 31, 1928, to Oct. 31, 1930, was an increase of $56,000,000, but there is a decline of $19,000,000 compared with market values for the shares on Sept. 30, 1928.

These changes are minor contrasted with the broad upward and downward sweeps that have occurred during the last twenty-four months. The net result of the changes is that it is necessary to go back to Oct. 31, 1928, to find lower month-end utility prices than Oct. 31, 1930, levels, on the basis of the New York Times computations. Both Sept. 30 and June 30, 1928, were above current valuations, and it is necessary to look to April 30, 1928, and preceding months to discover that current levels for utility stocks are consistently higher.

Weekly Debits Decline, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago for the week ended Oct. 29, by 223 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,130,158,000, a decrease of 20.2 per cent compared with a week ago [$1,479,552,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$2,225,991,000], a decrease of 48.4 per cent was shown.

Offerings of Bond Issues at Low Ebb

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 1.—Offerings of new bond and note financing this week were the smallest for the year to date. The total of $24,223,000 placed on the market this week compares with an aggregate of $99,698,595 last week and is the smallest since the week ended on Dec. 27, 1929, when a total of $8,010,000 was offered.

The small size of this week's offerings is explained by the continued uncertainty which exists in the bond market as to the outlook for bond prices. Dealers here lately have been reluctant to bid for new issues except at prices somewhat below those recently obtaining. As a result several municipalities which had planned to award bond issues have been compelled to revise their intentions or, in one or two cases, to reject all bids offered by dealers.

Farm Major Part.

Offerings of state and municipal obligations formed the major part of the week's new issues, amounting to $21,-178,000. The remainder was composed of a single issue under each of the three headings: public utility, industrial and miscellaneous.

Offerings of bonds and notes by groups of this and last week follow:

	This wk.	Last wk.
State and municipal	$21,178,000	$74,648,595
Public utility	1,500,000	18,050,000
Industrial	1,250,000	15,000,000
Miscellaneous	300,000	.....
Total	$24,228,000	$99,698,595

See More Stable Basis.

Although bond offerings in the week just ended reached the smallest total for the year to date, the feeling is gaining ground among dealers that some progress has been made in the last few weeks in reaching a more stable basis in the market.

Next week's issues will probably be small also, but it is thought likely that before long the market will pick up activity on the basis of the new price levels.

Construction of a $2,000,000 cracking plant has been started by the Associated Oil company at its Avon refinery, near Martinez, Cal. Capacity will be 10,000 barrels of oil daily.

Three textile mills at Union, S. C., will operate fifty hours per week beginning tomorrow. They have been running only three days a week.

Reo Motor Car company shipped 2,365 passenger cars in October, a gain of 227 per cent over the September shipments of 702 cars and 113 per cent over October last year, when shipments totaled 1,116 cars.

A contract amounting to $214,800 has been awarded to the Wright Aeronautical corporation for forty Wright air cooled cyclone engines, with spare parts and engineering data, by the war department.

Melville Shoe corporation has reduced retail price of all shoes being sold through its stores 10 per cent.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Stocks continued in a reactionary mood in the abbreviated week-end session of the market today. A liberal sprinkling of new lows for the year or longer were recorded and losses of 1 to 4 points were the rule in the garden run of the list. The so-called pivotals, however, received fairly good support throughout the session from interests evidently bent on making a recess showing with them and a majority of them were able to show rather neat gains on their final sales.

United States Steel, for instance, was up 1¾ points on the day, American Can was nearly a point above last night's final price, Westinghouse had a net advance of 1¼ to its credit and General Electric was ahead 1½ points. It was all very impressive—from the outside looking in.

Utility stocks were under pretty steady pressure and several new lows for the movement or year were recorded by the group, one of the issues to achieve the distinction being American Water Works. The amusement shares had their troubles, although enough late buying appeared to keep them on the right side of the great divide for the final record. Loews, after lingering in the rut for almost the entire session, wound up with a gain of nearly half a point.

Atchison Up 2 Points.

The rails backed and filled narrowly and the close found most of them wallowing around about where they started. An exception was Atchison, which jumped ahead for more than 3 points.

Oils drifted a little lower in the early trading and then recovered and the motors did almost nothing. General Motors had evidently discounted its third quarter report made public overnight and held its own with the rest.

Strength developed in Coca Cola, which has been heavily depressed of late. A rush of buying toward the last, in fact, boosted this much mistreated issue for more than five points. Eastman Kodak, another specialty which has been cuffed about recently, also recovered, but its gain on the day was much more modest.

The day's dealings served to furnish further evidence of the extreme caution which traders are now exercising in their commitments. Most stocks are down around their lows for the year and near points at which they received support in the October break, and the rank and file are wondering whether such support can be counted upon in the new emergency. Pending that time they are determined—the most of them—not to take any very great chances.

Market Is Thin.

The action of the market in the last hour Friday indicated it was a time when care should be exercised. Prices made wide changes between sales and on small volume turnovers. Moreover, they were made in both directions, which is the sign of a very thin market. Under such circumstances a short interest could easily be trapped if pressure were brought to bear against them. The uncertain factor, of course, is how determined the so-called constructive forces are to trap the bears.

Of yes, they got Allied Chemical back into the 300 point class today. The old blue blood, which has been twice tumbled from its throne seat, closed at 300¾—3¼ points better than it did yesterday.

GOLD STANDARD CAUSES WORLD CRISIS, CLAIM

Dr. Eisler Favors Scheme of Currency Expansion.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

VIENNA, Nov. 1.—The claim that the present world depression is largely only a deflation crisis caused by a return to the gold standard at a time when the world production of gold was steadily decreasing and a plea that the gold standard should be deserted for a scheme of universal currency expansion to meet the growing needs of industry were made by Dr. Robert Eisler in an address before the Austrian club here.

Dr. Eisler, who is the author of a history of money and other works on economics and finance and former assistant director of the university section of the international institute for intelligent cooperation, affiliated with the league of nations, attacked the quantity theory of money which he said presupposed that, since all the gold in the world would always be the equivalent of all the wealth in the world, variations in its quantity and hence in the quantity of money based thereon would automatically be adjusted by raising and lowering prices.

Refuse to Sell.

When gold was plentiful, Dr. Eisler declared, it was true that all producers, merchants, and others able to control prices were invariably willing to increase them, but when gold was scarce the pendulum refused to swing the other way. Raw material and stocks were then full, he said, but the retailer who had bought at high prices refused to sell at low, and the net result was that fewer goods sold at the same prices.

Dr. Eisler asserted that this meant fewer orders to wholesalers, manufacturers, and producers, with unemployment and consequent reduced buying power on the part of the public and, in the case of the present unprecedented crisis, would give rise to conditions welcomed by bolshevism as inviting world revolution.

Dr. Eisler quoted Carl Snyder, United States federal reserve board statistician, and other authorities to show the normal annual increase in world production of goods was 3 per cent. To finance it, the speaker declared, money and credit, and therefore gold, should increase 3 per cent, and between 1850 and 1910 the production of gold did increase at approximately that rate.

By the end of 1929, however, Dr. Eisler asserted, gold production had fallen 121 per cent below the increase necessary to keep prices stable. Most of the world had returned to the gold standard by 1926 and the result, delayed for a time in the United States by installment buying and the federal reserve board policy, was a fall in prices with the attendant evil of unemployment, according to Dr. Eisler, who said the basic reasons for men being periodically unable either to work or buy was neither war, capitalism, nor tariffs, but hitching money to a shrinking gold production.

Must Divorce Money.

Since gold production was sinking, Dr. Eisler said, it was obvious that money, to keep pace with the production of goods, must be divorced from gold production, and he advocated world-wide currency expansion. Opposing inflation in any individual country, he said a world conference of finance ministers and bankers could resolve to increase the world's currency to an amount which could be fixed by an exchange by the central banks, each with every other, of parcels of newly printed notes in proportion to the present exchange value of their respective circulations, thus establishing credits to be used to keep the exchanges stable.

Each national bank, under this scheme, at the prevailing rate of interest, would place extensive new credits at the disposal of its respective states, municipalities, or private business, to start new production or expansion such as would most quickly reabsorb the unemployed while providing the products wanted immediately by working class consumers.

The derangement of internal equilibrium, Dr. Eisler explained, would be prevented by the valorization of all existing monetary obligations, including wages, salaries, fees, interest, taxes, rent, deeds of sale, commercial bills, gold obligations, or gold stocks in existence at the time the currency was expanded, according to an index figure representing prevailing retail prices, rents, tax rates, and so forth, and the fulfillment of these obligations with due regard to a rise in these indices. Gold would remain a handy medium of international exchange and because of its growing scarcity would become more valuable, but its price, instead of determining the purchasing power of money, would be inversely determined by the purchasing power of money.

Security Listings Show Decline During October

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 1—New and additional securities listed on the New York stock exchange in October were less than in September and far below the total for the corresponding month last year. The total for the month was $611,049,606 of which $149,642,741 was in new stock, $205,630,000 in new bonds, $194,676,865 in additional stock, and $58,100,000 in additional bonds. Last month's figures compare with $806,917,852 for listings in September and $2,210,513,238 in October, 1929.

Estimated receipts at Chicago on Monday: 10,000; cattle, 45,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep.

Buyers were indifferent on the week-end session and obtained hogs at steady to 10c lower prices, in face of a possibility of moderate supplies during the first half of next week. Weighty hogs met narrower outlet and the extreme top showed 20c loss at $9.25, comparing with a top of $9.45 the previous Saturday and with $10.00 ten days ago.

The general average moved down 5c at $8.95. This is only the second time the average has been below the $9.00 line since early last August. Prevailing quotations are mostly 35@45c below the close of last week.

Winter Light in Demand.

Light weight hogs for December, January and next March delivery were in demand on the hog futures market yesterday, while buyers neglected the market for medium and weighty stock. Open contracts for December were bid $8.45 and offered for the last half of that month at $9.00. Contracts to deliver hogs the last half of January were bid $8.70 and offered at $9.09. March light for the first half of the month were bid $9.00 and offered at $9.50, while contracts for the last half of that month were bid $9.10 and offered at $9.60.

Large supplies of light weight hogs, a break in the wholesale market for light loins and the narrowest shipping demand in some time were the bearish factors in the hog market during the last week. Total arrivals for the week at 132,300 compare with 147,233 the previous week and with a five year average of 141,400. The general average dropped 90c at $9.15, but was the same as a year ago and 10c above two years ago. Only 13 per cent of total arrivals sold to outside buyers, against 24 per cent a week ago, 19 per cent a year ago and 21 per cent two years ago.

The marketward movement of the new crop of hogs has reached full swing, and, in spite of the fact that corn has had a set back this year, the quality of hogs is running exceptionally good, according to packers. Weights are lighter since early in the year, the supply on recent sessions consisting largely of hogs averaging 170@220 lbs. of high dressing percentage.

Average Weight Is Less.

The October average weight at 231 lbs was lightest since February and lightest for October since 1917. However, during the period 1911 to 1917, most October averages were below 215 lbs. Back in 1891 the October average was down to 227 lbs. Hog receipts at Chicago for the month at 635,236 were second largest for October since 1924, while the eleven markets total at 2,119,000 was the second smallest for October since 1921. The average price at $9.35 compares with $13.00 in September, with $9.60 in August, and with $8.80 in July.

An increase of more than 50 per cent in the supply of western range lambs during the last week more than offset the decrease in offerings from local states, bringing the week's total arrivals to the largest of the year at 81,500. However, supplies at principal points were unevenly distributed, the combined total at the seven leading markets showing a slight decrease compared with a week ago. Buyers held the whip hand and brought the week's general average down 40c at $10.50. The October cattle average at $10.75 compared with $9.50 in July, the low monthly average this year.

Sheep Receipts Decrease.

Sheep receipts dropped off abruptly during the last week and part of the previous week's sharp losses were recovered. The break in the wholesale market for dressed lambs, however, made buyers cautious and the bulge in the market was only mild compared to the break a week ago. Chicago handled nearly 30,000 fewer sheep and lambs than a week ago, while the total at the seven leading markets dropped nearly 100,000. The low level of prices early in the week held the week's general average at $7.65, comparing with $8.10 the previous week.

Fresh lambs closed the week at 11@18c, against 12@20c a week ago and 9@17c a month ago. Although sheep receipts the last week have been small, the October total at 530,823 was largest since September, 1926, and largest for October in seven years. During the last two months Chicago has handled more than 1,000,000 sheep and lambs. The October average price of lambs at $7.70 was lowest since October, 1914.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 45,000 cattle, 45,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 27,628 cattle, 32,893 hogs, and 26,775 sheep a week ago, and 37,741 cattle, 34,128 hogs, and 18,143 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 38,000 cattle, 350,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 34,629 cattle, 156,130 hogs, and 67,213 sheep a year ago.

LONDON REPORTS DEMAND FOR GILT EDGED STOCKS

Finds Plenty of Money for Investment.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Gilt edged investment stocks occupied the choice position in the stock market's activity this week, the session finishing up in an atmosphere of another boomlet for "safety first" securities. British funds almost monopolized the business for several days, leaving other sections of the house periodically neglected.

Last week's optimistic activity with the consequent rapid advance of quotations in the industrial section was not fully continued this week as the sustained support of foreign investors was not forthcoming. However, there appears to be plenty of money available for the new capital issues not of the speculative character; a striking illustration being afforded by the reception of a gas, light, and coke issue of $12,500,000 debenture stock for which more than $325,000,000 was applied for.

Although many of the speculative departments indicate a broadening of interest, the feeling is now general that they will not develop permanently until after the year-end settlement.

Banks Buy Better Grades.

Banks and financial houses were responsible for the greater part of the purchases of very large lines of stock in the best class of investment securities this week. The activity was based on the belief that Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, has finished his plans for his huge conversion loan scheme of 5 per cent war stock and will give effect to it in the very near future. The present buying movement looks like a raising of the level of the British government credit to a 4 per cent basis and this will certainly be of assistance to Mr. Snowden in his conversion operations.

Bank rate reductions are also strongly talked of for the early future, the gossip going so far as to suggest the possibility of even a 2 per cent rate. This view is not generally favored, however, especially as foreign exchanges show a reaction to sterling. Rates continued to move slightly against London all week.

The French exchange remains level, permitting a profitable purchase of gold in the London bullion market by the French banks, and although this is still occurring it is apparently not causing any great concern. The present great strength of the Bank of England indicated a condition wherein it could afford to lose a "large amount of gold without feeling compelled to take protective measures."

Stand at High Levels.

The present prices of gilt edged stocks are now standing at the highest levels, a position in which the investors will shortly find it profitable to transfer part of their funds from the gilt edged stocks to higher yielding industrial securities.

Brokers report large numbers of inquiries from clients as to the advisability of this proceeding, but the trade revival will probably be well advanced before this brings any great influence to the monetary position.

The foreign exchange section experienced a large turnover on the American account this week, large buying orders for dollars both from London and the continent tending to move the sterling dollar rate against London.

Foreign Section Cheered.

The end of the Brazilian revolution cheered the foreign section, giving it a chance for the resumption of business on a normal basis. Most of the Brazilian loan stocks were up several points. The German sterling loan was also steadier and the Chinese loans were outstanding on the growing belief of a more settled political condition, the 1912 gold loan raising six points to 47½.

Elsewhere trans-Atlantic industrials were dull, railways were idle and rubber was better with a rush of buying orders, carrying the price of the commodity to nine cents a pound, nearly two cents above the recent low.

BUTTER AND EGGS

Butter futures held with little change on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Salesmen's fair gains were recorded at the openings. These advances were lost in selling toward the close, however. Egg futures advanced fractionally, holdovers commanding the newer stock. The January butter delivery showed the only notable change, advancing ½c to 32½c in a last minute sale. November butter closed at 32¼@32½c, steady to ½c higher, and December at 32½c, up ½c. Sales—Butter, 237 cars; eggs, 183 cars. Receipts—Butter, 6,500 tubs; eggs, 2,361 cases. Prices follow:

SOUTH SIDE TO GET $2,500,000 NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Wendell Phillips for 50th and State Streets.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago's large south side colored district is to have one of the finest and best equipped senior high schools in the world, to cost $2,500,000 and to accommodate 2,664 girls and boys. This great structure, to have as its site the entire block bounded by State street, Wabash avenue, 49th and 50th streets, will be called the Wendell Phillips High school. The old high school of that name, at Prairie and 39th, will be used entirely as a junior high school.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Paul Gerhardt, architect for the board of education, who designed the new Wendell Phillips High school, announced yesterday that figures will be in by Nov. 12 and with construction getting under way a few weeks later the new school should be ready for pupils by Jan. 1, 1932. It is expected that the new building will relieve congestion in the Hyde Park High school and Englewood High school.

After Years of Agitation.

Announcement that at last the long talked of but much deferred Wendell Phillips High school is actually to be built probably will be received with much enthusiasm in the district which it will cater to. For years a new high school has been sought by the residents but nothing came of the agitation. Then, two years ago, the State street site was cleared of buildings and the district became optimistic, but for the last two years nothing more was heard of the project.

The new school, it is stated, will be as fine as anything of its kind in this country. It will be fireproof and of steel frame construction. The main entrance will be on South State street.

The structure will consist of a main section of three stories in which will be housed the administrative suite, the library, and various schoolrooms, and two large wings. In the north wing there'll be a large assembly hall seating 2,250 and a small hall accommodating 250.

Gyms for Boys and Girls.

The south wing will contain a large gymnasium, 60x100, with a balcony, for boys. Also two smaller gyms for girls, 60x80. There'll also be a swimming pool, 24x60. A corrective gymnasium for both Boys and girls is planned. In addition there'll be locker and shower rooms for both boys and girls.

Although all big city high schools have much the same imposing list of rooms for study and recitation purposes, it may be interesting to give a full description of what the architect has planned for the boys and girls of the new Wendell Phillips High. In the center section there'll be twenty-three classrooms, a lunchroom, a wood shop, an auto shop, an electric shop, two mechanical drawing rooms, two chemical laboratories, and a lecture room, two physics laboratories and a lecture hall and a civics room.

Sewing and Cooking Rooms.

Then there'll be three study rooms, a sewing room, a cooking room, a household appliance room, two composing rooms, a pressroom, a linotype room, a band and orchestra room, two music rooms, a chorus room, two commercial geography rooms, a calculating room, two typewriting rooms, one stenography room, two bookkeeping rooms, two botany laboratories, a sociological laboratory and lecture hall, two art rooms, a general science room, and two weaving rooms.

And if any one thinks this high school isn't needed, we might add that the present old Wendell Phillips High at 49th and Prairie is so crowded with its junior and senior high school pupils and with its less than one thousand seats, that it is operating on a double session day. That means, of course, that efficiency is handicapped by a congestion which will be done away with entirely when the new $2,500,000 Wendell Phillips High is opened.

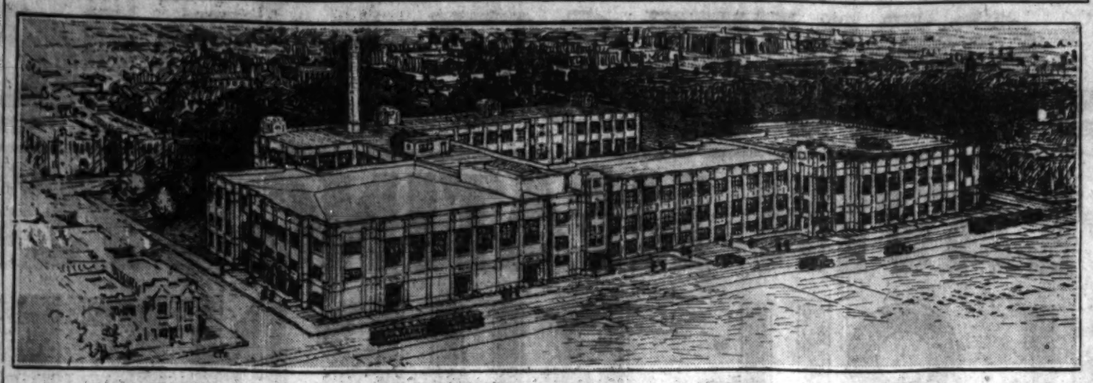
Thirteen Story Lutheran Building Changes Hands

The thirteen story Lutheran building at 105-09 North Dearborn street, lot 56x80, has been sold by the Lutheran Building corporation to an undisclosed buyer, it was stated yesterday. The building, erected in 1914, was purchased by the Lutherans in 1924.

NIPPLE COMPANY LEASES PLANT.

The Star Nipple company, manufacturers of pipe nipples, will lease a one story brick plant, 142x198, which the Phipps Industrial Land Trust will erect in the 4700 block on South Richmond street. The Austin company has been awarded the contract for the design and construction.

FOR 2,664 CHICAGO BOYS AND GIRLS



Paul Gerhardt, architect for the board of education, designed the above $2,500,000 building to house the Wendell Phillips High school. It will be erected in the block bounded by State street, Wabash avenue, 49th and 50th streets, and it is expected will be ready for pupils by Jan. 1, 1932. It will have accommodations for 2,664 boys and girls. The present Wendell Phillips High school, at 39th and Prairie, now used for both junior and senior high school purposes, will be devoted entirely to junior high uses when the new school is completed.

REALTORS TO HOLD ALL DAY SALES SESSION

Business and Fun to Be Combined.

Leonard P. Reaume, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be the principal speaker at an all day sales conference to be held by the sales division of the Chicago Real Estate board next Wednesday in the Cameo room of Morrison hotel. The morning session will start at 10 o'clock. Following the afternoon session the complimentary buffet supper usually served at the board rooms will be held at the hotel instead. The evening session, following the supper, will be held in conjunction with the regular November meeting of the board.

LEONARD P. REAUME.

Other speakers will be Guy W. Ellis, former president of the Detroit Real Estate board and now a member of the staff of the National Association of Real Estate Boards as special lecturer on sales promotion for real estate; Paul Stark, of Madison, Wis., a member of the executive committee of the brokers' division of the national association, and George Porter McMahon, a Detroit realtor.

"How I Am Making 1930 My Best Year in Selling Business Property" is Mr. McMahon's subject. Mr. Reaume speaks on "New Jobs for Real Estate." Mr. Stark will give two talks, one on "Open House—A New Way of Selling Used Homes," the other on "Making the Public Like Them." Mr. Ellis also will give two talks, one on "Making It Easier to Buy," the other on "What Is a Property Brief."

"The Realtors Follies of 1930" will furnish an intermission in the business activities of the day. "Give 'Em the Air"—a scene at the double section corner at Suburban Manor featuring H. Raglan Patchmore on "The Real Estate Situation" and a skit, "No Concessions," in which the characters are a lady and a renting agent, are elements in the "Follies."

CHICAGO MAN DESIGNS "FRAT" HOUSE AT U. OF I.

Max Alper, Chicago architect, has designed a $65,000 chapter house which Pi chapter of Omicron Alpha Tau fraternity will erect at the southwest corner of Locust and Chalmers streets, in Champaign. The building will be of English Tudor design and will accommodate fifty University of Illinois students. It will have two dormitories, eighteen study rooms, several guest rooms, a large dining room, and a large living room with a fireplace. Work will start next February with completion set for August, according to George Becker, Chicago structural engineer and president of Pi chapter alumni. Bernard Friedman is chancellor of the chapter.

Sketch Club to Exhibit Drawings Next Friday

The Architectural Sketch Club of Chicago and its atelier invite the public to an exhibition of the drawings submitted for the twenty-third Paris prize competition of the Beaux Arts Institute of Design. The exhibit will be held next Friday, Nov. 7, in the clubrooms at 1801 Prairie avenue.

MICHIGAN SQUARE LEASES.

The Royal Television and Finance company, the Auto-Vac corporation, and Harold Crellin, commercial artist, have leased space in the Michigan Square building, according to Hogan & Farwell.

MILWAUKEE AVENUE LEASE.

The Halsted Bedding company has leased the store at 1542 Milwaukee avenue from Marks Kaplan for three years at a reported term rental of $6,300. Kaplan & Co. were brokers.

AT UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

This is the new chapter house to be erected by Pi chapter of Omicron Alpha Tau fraternity, at the southwest corner of Locust and Chalmers street, Champaign, from plans by Max Alper, Chicago architect. It will cost $65,000 and accommodate fifty men. It will be of English Tudor design and will be completed by next August. Roffe Beman made this picture.

HOTEL LA SALLE TO HAVE 'ARF PINT GOLF COURSE ON MAIN FLOOR

Indoor golf of the pint o' cider variety continues to intrigue our hostelry managers. Believing that pewee putting will bring in more money than mere gastronomic activities, the Hotel La Salle management has leased its Rookwood room, a restaurant at the southwest corner of the main floor of the hotel, for use as a miniature golf course. Nathaniel C. Ross and Louis L. Goetz have taken the space for six months and are converting the well known restaurant into a tiny golf course. If playing proves more popular than eating, the six months' term will be extended. According to E. J. Stevens guests will be able to tee off by Monday after next, or Nov. 10.

FARM and GARDEN

GOBBLER CROP AMPLE, PRICES LOWER, REPORT

Tells How Turkeys Are Marketed.

BY PAUL POTTER.

As the nation turned the calendar leaves to November yesterday, people automatically counted up the days until Thanksgiving. Whereupon a mighty chorus of gobbles went up from the plains of Texas, Idaho, Vermont and points in between. For Nov. 27th is their day.

As reported to agricultural officials in Washington, the turkey population this year will start its trek to market soon, in numbers about 3 per cent less than last year, but greater than in 1927 or 1928. Had it not been for somewhat smaller hatches by growers this spring, and a summer of slender picking in feedlots in some parts of the country, turkeydom would have been the largest in history this year, the authorities assert.

Turkey Not Luxury Now.

Early contracts which have been let between turkey raisers and those who get them into consumptive channels, foretell prices as low as those bottom turkey quotations last fall, if not lower. This is said to be a reflection of lowered commodity prices all along the line. When it comes time to plan the fall feast, this bird of grandeur must compete for a place on the festive board with other fowl and meats, in 1930, as in any year of deflation.

That turkeys should be priced above many aother entrees in an autumn menus seems illogical to many urbanites, who have had no experience in the difficulties of raising a turkey poult to maturity, and getting him dressed and shipped to the point of intimacy with the Ultimate Consumer family.

Farm Turkeys Sold Locally.

While many small flocks of turkeys are raised each year by farmers and their wives in the corn belt, these are largely for local markets. The bulk of the supply is secured from turkey flocks of moderate to immense proportions handled by men who specialize in this farm crop.

Modern methods have crept into the business, too. Special feeds, special "runs" or yards, and scientific means of combating "black leg" and other turkey infections are practiced on farms in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and other midwest states. Only, in section with wide ranges, however, can great droves of turkeys be raised on a scale like the cattle and sheep ranchers have made famous.

Nearly all turkeys are marketed with more system than in former days. Under federal supervision, a system of grades has been placed in effect, to insure grower, distributor and consumer fairness in selling and buying a known quality of bird.

Extend Federal Grading.

Until last fall this grading had been confined to terminal markets. Now it is extended into country points. Schools of instruction on grading are held at such places as Salt Lake City. In all, 14 such schools were held under federal farm board and United States department of agriculture supervision last fall in California, Oregon, Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada, and Minnesot

"The dry summer has been ideal for raising turkeys, because they are susceptible to colds in wet weather," declares Harrison F. Jones, secretary of the National Poultry, Butter and Egg association.

"While the early reports to the government indicate a slightly lower crop than last year," he adds, "we are informed that more birds will mature for the November market this fall than is usual. The quality this year will be as good as I have seen in many years."

Mr. Jones offers further good news for housewives with eyes to the food budget in predicting that turkeys will be probably five cents a pound less than the low costs last year. This he says is no reflection on the quality, but an indication of general lowering costs of all foods this year. Turkeys that last year cost 40 cents a pound should be plentiful in a few weeks at 35 to 37 cents, if this be true.

Feed a-Plenty Misleads Turkeys

Another war in the Balkans wouldn't save these "turks" from their sentence of going to market either for Thanksgiving or for Christmas or New Year's day. This flock of bronze northern grown gobblers and pullets will be one among many used to feature holiday menus in homes, restaurants, and hotels in a few weeks.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

RECREATION AREA IN HOME SERVES TO UNITE FAMILY

Modern Basement Ideal Place for Play.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders' Editor.]

(Next week will appear an article, "Linoleums in the Home.")

In the complex era in which we live, with so many outside diversions claiming the interest of the different family members, no effort can scarcely be considered too great which contributes to real pleasures within the home.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Hutchinson Photo.]

So many things there are to do in the house and to interest one—providing one has the space for them. The radio, the home moving picture machine, television (in the offing), dancing, billiards, pool, cards, and games of all descriptions.

For this reason the good time room, commandeered from space long considered unusuable, perhaps, excepting for storage purposes, and equipped as thoroughly as it is planned wisely, can mean much in a home.

This is especially true where there are small youngsters in a household who need a place of their own for their playthings, or older boys and girls who must have goon times and will go elsewhere for them if they cannot get them at home.

Men and women who were reared in spacious, old fashioned houses with libraries and studies, dens and recreation areas in great abundance, often find themselves and their children installed in appreciably smaller and inflexible quarters. Their growing family, however, is demanding more space and the parents, groping about mentally to discover ways and means by which more space may be acquired, find that the cellar is one of the first places which offers itself.

The cellar has a number of points in its favor. It is unusually large and sounds from it do not penetrate easily to other parts of the house. If it has an entrance from the outside children can use it—to invite in the neighborhood if they like.

With modern methods of construction and waterproofing there is no reason for a cellar being damp or unhealthy. Well built windows can let in fresh air and light and electrical outlets supply plenty of artificial illumination.

A cellar recreation room can easily have a natural fireplace—or a gas or electric grate if preferred. The walls may be brightly painted or the room may be partitioned from the rest of the basement by wall board. The floor can be of painted cement or of hardwood or of any of the synthetic floorings, linoleum, rubber tiling, and so on.

Where one burns oil or gas the space for the coal bin can be used for work shop or other useful purposes, and with these fuels the dust and dirt problem is entirely eliminated.

However, if one burns coal, the coal furnaces are so greatly improved that one can practically run them in dustless fashion. A coal bin can be so well built that it allows no dirt to seep into the rest of the basement, and to go with the new colorful boilers, more like giant phonographs than heating plants, there are the modern domestic stokers, which feed coal to your furnace automatically whenever the temperature of the house calls for a "few more shovels."

If we seem to have strayed a bit from the subject of the recreation room it is only to show how clean and healthy a basement may be at the present time, no matter how one fuels the furnace.

Where a good time room is used by the older members it can have a davenport by the grate, a bookcase, a few wicker chairs, a radio, a motion picture machine, a card table and chairs. Many times the outfitting of a basement recreation room brings into use some of the older furniture upstairs—and furnishes a bona fide excuse for new furnishings on the first and second floor.

"We really wanted all these new pieces of furniture before," one woman confessed recently as she proudly exhibited her new living room furniture and then took her guests downstairs where a recreation room had been charmingly fitted up. "But before we decided to convert our basement into a good time area we hadn't any place for the old furniture and it seemed too good to discard entirely."

Some families use the extra space for a workshop for the man of the house or for the boys who have mechanical hobbies of various sorts.

Again it serves as a billiard room or for a small bowling outfit or pool. Where there is this type of pleasure affording equipment in the basement, there are always people to enjoy it.

Or it may be appropriated for gymnastics, and swings, dumbbells, games, and so on. Even space can be found for a regular shooting gallery, not far away from the furnace.

Still other families, with a number of small children to be given a place for their amusements in cold weather, make the basement into a nursery play space, with electric trains, automobiles, airplanes, doll houses, sand piles and mechanical toys of all kinds.

For many years the attic has often been used as a place where, if necessary, the children can go in bad weather. In this capacity it remained a haphazard affair, piled with trunks, boxes and assorted odds and ends.

Now, however, home owners who need extra room are transforming this one time storage spot into a well equipped room, or number of rooms, for everyday uses.

ENHANCING HOME ENJOYMENT

Why not give your house a pleasure room this winter? Never were there so many forms of amusement possible within the home: radio, motion picture machines, television (in the offing), dancing, billiards, gymnastics, games of all kinds and description. Think it over! There may be undreamed of possibilities for such a room in your basement or your attic.

DRAIN HOT WATER BOILER IF SIGNS OF RUST APPEAR

When your hot water spigot gushes rusty, red water it means that your hot water tank probably contains a fine sediment of rust.

When this first happens locate the drain valve in the hot water tank and drain water out for about 5 minutes. Preferably water should be cold when this is done as the rust will be settled in the bottom of the tank and will drain off more readily. If this process is repeated for several days the water will be clear again.

This can happen in the best regulated of heating systems, but should not be allowed to go unchecked.

Attractive Mirror Does Much to Brighten Hall

A mirror of attractive design can do much towards brightening a hall—that spot in the home which is often but half lighted.

YOUR HEATING SYSTEM NEEDS CLOSE WATCHING

BY HOMER GRANT.

Since all authorities are unanimous in agreeing that the good condition of the heating system is largely, though not entirely, responsible for economical and safe heating, this system's health these days is important. An unhealthy heating system means a house that is not warm, one which is a contributory cause of colds and respiratory diseases. Colds, moreover, which take dollars out of the worker's pocket each year.

It is an excellent plan to have a competent man go over one's heating system from ash pot to chimney cap every fall. Forced firing, which must be resorted to when the system is clogged with soot and dirt, means more fuel used and increased fire danger.

Too Many Fires.

There is an appalling number of residence fires in our country every year—something like one home fire every four minutes of our twenty-four hour day. Inspection and cleaning of chimneys, flue pipe, and heating plant would eliminate a large number, since roof fires are frequently caused from burning soot and sparks from dirty heating plants, while defective and dirty flue pipes are often responsible for basement fires.

If your draft is poor, find out whether the chimney is defective or only dirty. Perhaps its lining has broken down and clogged the passage.

If you have an old style warm air plant, investigate the modern electrically operated propeller units which force circulation of warm air.

A Pleasant Surprise.

If you have a room or two which always have been hard to heat you can expect a pleasant surprise in its increased warmth.

When one has a hot water or steam boiler, soot and fly ash on its heating surface are a big source of poor heating trouble since they have an insulating effect and a part of the heat of combustion is dissipated before reaching the water.

FISHING FOR A FORTUNE

I HOPE I CATCH A WHALE

LAZY HABITS

BOY - OH BOY! LOOK WHAT THIS BABY CLEANED UP — HE PAID $16,000.00 FOR A LOT ON THE CORNER OF ELM AND MAIN STREETS — AND SOLD IT FOR $160,000.00

GOSH! AND I COULD HAVE BOUGHT ALL THE LAND AROUND THERE ONCE FOR A HUNDRED DOLLARS AN ACRE —

MIN — WHAT DO YOU THINK OF CHARLIE SCHWARTZ? HE BOUGHT THAT LOT AT THE CORNER OF ELM AND MAIN STREETS A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO FOR $16,000.00 — AND SOLD IT YESTERDAY — WHAT DO YOU THINK HE GOT FOR IT?

I HAVE NO IDEA —

$160,000.00 A THOUSAND PERCENT ON HIS INVESTMENT — THINK OF IT — HE MADE A PROFIT OF JUST $144,000.00 AND DIDN'T DO A LICK OF WORK — MIN — THAT'S THE WAY TO MAKE MONEY —

YES — I THINK THAT'S WONDERFUL — IF YOU CAN DO IT.

YES — I CAN REMEMBER WHEN ALL THAT PROPERTY WAS NOTHING BUT A SWAMP — THERE WASN'T A HOUSE OR A BUILDING ON IT — NOT A STREET CAR LINE RUNNING WITHIN A MILE OF IT — IT WAS ALL FARM LAND — I COULD HAVE BOUGHT IT FOR A HUNDRED DOLLARS AN ACRE —

AND NOW LOOK AT IT — GOSH! IF I HAD ONLY BEEN SMART — IF I HAD TAKEN A FEW HUNDRED DOLLARS OF THAT MONEY THAT WE'VE SPENT FOOLISHLY — AND BOUGHT SOME OF THAT FARM LAND WITH IT —

JUST THINK OF THE PROFIT I COULD HAVE MADE — THINK OF THE HATS IT COULD HAVE BOUGHT — IMAGINE — ACRE AFTER ACRE COULD'VE BEEN HAD AT YOUR OWN PRICE — AND NOW IT'S ALL BUILT UP — BIG APARTMENT BUILDINGS — AND BUISINESS PROPERTY —

SUPPOSE I HAD BOUGHT ONE HUNDRED ACRES — SAY - EVEN FIFTY ACRES — WHEN IT WAS OFFERED TO ME AT ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS AN ACRE — LET'S SEE WHAT THAT WOULD HAVE COST ME — JUST $5,000.00 —

AND IF I HAD HELD IT UNTIL NOW AND DIVIDED IT INTO CITY LOTS — THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN EIGHT LOTS TO THE ACRE — AND FIFTY TIMES THAT WOULD BE 400 LOTS — AND IF I HAD SOLD THEM AT THE PRICE SCHWARTZ GOT — $160,000.00 A LOT — FOR THE FIFTY ACRES I WOULD HAVE MADE A NEAT — $64,000,000.00

AND SUPPOSE I HAD BOUGHT A SECTION — 640 ACRES — IT WOULD BE WORTH TODAY OVER $800,000,000.00 — THAT I'VE JUST THROWN AWAY —

THE MONEY I'VE LOST —

WHAT A SAP I'VE BEEN —

WOMEN WITH LARGE PORES

Read this...

An explanation of the large pore problem now troubling American women

How new method is accomplishing such remarkable work in pore refining. Read these amazing facts . . .

Here's that new way of pore refining scientists have been working on for three years.

It's a way that not only refines pores, but does so in a remarkably short time.

You accomplish this by means of a liquid which is both a cleanser and a solvent.

What it does

First it thoroughly cleans surface of skin, then it enters pores and dissolves out accumulated pore residue. Relieved of this residue, pores shrink back to normal size.

Observe how skin is left cool, clean, exhilarated. Due to a special ingredient used in the formula this delightful cooling sensation remains half an hour or longer after liquid is applied.

Use after cleansing cream to remove all traces of grease, all lingering particles of dirt, dust.

Use during day to cleanse skin when renewing make-up. Make-up then applied gives you the lustrous look of glowing health.

New delicate skin texture

Note, please, the new delicate skin texture, the vivid cleanness regular use of Hinds Toning Cleanser brings you

Do not confuse Hinds Toning Cleanser with skin tonics and fresheners. It is a liquid cleanser which refines pores. Positively will not dry the skin.

This liquid cleanser is one of the three remarkable new Hinds products which were declared equal in quality to similar products made by the salon lines when the recent comparative cosmetic test was made at a well-known New York laboratory.

You get it at all drug and department stores. Price 65¢. Buy Hinds Toning Cleanser today. An utterly new conception of skin care awaits you.

DRAMATIC TEST made at well-known New York laboratory proves three new Hinds products equal in quality to similar products of the expensive lines bearing famous "individual" names and selling at prices from two to eight times more than they do.

That is why you see large ugly pores on many women.

Only a solvent with real penetrating power can enter this minute curving channel and dissolve out accumulated pore residue. And thus permit pores to shrink back to their normal fine state.

(Diagram made from microscopic drawing)

Love isn't blind at this range

These three new Hinds Products are scientifically compounded to supplement each other. Three years have been spent in research at the Hinds laboratories to perfect them.

Use them together, please. We urge you not to counteract their good effect by using ordinary creams and lotions with them.

Made by the makers of Hinds Honey and Almond Cream, used by American women for over fifty years.

Insist on the genuine Hinds Cleansing Cream, Hinds Texture Cream (in 40¢ and 65¢ sizes), and Hinds Toning Cleanser, 65¢. At all druggists. A. S. Hinds Co., Bloomfield, N. J.

Avoid Heavy Cleansing Creams

They may stretch skin . . . cause pore enlargement

You get best success in pore-refining with Toning Cleanser if the cleansing cream you use is a delicate liquefying cream.

There is a new and remarkable cleansing cream that melts the moment it touches your skin. Thus can penetrate and clean immediately. Hinds Cleansing Cream, it is called.

Cleans gently

Observe how gently this new cleansing cream removes impurities, leaving skin clean and soothed.

Contrast this with action of old-type "heavy" cleansing creams that go on skin like lard. And thus require strenuous rubbing which may stretch pores.

Finest ingredients and utter skill in compounding are necessary to produce a cleansing cream of this exquisite quality.

Comes in 2 sizes

Hinds Cleansing Cream liquefies from 2 to 7 times faster than any other popular priced liquefying or so-called "liquefying" cleansing cream. Chemists have proved this.

You get this new cleansing cream in two sizes, at 40¢ and 65¢. Observe, please, the exquisite container. Buy Hinds Cleansing Cream today. At all drug and department stores.

Declared Equal to Salon Products

In a strict test made at a well-known New York laboratory these 3 products were certified to be equal in quality to salon products selling at from 2 to 8 times more.

Here is the chemists' statement:

". . . we have made strict laboratory tests of Hinds Cleansing Cream, Hinds Texture Cream, Hinds Toning Cleanser in direct comparison with similar products of the expensive lines bearing famous 'individual' names.

"We find them equal and in three cases superior in quality to these famous 'individual' name products which sell at prices from 2 to 8 times more than they do."

New Greaseless Skin Softener

No need now to use greasy softening creams because skin is dry, scaly!

Now there's a new-type softening cream to correct these dry skin conditions. Hinds Texture Cream, it's called.

A light, delicate cream you apply at night . . . it is utterly unlike greasy softening creams. Hence you retire with face smooth and lovely.

No need to smooth towel over pillow for fear of grease on linen.

No need to be uncomfortable with grease on face . . . in hair.

At all drug and department stores. Hinds Texture Cream, 40¢ and 65¢.

VISUALIZATION OF A VISIT TO OUR FINNY FRIENDS—Visitors admiring the marvels of the $3,000,000 John G. Shedd aquarium, largest and most up-to-date institution of its kind in the world. In the four months that the galleries have been open, an attendance of more than 1,600,000 has been recorded. Three salt water galleries and one fresh water gallery are now open, showing 3,500 fishes representing 135 species. A fifth gallery will be opened soon.

NOT A KING CHARLES SPANIEL—The exceedingly rare short nosed bat fish, a native of the Florida keys, appears to be more animal than fish, with its fleshy limbs, on which it walks, its rough skin covered with fringes of little threads instead of scales, and its highbrow profile. Science accords it the highest place in the classification of fishes.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE NEXT MEAL—The perpetually interesting sea horse, found along the Atlantic coast from New York to Florida, is always one of the most attractive exhibits at the aquarium in spite of its small size. It eats nothing but living small "bugs." This one is scanning the bottom in search of food.

CONTENTMENT—The red grouper, whose habitat is the south Atlantic coast from the Carolinas to Texas, is the most abundant of the groupers in our southern waters, and is an excellent food fish. This one has just had dinner and is taking it easy for the moment, perhaps cogitating on the splendid cuisine at the Shedd aquarium.

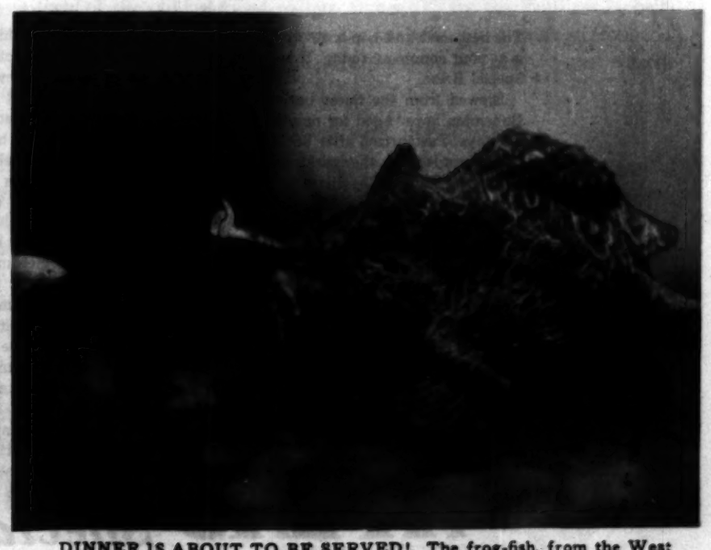
UNDER COVER—Nothing to hide under but a barnacle-covered branch, but the rock hinds make the best of it. So covered are they with red dots that early Portuguese sailors in the West Indies called them Jacob Evertzens, after a pilot with smallpox-pitted face. Both red hind and rock hind shown here are found in West Indies, Florida reefs, and Bahamas.

THE SPOTTED JEWFISH POSES—This is the largest of the sea bass or grouper family. The Shedd aquarium exhibits several of the species, ranging in size from these youngsters to two of the largest fish in captivity anywhere. These two weigh 200 pounds each; special loading equipment and traveling tanks were necessary for transportation from Key West to Chicago.

AQUATIC ZEPS—Heartily disliked by fresh water fishermen, the gars find a ready welcome in the aquarium, where they float majestically around their tank like miniature dirigibles. The last representatives of an ancient race, they infest the Mississippi valley and southeastern United States. This group includes both long-nose and short-nose gars.

HOGS FROM WHICH YOU CAN'T GET PORK CHOPS—The hog fish, a native of West Indian and Florida waters, gets its name from the somewhat porcine profile of the head. It is a chameleon of the sea; the specimens at the aquarium are constantly changing both color and pattern. It is a good food fish, though not plentiful enough for commercial importance.

SENTENCED TO WEAR STRIPES, but they don't break rocks. Although a thousand miles from their native coral reefs of the south Atlantic coast, the spade fish swim contentedly about their tuffa-rock lined tank. A food source of some importance in the south Atlantic states, the spade fish is closely allied to the more colorful angel fish of the tropics.



DINNER IS ABOUT TO BE SERVED! The frog-fish, from the West Indies, has solved the food problem by coaxing his meals to come to him. By means of a worm-like "bait" on the end of a movable spine on his head, this one is tempting the minnow (on the left) close enough to be comfortably swallowed. He is seldom seen in captivity.

BREWED EXACTLY LIKE the BEER you loved

The best-malt-and-hop brew we ever created is at your command today. It is called Atlas Special Brew.

Brewed from the finest barley malt and Bohemian hops. Aged for months, as in the old days. Pasteurized after bottling.

The zest is there, the sparkle and foam, the flavor and aroma. The digestive helps are in it, and the aids to sleep. The tonic qualities, the soothing factors, the delights are there.

Not a Makeshift

Atlas Special Brew is not a "near-beer," not an imitation. Never was a malt-and-hop brew made with more care and skill.

There was never a purer brew. Even the water we use is specially treated to match the brews of Europe. Each bottle is certified.

Less Alcohol—That's All

Less alcohol, of course, but that you will not miss. Were you told that this was an old reserve, you could not discover the difference.

Atlas Special Brew has the old soothing effects. Drink it at bedtime as an aid to sleep. It has the diastase and peptase. Drink it at mealtime as a help to digestion. It has the esters and aldehydes—invigorators. It has the hops. Drink it as a tonic. It has all you loved of flavor and sparkle in the old-time brews.

Taste this Atlas Special Brew. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, delivered to your door. Just ask your dealer or phone us. Over 30,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states supply it. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. Atlas Brewing Company, 2107 Blue Island Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Many children's diseases, such as rickets, whooping cough, tonsilitis, measles, scarlet fever, etc., are directly traceable to a weakened, run-down condition—a lack of proper nourishment. Children who do not secure from their food the vitamins necessary for growth become weak, thin and pale; they cannot hold their own at school or at play; they take cold easily and tire quickly.

Where there is vitamin deficiency in the diet, Father John's Medicine is invaluable. Pale cheeks glow with color, hollows fill out, appetite becomes keen and sharp. Weight picks up, and a happy, husky child starts thriving and growing.

For over 75 years, Father John's Medicine has been helping raise active, vigorous children. Following its use, countless mothers have seen pale, listless children pick right up. And they know that when children take it regularly, bones become strong, muscles hard and colds few and far between.

Because of its combination of cod liver oil with other valuable ingredients, Father John's Medicine brings the vitamins that are necessary to healthy growth. Its food elements are so finely broken up that they are quickly and easily assimilated by even the most delicate stomach. And it actually tastes good!

Don't allow your child to go through the winter in a weakened, run-down condition—a ready prey to disease and infection. Start now with this body builder.

Just ask your druggist for Father John's Medicine. It is used by over 184 hospitals and institutions. Give it to your child regularly. You may be amazed and delighted at the results. It cannot harm even an infant.

FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

ITS IMITATIONS ARE ITS FINEST TESTIMONIALS

● Construction of the Faultless Nobelt waistband: a broad, flat band of live sheet-rubber, encased in resilient webbing. This sheet-rubber gives equal resilience to the entire band and is under no tension until you put on the garment. This results in the gentle, even pressure that can scarcely be felt by the wearer.

● Construction of waistband made from ordinary elastic: note that the only resilience is supplied by a few rubber threads. To supply sufficient tension, these are stretched about 100% when in the waistband, which subjects them to early deterioration, and causes them to press into the flesh, leaving marks upon the skin.

The Nobelt feature is covered by a broad guarantee. If your Nobelt waistband should lose its resilience, we will replace the entire garment without formality or delay. A guarantee slip to this effect will be found in every pair of Faultless Nobelt Pajamas.

The Nobelt waistband in Faultless Pajamas has revolutionized ideas of sleeping comfort. . . . Its popularity has resulted in a flood of inferior imitations

THOUSANDS of men throughout the country have been freed forever from the discomforts of the old-fashioned pajama drawstring by the Faultless Nobelt. . . . With Faultless Pajamas, the wearer need only button a single button, and for the rest of the night, the pajamas stay perfectly in place without perceptible waistline-pressure.

WHY IMITATIONS ARE INFERIOR

The patented, feather-feel Nobelt is constructed from a broad flat band of live sheet-rubber. It gives a gentle, soft resilience that breathes with every motion of the body. Imitations employ a few rubber threads (as in ordinary elastic) to obtain their resilience. These rubber threads press into the flesh, leave marks upon the skin, and are subject to early deterioration.

Faultless Nobelt Pajamas include models to appeal to every taste for material, color and design. Sold by all leading haberdashers and men's wear departments. Nivea Creme goes into your skin—softens it lastingly—holds your powder satin-smooth all evening long, and leaves no shine. That's because Nivea Creme contains the skin guardian, *Eucerite, discovery of a noted German dermatologist.

Nivea Creme restores the substances that are removed by daily exposure—vital substances necessary for smooth, natural loveliness. Every time this winter you use Nivea* Creme as a powder base—you are helping your face acquire a loveliness as soft and smooth as your sheltered body skin. And use it for your hands, too. LOOK OUT FOR TOMAHAWKS—The movie camera clicks off another version of the story of the covered wagon, this time a tale of wagon transportation and war along the old Santa Fe trail, and visualizes the drama of the covered wagon caravan with such eye-filling scenes as this. THIS IS WHAT LIFE IS LIKE to a director of musical shows—largely a matter of legs. The girls are a group in "The Garrick Gayeties," which is a revue staged by the Theater Guild. The Guild is an intellectual organization, but its young disciples must have their fun; hence these "Gayeties," with their more or less symmetrical legs.

IN THE MANNER OF MADRID—Janiva Kurri, Spanish dancer from the Adolph Bolm group, is among soloists appearing in the dai'y concert schedule of the Skalski orchestra this week at Kimball hall.

The Light Sleeper

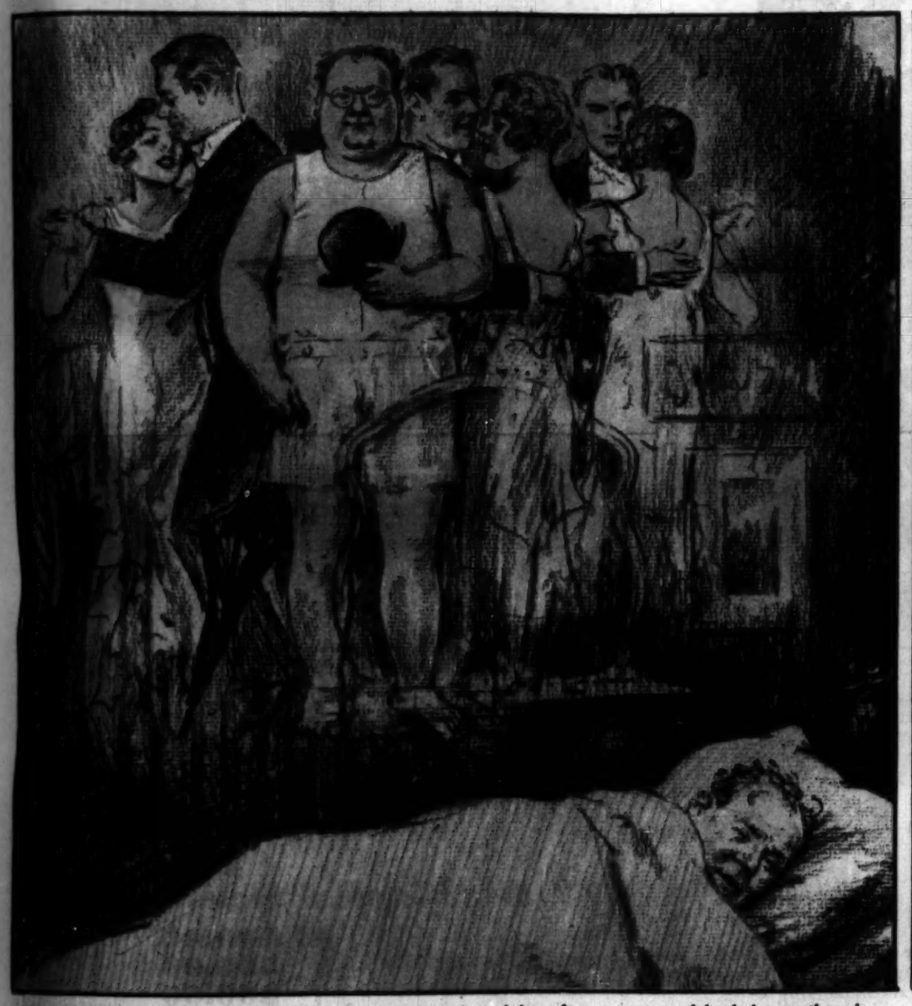
By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The daughter of a lightly sleeping mother who always knows best, about to tiptoe gently past the parent bedroom door at 4 a. m.

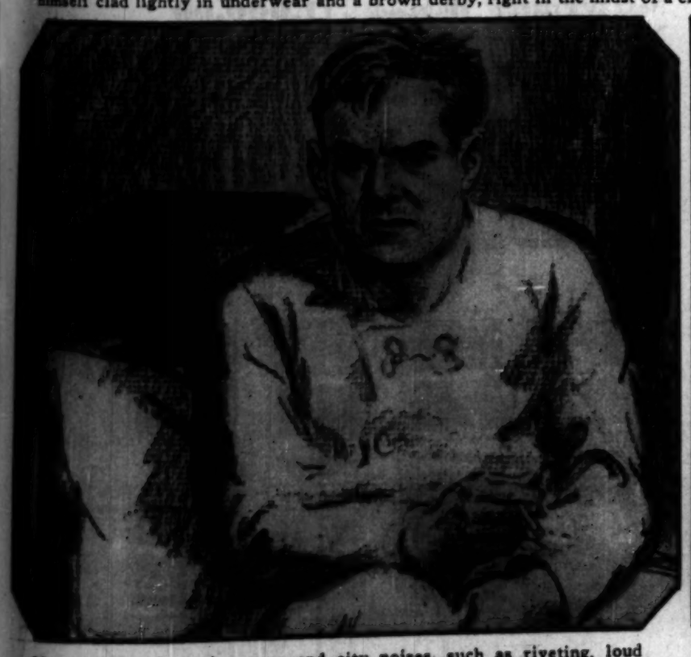
The second cup of coffee. O, how Mrs. Maebelle Leggins does wish she hadn't touched it. Not a wink of sleep has she had since her permanent touched the down pillow. She's been thinking and thinking, and wondering who her real friends are, and if Grace Gherkin meant it as a slight when she stayed away from the bridge party. And whether or not the old blue canton crepe can be dyed seal brown and whether she could give Mrs. Rouse the bag that Ethel sent her, if she has to give her a Christmas present, etc., etc.

The night has a thousand eyes, and two of them belong to Aunt Josie Watts. Aunt Josie is one of those night prowlers who get a lot of exercise between midnight and dawn when gentle slumber evades them. Around 3 a. m. Aunt Josie decides to go peek in the icebox to see if Carrie the cook ate up all the tapioca pudding, or if Patsy the cat has been sequestered in the cellar as he should have been, or some such errand below stairs.

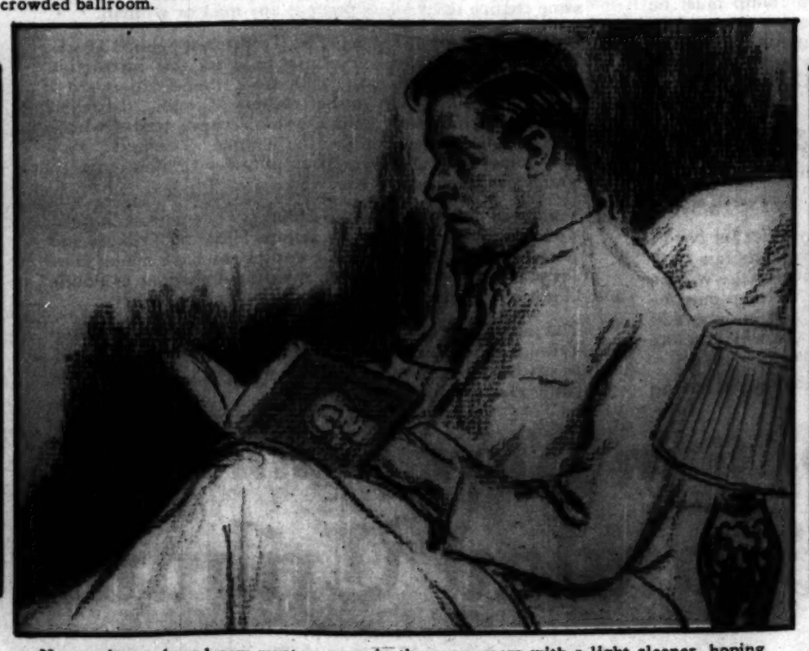


Mr. Kunkel is a light sleeper but a heavy eater and tonight, after a repast of larded sweetbreads, banana fritters en coocoo, onions frisee-sans-chemise, and blueberry dumplings soaked in benedictine, he is having the awfulest dreams, one of the choicest of which we show you. In it Mr. Kunkel finds himself clad lightly in underwear and a brown derby, right in the midst of a crowded ballroom.

"I think there are two women in the party, Mary, and one of them is named 'Cuddles.' O, dear, dear, I'm sure they are a party of gangsters planning a racket or a murder or something! Do you think we ought to change our room?" Elderly ladies of stationary habits, who "can't sleep in a strange bed," have no end of trouble getting their forty winks in a modern hotel.



Marcus is used to city ways and city noises, such as riveting, loud speakers, the grinding of brakes, motor tooting, and the guttural shouts of racketeers murdering a rum runner. No wonder then, that, in the country where there is nothing but silence after 9 p. m., he is wide awake listening for something in the way of noise.



Never place a brand new mystery yarn in the same room with a light sleeper, hoping that a little reading will put him to sleep. Because he won't be able to put the book aside till he finishes the last page and finds out who it was who dismembered Lady Patricia Castaway's beautifully groomed body, and stuffed it in Lord Dennis Doolittle's ash can. And there will be another late breakfast to worry the cook.

The man who boarded an outgoing 12:30 sleeper in the train yard at 9:30 so he could have a good night's rest. By 10:30 he wishes he had a good detective story, the kind that begins: "The worst London fog in 200 years enveloped Scotland Yard. 'Poofph, poofph,' whistled a bullet through the air, leaving a pool of blood and a mangled corpse on the pavement."

Each set of stamps, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete stamps. The public is invited to put the stamps together and name the countries they represent. The Chicago Tribune will pay $10,000.00 in Cash Prizes for the best answers! See Prize List at right.

2. The composite stamps must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each stamp must be written the name of the country it represents. A total of 42 stamps will be printed—3 each Sunday for 14 Sundays. IMPORTANT! Hold all stamps until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Stamps," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.

   Contestants may send as many sets as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize. No entries will be returned.

6. The judging will be based upon the accuracy of putting the stamps together, correctly naming the countries they represent, neatness, and merit of the accompanying letter. Elaborate entries will receive no greater consideration than the most simple entries. The prime requirement will be accuracy. Therefore any school boy or girl has the same chance to obtain a prize as any man or woman.

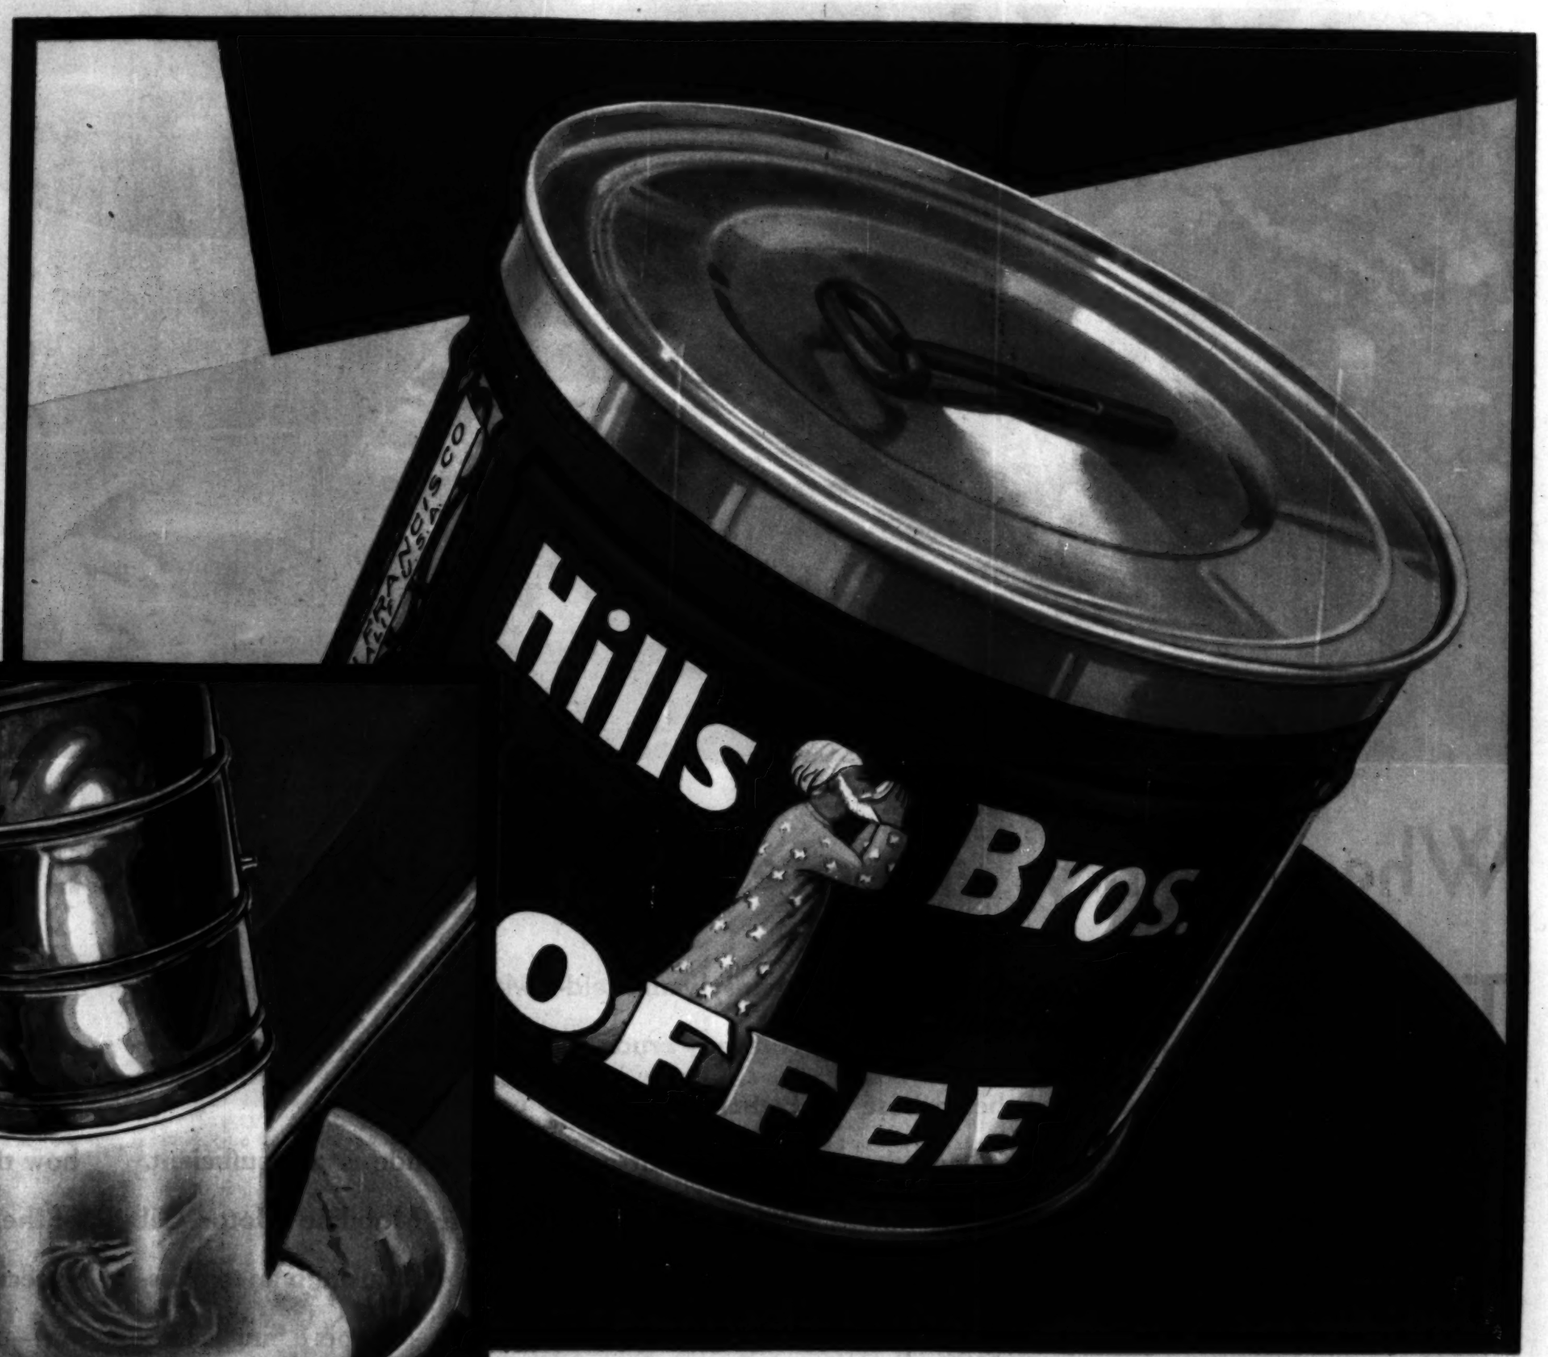
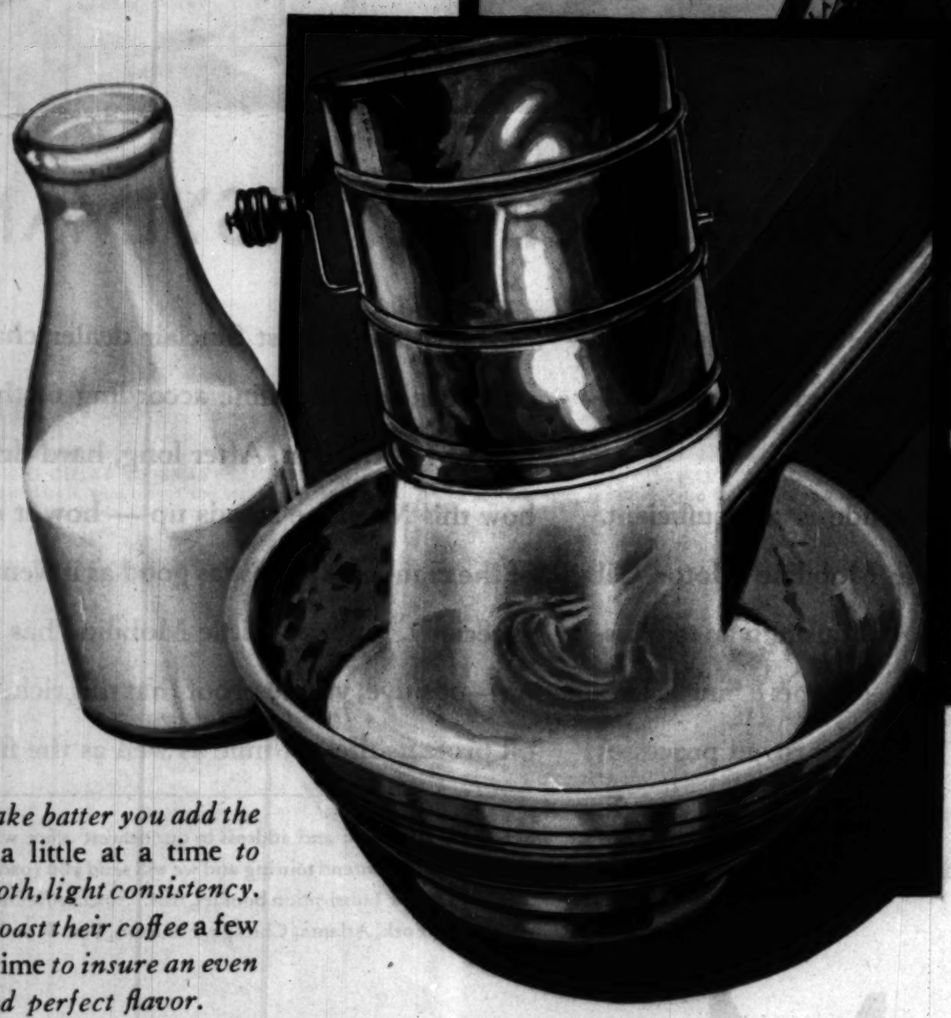
Controlled Roasting gives EVERY CAN

of Hills Bros Coffee

a flavor no bulk-roasting method can produce





In mixing cake batter you add the ingredients a little at a time to insure a smooth, light consistency. Hills Bros. roast their coffee a few pounds at a time to insure an even roast and perfect flavor.

¶ FRESH from the original vacuum pack. EASILY opened with the key. LOOK for the Arab on the can.

WHEN COFFEE is roasted in bulk, an even roast cannot be guaranteed. Flavor variation is therefore inevitable. That is why Hills Bros. originated their patented, continuous process—Controlled Roasting. By this method every berry of the famous Hills Bros. blend is roasted evenly.

As fast as Hills Bros. Coffee comes from the roasters it is packed in vacuum tins. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is completely taken out of the can and kept out by this vacuum pack. No matter when or where you buy a can of Hills Bros. Coffee it is roaster-fresh.

Prove for yourself that Controlled Roasting gives Hills Bros. Coffee a flavor such as you never tasted in any other coffee. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab on the can.

MELLOWED A HUNDRED MILLION YEARS

When mighty, armored fishes swam over PENNSYLVANIA

THE 100,000,000-year-old Devonian Age was the source of three wonders: — vast inland seas, the tremendous saw-toothed fishes whose fossils may be seen in famous museums—and the Bradford-Allegany District crude oil that is now being refined into Sinclair Mobiline Motor Oil.

Other and more extensive oil-bearing ages preceded and followed the Devonian. But in none of them were earth conditions sufficiently favorable to form crude of such sheer lubricating quality as that from the Bradford-Allegany District of the Pennsylvania field—witness the fact that Bradford-Allegany crude commands the highest price of all Pennsylvania grade crude oils!

Excellent as it is, the crude is not sufficient. Before it becomes Sinclair Mobiline Motor Oil Bradford-Allegany crude goes through an exhaustive refining process in the big, new Sinclair refinery at Wellsville, N. Y. By improved processes it is triple-filtered, de-waxed at as low as 60° F. below zero and stripped almost entirely of carbon-forming compounds.

Have the nearest Sinclair dealer change your oil to Sinclair Mobiline according to the Sinclair Law of Lubrication. After long, hard driving note how this Mobiline stands up — how it comes out of the crankcase almost as good as it went in. Note, especially, how very little Mobiline has been used up—positive, visible proof that this rich, Devonian oil protects the last mile as well as the first!

SEND YOUR NAME and address to our nearest office with a list of the states where you intend touring and we will send you road maps and the Sinclair Law of Lubrication booklet, free. Sinclair Refining Company, (Inc.) New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Houston, Fort Worth, Kansas City.

Study of Child at the Piano by Anton Bruehl

MISCHA LEVITSKI, the colorful young master of the piano, says: "Lyon & Healy Steinway is a masterpiece of art and an inspiration to me in my work."

INSPIRING PLEASURE FOR YOUR children

THE STEINWAY IS A BEAUTIFUL, LONG-LIVED INSTRUMENT WITH WHICH YOUR CHILDREN MAY DEVELOP AN ATTRACTIVE ACCOMPLISHMENT . . . AND IT IS SOLD ON THE LYON & HEALY EASY PAYMENT PLAN

YOUR children do not have to be poets, painters or great musicians to attract the kind of friends you will want them to make. But an accomplishment such as performing satisfactorily on the Steinway not only will help them in this . . . it also will subject them to all the cultural influences of a fine art.

Regardless of size or decorative considerations, there is a Steinway that will just suit your home. Visit Lyon & Healy at your convenience, and examine the Steinway in its variety of graceful cases. Observe that each case is a veritable object of art made from the finest woods and ivory. Listen to a composition played on the Steinway. The sensitive person will have little difficulty in understanding why this beautiful instrument has helped develop so many cultured personalities . . . why it has been the choice of virtually every great musician from Wagner to Rachmaninoff. Come in and be convinced.

And the Steinway is sold on a Lyon & Healy plan that puts it within easy reach of even the modest income. 10% down obtains the Steinway. The balance may be extended over a period of three years.

With as little strain on the income as resulted from the acquirement of any other good article in your home, you may possess the Instrument of the Immortals . . . colorful of tone, superbly adaptable, long-lived. The Steinway will entertain your friends, instruct and inspire your children, and inject an unmistakable note of splendor into the decorative scheme of your home.

A new Steinway Upright piano can be bought for a total as low as $875

10% down balance in three years.

This means that the Steinway Upright may be obtained with a cash deposit of only $87.50. Payment of the balance is made in small monthly instalments over a three-year period. Any Steinway may be purchased on the plan of 10% down, balance in three years. Used pianos accepted in partial exchange.

THE STEINWAY BABY GRAND—A Steinway of this size and power . . . at $1425 . . . is an extraordinary value. It may be obtained with a down payment of only $142.50. Payment of balance is made in small monthly instalments over a three-year period. It is the ideal instrument for the majority of homes. Its beautiful finish harmonizes with any plan of interior decoration. Its size is such as to conserve floor space, and still retain that beauty and breadth of tone which a true grand piano ought to have. There are many Steinway sizes and prices (including period models). Also with the famous Duo-Art reproducing action.

Society

The St. Luke's benefit fashion show, held at the Stevens hotel ballroom under the auspices of the women's board of St. Luke's hospital, was a bewildering display of beauty in clothes and femininity, said Thalia ——— in the society columns of The Tribune. The parade of society matrons and maids, wearing the last word in costumes of every variety, jewelry, furs, millinery, and footwear, lasted three hours. Presented here are some of the society models as they appeared upon the runway.

MRS. PHILIP B. MAHER in white moire evening dress with long peplum banded in white fox, and a semi-long white velvet coat with collar of white fox.

MRS. JOHN R. WINTERBOTHAM JR. AND MISS BARBARA KING in wide-belted Russian coats and hats. The former's coat and hat are of Persian lamb, the latter's of white caracul.

MISS BETTY OFFIELD, wearing ruffled white tulle edged in silver, and carrying a pyramid bouquet of gardenias, presented this charming picture.

MISS ELINOR WHITING wore a white transparent velvet gown, with white fur jacket and muff.

Women by the thousands are discarding old-type pads and adopting it. For it does two things no other pad can claim.

Ends All Chafing—All Irritation!

Patented under U. S. Patents (U. S. Patent No. 1702530) it is different from any other pad. No other pad accomplishes its results. When you buy your first box of Veldown just open one of the pads and examine it. You will note that it is filled with pure Rayon Cellulose. Soft as fluffed silk; not mere layers of crepe paper as used in old-type methods.

You will see from its construction why it cannot chafe or irritate. Hence, no more discomfort, no more irritation from wearing a sanitary pad! Consider what this means. 163-S

Soft as fluffed silk, pure Rayon cellulose filled this new-type sanitary protection banishes all chafing, all discomfort from women's hygiene—and lasts 3 times longer.

Its softness is the gentle softness of Fluffed Silk. Its "feel" gives you a contrast that will turn you forever from the irritating old ways. Try it. What you find will amaze you.

Wear in Safety Hours Longer

This new invention also makes Veldown 5 or more times more absorbent than any other sanitary pad now known or ever known to women.

Thus it can be worn in complete safety and protection hours longer than any other pad yet developed. Consider, too, what this means.

It is specially treated with a deodorant of great power—and thus ends even slightest danger of offense. Discards, of course, easily as tissue.

Accept Trial

Go today to any drug or department store. Obtain a box of Veldown. Use six. Then—if you don't feel that it is a Vast and Great Improvement on any other pad you have ever worn, return it—and receive your full purchase price back.

Cold Creams, Skin Foods and Astringents for this Far Simpler New Way

The four fundamentals of skin care condensed into a single, 3-minute application

A Scientific Discovery That Condenses a Complete Professional Facial Into a Single Application, Taking Less Than 3 Minutes, and Combining the 4 Fundamentals in Skin Care Urged by Experts!

NOW comes a remarkable new development in beauty science. A discovery that experts predict may soon change all previous methods in skin care.

A way that condenses the four fundamentals of scientific skin care into a single three-minute home application! And that provides the exact and same effect of a complete Professional Facial costing $3 or more.

A way that combats blackheads and enlarged pores; often with almost unbelievable results. That banishes premature age lines, and the lines of strain and worry. For each application works directly on each and all of these conditions.

Hence, a way that completely eliminates the need of costly special creams and lotions. Of old-time cleansing creams, of "skin foods" and astringents. Yet—that is as easy to use as an ordinary cleansing cream.

Do you wonder, then, that largely on expert advice tens of thousands of women are adopting this unique creation?

What It Is

It is called Lady Esther Four-Purpose Cream. And it marks the application of totally new principles in skin care as defined by the most recent scientific findings of ablest specialists in the field of beauty culture.

Each application has four distinct actions on the skin.

Cleansing action that cleanses the pores. And thus ends the use of an ordinary cleansing cream.

Tissue stimulating action that invigorates the deep tissues of the skin. And, thus that ends the use of a special "skin food."

Astringent action that eradicates worry, strain and premature age lines, refines pores. And thus that makes the use of youth creams and astringents a folly.

Softening action that forms a perfect base for powder. And thus banishes the need of a powder base. Thus the four fundamentals of skin care are condensed into a single, 3-minute application.

Age lines soon go under this daily care. Flabby tissues strengthen and become firm. The skin is kept clean—for the astringent action of this cream closes the pores after they've been cleaned. And thus closes them against accumulations that foster imperfections.

It is sold under the name of Lady Esther at all drug and department stores at 50 cents and $1.25 a jar. The $1.25 size contains four times the amount in the 50 cent size. 33

"Syrup, you sure make Pancakes taste good"

IT'S THE SECOND MAPLE THAT GIVES SUCH WONDERFUL FLAVOR TO THIS DELICIOUS BLEND OF TWO MAPLES AND MELLOW CANE

What is it about Log Cabin Syrup that tempts ordinarily listless eaters to pile into a heap of buckwheats with the avidity of a starving savage?

It's the second maple.

Log Cabin Syrup contains not only Vermont maple, not only delicious cane from sunny tropic fields, but a flavorful second maple from the cool forests of the north.

Try Log Cabin Syrup yourself—and see how appetizing it is, particularly on these brisk autumn mornings, when steaming, syrup-drenched pancakes make you realize what a grand meal breakfast can be.

WHEN CHILD HAS A BAD COLD

JUST PLUG TURPO ELECTRIC VAPORIZER INTO A LIGHT SOCKET

AND COLD BREAKS RIGHT UP!

for Children's COLDS Hacking Coughs and Croup

New, Improved Turpo Electric Vaporizer Only 23c

For generations mothers have tried to secure a healing vapor to treat children's ills. Doctors have long recognized that a true vapor treatment would break a cold and that it would be a valued aid for hacking coughs and croup.

Mothers need no longer stand over a kettle or hold a match under a spoon in a futile attempt to produce a healing vapor. This new, improved Turpo Electric Vaporizer answers every need at the mere turn of an electric switch and at trifling cost.

It is so simple, so amazingly effective that thousands are forsaking old-fashioned, haphazard cold treatments, and hundreds are replacing the original vaporizers that last year gave them a new conception of cold relief.

So Simple—So Easy—So Quick

Consider the convenience of this Turpo Electric Vaporizer. Just fill the vaporizer with water to the line on the jar. Add one teaspoonful of Turpo.

Plug cord into light socket—that's all. In two minutes, quicker than you can boil water over a stove, vapor will form and continue to form for twenty-five minutes. New jar of scientific design prevents boiling over, eliminates breakage.

Consider its uses—at night, for instance. If child is subject to croup at night, or has a cough, just place vaporizer at bedside. Connect it at any time during the night should an attack disturb sleep.

No need for the child even to leave the covers—a big point when exposure to cold and draughts in insufficient clothing may mean heightened infection and serious danger.

The Turpo Electric Vaporizer completely does away with messy salves that make your hands greasy and soil your bed linen. And even a sick child thinks it fun to inhale this beneficial Turpo vapor.

Common-sense Help for Adults Too

Stop bothering with nasty-tasting cough mixtures, harsh-acting cold tablets or old-fashioned double purpose ointments. Just plug the cord into a light socket. In a few moments you have a warm, healing vapor that spells quick relief to head and chest colds, asthma, congestions and similar complaints.

You can feel this Turpo vapor reach the spot. The first breath will convince you that finally you have found real help for colds. You will inhale a vapor so potent, so profuse, so ideally adapted to its purpose that each breath carries the true essence of Turpentine, Menthol and Camphor direct to the sore, inflamed, congested membranes of the nose, throat and chest.

Improvement is immediate. Your head clears, congestion is relieved, breathing becomes free, and shortly the cold breaks up.

Use Only Turpo in Turpo Electric Vaporizer

It is the combination of Turpo used in the Electric Vaporizer that produces the results. Turpo has proved itself the nation's vaporizing ointment. For over ten years it has established itself as a product of merit. We cannot guarantee the Turpo Electric Vaporizer to work or to be of help if any other product is used. When purchasing refills or when using your vaporizer, be sure to use only Turpo, the genuine Vaporizing Ointment.

Don't Delay—Act Now!

Don't wait until you have a cold or your child is sick before getting this new, improved Turpo Electric Vaporizer. Danger months are here. Another dreaded COLD epidemic may be just around the corner.

Get your Turpo Vaporizer now at the special bargain price. Go to your leading drug or department store now. If they cannot supply you, fill out and mail the coupon.

OPTIMISTIC MODES FOR A BUSINESS GIRL

The Vogue for Variety in Styles Means She Can Suit Her Own Type, Dress Simply, and Still Be Ultra-Smart.

Chanel makes this simple evening frock of cloth of silver. A hip ruff of the silver cloth running up to a flat pouff in back barely hints at her 1880 line.

This Martial et Armand afternoon ensemble of dark sapphire velveteen trimmed with pale gray squirrel has its smart tunic jacket buttoned up the back.

Paris Snapshots

¶ A new Paris daytime handbag has a secret compartment, holding cigarets and lighter, hidden behind a sliding mirror under its flap.

¶ Isakoff's latest evening purse is of white satin shirred on a carved ivory top dangling from a jeweled ring—just the right shape to hold a small pair of opera glasses.

¶ The new back movements in evening gowns draw attention to slipper heels. Julienne is making kid or lame evening sandals with colored velvet backs and heels.

¶ Ivory vanities, lipsticks, cigaret cases, holders and so on, studded with round motifs of carved jade-green, pink or mauve—are the latest word in evening what-nots.

Chanel's long black velvet evening cape has a white satin lining and a snowy ermine collar.

Schiaparelli trims black wool velours with white broadtail for the coat of this original afternoon ensemble. The frock is in black crepe de chine.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—(Special.)—A hasty glance at Paris fashions this winter is apt to dismay the business girl.

"How in the world," she asks herself, "am I ever going to keep up with this feminine racket, live—not too far outside my income—and be practically, as well as smartly, dressed?"

Take another look, my dear, before you give way to dowdy despair! Paris has oodles of wearable clothes just made for you, only she's cast off that old Puritanical idea that anything useful must necessarily be disagreeable or ugly—and I really don't see how anything can be one without the other; these two old Siamese twins are just naturally stuck together.

New Paris fashions are brimming over with optimism. That's the first thing you notice about every smart gathering here, and, believe me, they are smart again. It's worth while going to the theater just to see the crowd. No two women are dressed alike. One may be wearing a quaint, knee-length cape from Lelong; the other a cutaway from Redfern; a third will trail majestically in Maggy Rouff's long, satin coat completely surrounded by fox and a fourth will favor Augustabernard's ankle length dress-coat.

All sorts of dresses, too, are seen—Chanel's 1880 draperies brought up to date; Vionnet's, waisted fullskirted chiffons; Patou's Egyptian lames, not to mention, as the cynosure of many curious eyes, Redfern's black pailletted evening pajamas.

All this sartorial variety adds a great deal of joie de vivre to the scene. The ingenues are irresistibly gay in their puff sleeved frocks and even the old boulevardiers, so long discouraged by the dismal uniformity of backs which led to such unexpected surprises in the way of faces, are beginning to think that modern life may be worth living, after all.

Daytime clothes are just as jolly and different, with the new tunics, blouse jackets, long capes, pelerines, fur trimmed suits, fur coats of every known length, ensembles, fur sets and separate dresses scattered freely over the feminine members of the assemblage, and more than nine hundred and ninety-nine variations of sleeve trimming in evidence; and with the new hats pertly perched upon the top of curly heads and trimmed with feathers, fur and whatnot.

And the jolliest part of it is that the majority of these costumes are every bit as practical as those of the old sardine days when clothes resembled each other as closely as herrings and you had to peep under the brim of a masking hat to be certain of the approximate age and complexion of your neighbor.

These new optimistic styles will help you girls in your business. It's a fact. Now that we're all full of clothes consciousness, color consciousness and all the other attendant consciousnesses discovered by modern psychology, our clothes have a more direct effect on our spirits than ever. The wrong shade of green or a high collar may make or break your career. I, myself, had such a very Hamlet-ish coat, a season or two ago, that when I wore it all general conversation became impossible. I could do nothing but soliloquise, and on somber subjects, at that! I was forced to give it away to save my reputation as a wise-cracker, though it was a perfectly good chic, black coat. If you could see how much the new clothes have already done toward making gay Paree something more than the hollow mockery it had become, you'd believe me.

Of course, you business girls instinctively avoid anything that looks like fuss—which is in opposition to the clearcut, vital personality that makes you take business as your pleasure—but that doesn't mean that you need renounce all sartorial originality. Style gayety may be achieved by some trifle like an intriguing closing, a tricky scarf, a new, diverting way of applying fur trimming, a novel sleeve treatment, cleverly calculated to accentuate the personal charm of the wearer.

One of the most important points in keeping your effect smartly simple is to limit the size and number of your accessories. Wear few jewels or, better still, none at all in the daytime, and one or two good pieces in the evening. Carry plain bags and handkerchieves. Be careful to harmonize your gloves, shoes and furs with the cut as well as the color of your costume and to choose a hat that balances your general silhouette.

Wear your daytime skirts ten inches off the floor and keep your evening hems level, ankle length, and you'll be sure to look right wherever you go, in business hours and out. Flat furs and dark colors are your best bets, because you'll tire of them less quickly than of vivid tints and fluff.

The three wittiest creators in couture? Chanel, Madame Vallet of Martial et Armand, and Schiaparelli are all past mistresses in the art of making useful clothes gay and attractive looking. You can see some of the ways they go about it by the drawings on this page.

The afternoon ensemble from Martial et Armand owes its chic to its tunic jacket buttoned in the back. It's made of dark, sapphire-blue velveteen (and if you get the real English quality, that will outwear anything,) trimmed with bands of pale gray squirrel that outline the short, flaring peplum and the oversleeves and make the smart separate cravat. The tunic is fitted by a wide row of shirrings. It is fashioned at the back of the neck, open to the waist showing the back of the frock, and buttoned the rest of the way to the hem. The undersleeves are also buttoned to the elbow. The skirt hangs in circular folds at the sides, dipping ever so slightly. The upper bodice and sleeves of the frock are of pale gray satin.

Chanel makes the simple evening frock, sketched, of cloth of silver. It is shirred on a narrow central band at each side of the front and fits the figure closely to a point below the hips, where a full circular flounce is added under a jolly ruff of the silver cloth, which curves up slightly in back where it is finished with a flat pouff. The tailored silver-cloth belt fastens with a crystal buckle. This frock is the most wearable version of Chanel's 1880 tendency. It is just as pretty in plain white satin as it is in the cloth of silver.

On the same page is Chanel's long, black velvet evening cape. It hangs in full circular folds from the oval yoke that fits it to a low waistline in back. It's lined with white satin and has a white ermine collar. She also makes this cape in a three-quarter length which is more practical for the business girl, as it can be worn for afternoon as well as evening.

Schiaparelli makes the ensemble shown of her favorite black and white and, of course, there is nothing more becoming or more practical than this perennially smart combination. The slender, simple coat is of black wool velour. The fashionable sleeve importance is achieved in an original way by spiral bands of the fabric lined with white broadtail, which begin on the shoulders, do a serpent turn round the arms and end up as deep cuffs. White broadtail also makes the cute round collar.

The companion dress on the little lady is an ideal frock for busy girls for it is severely simple, but brimful of chic. It's of black crepe de chine. The bodice is cut in one with a trick draped scarf arrangement that ties on the left side at the neck and runs on down to meet a similar skirt drapery at the waistline.

France in Chicago

—By Edith Weigle—

The center of interest in this salon is the beautiful French rug.

Nothing Is More Flattering as a Background for a Charming Woman than Furniture and Fabrics of the Period of 18th Century France.

THERE is no doubt that the furniture and favorite colors of the Louis' are as flattering to a beautiful woman as the subtle perfume she uses to scent her gowns. There is something graceful, delicate, elegant, and feminine about Louis XV. and Louis XVI. styles that is hard to equal in any other period or in the decoration of any other country.

The faint aura of a Du Barry, a Marie Antoinette, or a Mme. de Pompadour seems to shine about the bergeres, the little inlaid tables and consoles of the era just before "the deluge" in France. At that time all of Europe became saturated with French ideas, French culture. It was an age of extravagance and superlative beauty. To stand for a moment in a room resurrected from those days makes one realize this.

The pictures on this page show a perfect French setting for the modern woman. They were taken in a women's apparel shop, Blum's new Vogue, on Michigan avenue, where room after room forms an ideal background for the displaying of gowns, lingerie, and wraps. Much of the furniture was collected in France, while other pieces represent accurate and beautiful copies of choice old designs. Even the floors are faithful copies of those of famous French interiors, one room having parquetry laid exactly like that in the hall of mirrors at Versailles.

The predominating colors used in the decoration are pastel shades of ashes of roses, green, and beige, with the walls in ivory trimmed in gold leaf. The wall surface has a crackled effect that is extremely lovely. Lighting fixtures are crystal drop chandeliers and side lights are a bronze gold.

The salon known as the Savonnerie room is particularly lovely. It is shown on this page and is named for the magnificent rug which is its piece de resistance. La Savonnerie was a Persian carpet factory, opened in Paris in 1615 and incorporated with the famous Gobelins in 1828. Its rugs are now classed as museum pieces. This one combines mellow shades of yellow, rose, blue, and green, with the deep brown of its background.

The draperies in the door in the center of the picture are of heavy French gray moire. Between them a glimpse is had of one of the many beautifully furnished fitting rooms. The chairs and the console are painted old ivory. The small French tables are inlaid and banded in gold.

Another photograph shows the jewel shop, an exquisite little room off the main first floor salon. Its walls are ivory, crackled, and are trimmed in gold leaf. The two chairs are covered in green leather and the small benches in antique brocaded green velvet. The table is particularly interesting with its inlaid work of choice woods and its garland decorations of bronze gold. Above it hangs a crystal drop chandelier.

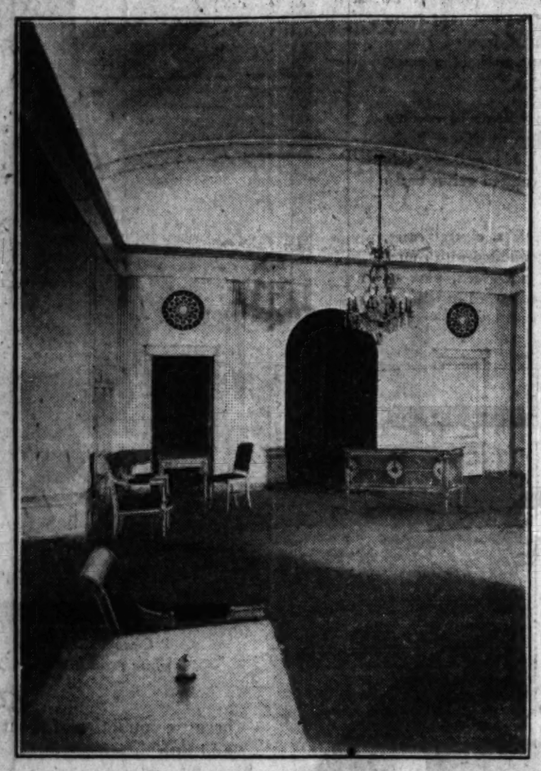
The last picture gives a glimpse of the room where lingerie and sports wear are sold. The colors here are creamy white and soft Nile green, the latter being used on the pilasters set in the walls. The curtains in the arched doorways are deep green velvet, and the chairs are covered in the same fabric. The carpet is beige.



Elegant simplicity is illustrated here.

To step from the avenue into this charming establishment is like stepping off the Rue de la Paix or the Place Vendome into a bit of old France. It is a delight and an experience.

When to Leave Cards

—By Helen Bartlett—

The Old Days of Social Calling Are Gone, But the Visiting Card and Its Uses Remain

AS further proof that some of the courtly, leisurely traditions of etiquette are pretty much things of the past, just look at what's happened to the dear old custom of calling and card leaving! Even a generation ago calling was as much a housewife's responsibility as her actual housekeeping.

Almost every day between 3 and 5 the socially inclined or the socially involved simply tore [if they could tear in broughams and carriages] around town stopping at this door and that, popping cards onto trays and whizzing off again.

It must all have been very silly, because they seldom, if ever, saw the person on whom they "called." Most times madam wouldn't even step out of her carriage. Her footman, cards in hand, would ask the servant who answered his ring if the ladies were in, and the polite, expected reply was nearly always in the negative.

Things Are Different Now.

Thank heaven, that stage is all over. Nowadays we call on people we really want to see and receive calls from people who really want to see us. In diplomatic circles, of course, the old rule still holds. There must be truck loads of visiting cards changing hands in Washington, year after year.

All good etiquette books, of course, maintain pretty stoutly that punctilious card leaving is still much the vogue and obligatory—but we ask you, is it, generally speaking?

When we go to debuts, we leave cards; when we make those few formal calls which we all dodge, but get roped in for, sometimes, we leave cards—but how many of us conscientiously make party calls, still keep in touch with Cousin Emma or old Mrs. Dowager by leaving cards at their doors from time to time?

Particularly in cities has the custom of calling gone out. It would never occur to us to call on the neighbors who just moved in on the twentieth floor of our apartment building. We wouldn't be bothered and the chances are that they wouldn't want to be, either. In some suburbs and small towns, however, older residents do call on new ones.

Our Representatives.

In present day life, though, cards play their most important rôle as our social representatives in entertainment. They are never left by guests at breakfasts, luncheons, theater parties, dinners or dances, but they are left at afternoon receptions and "at homes" and when we do make calls.

Cards are never handed to the hostess. They are invariably placed on a tray, which is either proffered by a servant or is in place on a table in the entrance.

The oft repeated and simple rule for card leaving is: A woman leaves a card of her own for each woman of the household she visits and one of her husband's for each man and woman in the household. In other words, women call on women and men on both men and women. A woman never leaves a card for a man.

If a man and wife are invited to a reception given by the father and mother of a debutante for the debutante five cards are left—three of the husband's and two of the wife's.

If a woman calls on another woman who lives with her mother and a sister the caller leaves cards for all three women. If a woman calls on some one's house guest she leaves cards not alone for the guest, but also for the hostess, even though the latter is a stranger to her.

Cards are left for a bride's mother after a wedding; for the bride and her husband when they are established in their new home; when we make calls of sympathy. A woman may make calls for any member of her household who cannot personally make the call.

When to Mail Cards.

Cards are mailed when one cannot attend general receptions or "at homes." If a man and woman receive an invitation to a reception and cannot attend, no formal regrets are sent, but the necessary number of cards is mailed to the host and hostess to arrive the day of the affair.

Punctilious people who make personal calls after being entertained at dinner always leave cards at these calls. But as we say, the custom is being observed less and less, lamentable as this may be. Flowers are sent, or the hostess is telephoned, or something of that sort, but calls with cards, excepting in official or diplomatic circles, become fewer and fewer.

Cards are often sent with gifts of remembrance, and this is quite correct. If the sender is an unmarried woman "Miss" is crossed off before the name. "Mr." is invariably crossed off, in this case.

Answers to Etiquette Questions.

It is not absolutely necessary, but it is considered courteous to send them.

"Is the engagement ring worn during the wedding ceremony and if so, is it removed before the wedding ring is put on? E. G."

It is removed before the wedding and placed on the right hand, so that the third finger of the left hand is left free for the wedding ring.

"How long do service plates remain in place? F. H."

Until the main course, when a warm dinner place is substituted.

Exercise and Change

—By Gladys Huntington Bevans—

Games and Sports Are Important to the Child's Health for They Give Those Big Muscles a Chance to Limber Up.

If your young child's questions (early sex education) are difficult to answer, helpful reading will be suggested by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"I'VE been sewing all week," she said, "and this morning I felt as if I just couldn't sit another minute. So I got up and cleaned the whole place, swept, dug out corners, waxed the floors and dusted, and actually I enjoyed it!"

Haven't you had that experience—or one like it? But perhaps in your case, after having been sewing or writing or studying instead of sweeping you go out and play golf, or take a long walk, or dance, or swim, or skate, or play ball with the children, or go to a gymnasium, or play tennis, or, if you're still more fortunate—ride horseback. When you do have you noticed how both relaxed and stimulated you feel? How, though you may be muscularly tired, your nerves are calm?

The change from making the small motions and doing mental work to vigorous physical exercise that has some swing and sweep about it is a relief. It's a release. It makes you "feel good." For one person the change may be tennis—for another wading in and doing a big wash—for another a series of exercises. Sweeping and cleaning and putting up and taking down draperies, for instance, while it may be torture for husbands and brothers, is a real pleasure for many a woman—not just for the satisfaction of seeing her house clean, but because the exercise is so fine for her physically and makes the good red blood go gayly coursing in places where usually it moves sluggishly along.

All these activities involve a change from the use of small muscles to big ones, and it is that that is so good for us.

Using Small Muscles.

And if it's good for us grownups, it's infinitely better—in fact, it's absolutely necessary for children. Children, especially school children, have to use their smaller muscles too much in comparison with their larger ones—too much for their comfort and health.

Did you ever think how much of their civilized life requires just that very thing—both at home and at school? There's writing, drawing, sewing, modeling, and much of their other manual work like carpentry and laboratory work, which, while it does not involve the smallest muscles, still does not make big, free movements possible. Also practically all of these things are done sitting down or standing still. If you add radio and movies which involve the eye and ear, you increase still further quite a long list of activities which don't require the use of the larger muscles.

All this being the case, what shall we do about it? The answer is—make it our business to see that our children have plenty of free, vigorous exercise—running, jumping, leaping, skipping, wrestling, and dancing—not social dancing, but folk or rhythmic dancing.

The intelligent mother of young children knows by this time that from babyhood the larger muscles develop first, and they provide for that in the baby's play. But what many parents do not realize is that later, when skill in the use of the finer muscles is achieved, the big muscles must not be neglected.

Games Are Valuable.

Games are one of the most wonderful outlets for children's energy and for their high spirits—and bring into play all these big muscles we talk about. You know these running games—hide and seek, duck on the rock, cops and robbers, prison's base, and all the others they love so. Just watch a lot of boys and girls at such play. If you can stop enjoying their fun for a minute and observe them in a detached way you'll begin to realize what sort of big physical activity these games provide. The children run, stop, dodge, walk, bend, leap, struggle, yell, shout, scream, and laugh. So much for that sort of game.

Then there are what we might call the sports. All kinds of ball—baseball, handball, basketball, football, association and soccer, and tennis and swimming [perhaps in pools, at this season]—all these bring the big muscles of the body into play. And with them all comes a joyousness, a sense of well being and freedom from tension. All through adolescence this big muscle play should go on.

Besides games and sports, there are all the things which children do but do not so much in a definite group. Usually these require some plaything or apparatus—a scooter, a velocipede, a bicycle, skates, carts, wagons, wheelbarrows, and a ball.

This big free vigorous physical activity gives gusto—that's a nice word, isn't it—to their lives. Can't you see it very plainly and doesn't it give you a nice feeling when they come in all flushed and laughing and happy and hungry from an afternoon of free, noisy play?

A Serious Drawback.

There is just one thing that infringes seriously upon the time that school children have for this "big muscle activity." That one thing is their home work—or perhaps I should say excessive home work. This is something you must keep your eye on. The young growing body needs time for lots of vigorous play just as it needs good food and plenty of rest.

Of course, all this Sunday article—this emphasis on this vital need of children—is primarily for their sakes But if you do take it to heart, you'll find your own path immeasurably smoothed. I mean, as far as behavior difficulties are concerned.

Many of these difficulties come from a suppressed energy which cannot find its outlet through the little movements that use the small muscles. Children are often disobedient, fussy, nervous, irritable, sleep poorly and eat poorly, because they lack the physical poise and stimulation that the exercise of the big muscles brings. A fine, free circulation to every part of the body helps towards perfect physical and mental health—and the games and sports mentioned here tend to bring that about.

Uses for Wall Paper

—by WillElla de Campi—

This Living Room Is Half Paneled and Half Papered.

It Is More than a Mere Covering; It May Be Used in the Decoration of Furniture, Lamps and Boxes.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letters to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

EVERY day we become more and more impressed by the possibilities for decorative effects afforded by the use of wall papers. Modern manufacturers have taken great strides in the production of excellent designs with a fine grace of lines and good coloring; in styles which will go with many different types of interiors.

Papers with small floral designs seem to take the lead, this season, and these are done in a great diversity of colorings and patterns lovely for use in bedrooms, breakfast rooms, and even in informal living rooms. Modified modern designs, suitable for almost any room which has a modern trend, are becoming more and more popular. An innovation which is receiving a great deal of attention is a wood veneer in quartered oak, walnut or mahogany. It is hung like wallpaper, and any good craftsman can do the job most successfully.

Since the American colonial side of furniture and decoration is so strongly favored, there are numerous papers especially adapted for use in rooms of this type. One of the most interesting of these shows small scenic medallions representing interesting events in early American life. Another is the one shown in today's illustration. This is marked off in large diamonds with central motif in henna on an ivory ground. The same patterns may be had in a lovely shade of green, in raspberry red or in gold color. Here it is pleasantly combined with wood paneling, the fireplace end of the room being done in pine and the remaining three walls in the diamond paper.

At the windows there are salmon pink handkerchief linen curtains, finished with a binding of henna and soft green. They are of sunfast quality and may be quickly and easily laundered. The little sofa at one side of the fireplace has a slip cover of glazed chintz with a floral pattern on a henna colored ground. The same material is used on a large wing chair. Another chair is upholstered in soft green rep. The rest of the furniture is of pine and maple. A large hooked rug repeats the colors found in the chintz, with dull henna predominating.

In addition to use for wall decorations, wall papers may be utilized to lend decorative effects to many an otherwise plain object. The floral papers, medallions and toile de Jouy types make excellent cut-outs which may be pasted onto various pieces with most charming results. For instance, the central pattern of a toile de Jouy paper in tones of green could be cut out and pasted or glued to the head and footboards of a bed which had been painted green. A chest of drawers painted green to match the bed might have smaller motifs of the same pattern glued on the center of each drawer, and two little chairs with split backs might be decorated in the same way.

The paper sections might then be shellacked to give a finished effect. At the windows in the same room, draperies in tones of green of toile de Jouy would be effective. Glass curtains of peach colored voile would lend a note of soft color, and the bed cover might be of peach colored rep piped with green. The walls could be done in ivory paper with a fine peach colored stripe, to make a pleasing background for the green paper decorated furniture.

Floral motifs, cut out of wall paper and glued on plain parchment shades, produce surprisingly decorative effects. To get the best results the floral motif, after having been cut out, should be rubbed with a certain type of oil that makes paper semi-transparent, so that when the lamp is lighted the floral colors show up more clearly than they would if the motif cutout had not been rubbed with oil. When the oil has soaked into the paper the motif may be glued on the desired shade. Glue should be used rather than paste, as the heat from an electric light bulb is liable to dry the paste to such an extent that the paper might peel off. After the decoration is in place a coat of shellac should be applied over the whole shade. Bindings at the top and bottom of the shade should match one of the colors in the floral decoration.

Another interesting way of using wall paper to add a decorative touch to a plain room is by means of a screen. A screen made of plain wood or wall board may be entirely covered with any colorful wall paper. Wall paper panels are especially effective when used in this way. Papers in all-over patterns, too, may be pleasingly used, combined with wall paper borders which may be applied to give a panelled effect.

An interesting screen which was decorated recently by a clever young woman was made of wood in three sections. It was first painted old blue and then a design cut from an old French wall paper was pasted on each of the sections. The whole thing was given several coats of shellac and rubbed down until it really looked like a fine antique.

So many little things, too, may be made attractive by a simple application of wall paper. Hat boxes, waste paper baskets, door panels, and numerous other incidentals may be brought into the decorative scheme. The work, as a rule, may be done by the housewife, herself, without assistance from any one else, and without appreciable outlay of money. The only requirements are a few bits of decorative wall paper, scissors and paste, several good clean rags, a jar of shellac, and a brush. With this equipment, the plainest pieces may be delightfully transformed into designs and individual bits of decoration.

Spends to Save.

My husband's pet economy is taking a taxi to the movie in order to get there in time to take advantage of the matinee prices. L. F.

Saving on Lights.

I "give all heavy beads, round or otherwise, and tie them to a piece of harmonizing colored string, old shoe lace or anything else. This I tie to the chains of lights in the bathroom, bedrooms, and pantry, thereby making them long enough for the children to reach. I find this very useful in keeping down the electric bill, as children will very often climb to reach lights but not to turn them off. R. C. P.

Thumb Tacks for Heel Plates.

My pet economy is using thumb tacks on my heels instead of heel plates, or when the leather is worn down to the heel and I haven't the time to stop and get them fixed. I started out using them until I could get to a shoemaker, but found them so good that I use them all the time and this saves me having my heels fixed. I buy the larger thumb tacks, about 100 for 20 cents. M. B. P.

And a Sign Results.

When I need a sign, such as "Room for Rent," I take a few copies of my CHICAGO TRIBUNE, pick the letters I need from the headlines and "want ads," and cut them out, paste them on a white cardboard and my sign is ready for use. A. H. W.

Swing-out Carriers.

For the man of the house as well as for the mistress there are garment carriers which swing out at a touch of the hand.

Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde

2706—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 46, and 48 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting and ⅝ yard of 14 inch all-over lace.

2659—Girl's tailored frock. Sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards of 39 inch material with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

2650—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 5½ yards of 39 inch material with ¾ yard of 39 inch contrasting and 3½ yards of binding.

WOMEN whose figures are a little above normal will find that pattern No. 2706 makes a becoming and smart dress. The circular skirt, a flattering detail, with the scalloped outline at the top, diminishes the appearance of width through the hips.

The bodice shows a deep vestee of some contrasting material; the softly falling jabot collar is becoming, and aids in breaking the width through the bodice. The sleeves are full length and close fitting.

You won't find this a difficult pattern to use; but never neglect before using a pattern, to see that the main length and width measures correspond with your own. Make a note of any needed changes, and take time in placing the pattern pieces on the material to see that these changes have been allowed for.

A dress of this kind offers opportunity for contrast, and among the lovely schemes for its development is black Canton crêpe, with the vestee of the crêpe and the jabot collar of white silk crêpe. Another one would be to use black transparent velvet with flesh colored lace for the vestee, and the satin shade in silk crêpe for the jabot collar.

After the seams of the bodice have been finished, baste the hip yoke together and try it on. Make it close fitting, but not tight. Nothing looks much worse than a dress which is so tight fitting through the hips that it pulls at the seams and outlines the figure noticeably.

The seams of this yoke should be finished, then the yoke is pinned to the bodice in a wrong side seam. Turn up the lower edge of this yoke, clipping the turned under edge where it curves, and it will then be ready to set the skirt in place.

Finish the skirt seams and then let the weight of the skirt rest on a table while you are pinning it in place to the yoke. Baste carefully and stitch on the machine twice—once at the exact edge and the next time one-quarter inch above. Let the dress hang for several days, allowing it to stretch; then even off and finish with a narrow bias binding of the dress material. It measures at the bottom for size 36 about 4¾ yards, so you can easily see that there will be room for stretching.

Wool jersey, wool challis, crêpe novelties in plain or patterned effects, as well as linen and pique are any of them suitable materials for a dress made by pattern No. 2659. It is a tailored looking frock for the young miss of sophisticated taste, and will be both smart and practical.

The skirt is made with a smart arrangement of plaits. At the center front the skirt is pressed in an inverted plait which, with the side plaited insets, forms box plaits at the front. Pockets top the plaited insets. The bodice has a scalloped closing, and a Peter Pan collar finishes the neck. The long sleeves have turn back cuffs, matching the collar.

One of the new light weight tweeds in some becoming color, with the collar and cuffs of white pique, will be fine for the classroom, and so also would be one of the heavy linens in a Nile green with white linen collar and cuffs dotted in green, and frilled with sheer white linen.

A smart sports frock, shown in pattern No. 2650, will be both useful and decidedly smart. Made on one of the new woolens, and using white pique for detachable collar and cuffs, it will make a splendid utility dress. Covert cloth, wool jersey, light weight tweed, printed tweed silk crêpe and Canton crêpe are all suitable materials.

The bodice buttons down the front, and you will find it a good plan to first overcast the buttonholes from the wrong side. Making buttonholes is work that can never be hurried, for the stitches must all be taken at the same depth, and the spacing done evenly. If you finish the neck by binding and face the sleeve edges, you can finish the collar and cuffs by putting them into narrow bands. Then they can be basted to the dress, and easily removed for laundering.

The skirt is cut in six gores, shaped across the top and attaining a considerable width as the bottom is reached, for size 36, measuring at the bottom, about 4½ yards.

The Crowning Glory

New Styles in Coiffures Demand Hair That Is Soft and Glossy; Here Are Ways of Caring for It.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Let's talk of hair beauty today. There will be much, much talk of it this winter. Why more than other winters? Or, any other season? Well, first because this coming winter is going to see more individual coiffures than have been seen before.

Each and every woman may take unto herself whatever privileges she chooses with the short, the long, or the middlin' length locks. She may break forth into curls and ringlets as she never dreamed of doing before. She may be straight of hair from the brow to the back of the head, but there she may go wayward as she pleases, turning locks up, under or sending them swirling to one side or the other. So, altogether, hair is going to be on parade every moment.

As to the winter season, is it not the season of dressed up beauty, when heads above richly furred evening coats are appraised at theater entrances and in dance lobbies; the season of formal entertaining at which the coiffure always plays a distinctive part?

As with skin, hair may be classified in three types for convenience sake—normal, dry, and oily. Time and again skin specialists stress the infrequency with which normal skin is met and the same infrequency among normal heads of hair is also noted. Not that women may not have been endowed with good hair—but they've been neglectful of it. Neglectful of the hair brush on it, we should say. A normal crop of hair only needs to be kept clean and brushed for continued good health and beauty.

Attention Well Repaid.

If women generally would put in as much time daily on the care of their hair with the hairbrush as they do with massage creams and face cleansings we would have many more heads of lovely hair. Why concentrate all on the complexion? It is not enough for womanly beauty. Perfect cleanliness of the ten day interval shampoo system is not quite enough. Not if you want gloss, sheen, and a warmth to the hair's color, which you must court by either the consistent daily brushing or just as consistent daily massage of the scalp with the finger tips. A firm pressure until you can feel "life" in the scalp—tingling life is what brings results.

For the benefit of that gloss and sheen already spoken of and without which a head soon will be disqualified as is now a lethargic state of complexion or teeth that have not the clarity of care, even if you think you are in the normal classification, a hot oil shampoo is advocated, besides the shampoo every ten days or so. This is because of permanents, marcels, the outdoor summer living, and the indoor-hatted habit to which so many women are becoming addicts. Too, some of the styles of coiffures, such as the madonna type with the center part and the hair drawn into a simple knot at the back, must have a glorious sheen. A trick to emphasize this sheen, as recommended by a famous specialist, is to rub the hair down with a piece of velvet.

Care of Dry Hair.

I don't know which is the worse hair trial, dry and brittle or excessively oily, but we'll take up the dry first. Less frequent washing is advised for the dry-haired, and more scalp oiling is urged. Hot air dryers should be avoided and the type of hair curling that calls for protracted periods under excessive heat should be avoided.

If possible, dry the hair by hand and have it done by hand if you patronize a professional place of hair care. In fact, you are advised to seek out specialists in hair care who go in for long seances with brushing to stimulate the weakened oil glands. It is just as important to seek a fine professional hand at hair as it is to seek an expert at facial massages. But, of course, you can shampoo your own hair and dry it by hand yourself and be sure it is thus not subjected to extra drying by mechanically heated apparatus. A light greasing of the scalp with a good scalp food is advised after the shampoo, or you may even anoint your fingers lightly each day and run them over the scalp to give a bit of lubrication help thereto, also to give the brush something to carry out to the hair for its better sheen.

The hot oil shampoo may be taken once a week and if the hair is excessively dry it should be taken more frequently. Though you may not want to shampoo the hair that often, you can apply your hot oil at night directly to the scalp with a small sponge used only for this purpose. In the morning, take a coarse towel and rub the head and hair until you have much of the oil absorbed and then use the brush for further cleansing. It will appear fairly heavy with oil, at that—but until you have the hair in better condition train yourself not to mind the oily look.

Ordinarily, however, the hot oil shampoo for dry hair is sufficiently effective done every two weeks, with a shampoo following the next morning. Olive oil heated is the usual recommendation, although balsam oil is popular, too. You apply the warm oil with a piece of antiseptic cotton. Saturate the head with it. Tie a towel around for protection and in the morning give three or four soapings and rinsings to get all the oil out.

Massage Helpful.

You will help a quick return to soft, glossy hair if, when the head is saturated with oil, you go over the scalp with firm finger pressure and massage the oil into the scalp as deeply as possible. Preparatory to a permanent, the oil treatments are recommended, as they give the hair body and resistance to the intense heat it must undergo.

The balsam oil is not advised on hair that has been hennaed or dyed, because the color may be affected. But oil treatments, it may be noted, are suggested for use when one is trying to get rid of artificial coloring. Hair that has been bleached, with drying results, should take oil treatments over a period of two months before the permanent wave is put in.

The oily haired sufferer can and should shampoo her hair every four or five days with profit to the hair. She should have a tonic that provides for her particular need—not just any hair tonic; a tonic for oily hair. She needs to give her head a powerful lot of brushing, a habit neglected often for fear of more oil being produced, and she needs her daily massage with the finger tips more than the dry haired sister, if she wants to get her scalp in good working condition.

Temporary relief to the dry head may be obtained with the use of brilliantine. But use it sparingly. Don't sop the head with it. Put a bit of the liquid in the palm of your hand and sweep the brush over it. Apply the brush first to the ends of the hair, which are the dryest, to take off the superfluous oil. Then brush over the entire hair lightly.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Response to Sally's Requests Has Been Gratifying, but There's Still Much Work to Be Undertaken and She Asks You to Lend a Hand.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness and which will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

WEEK after week in these columns you've been reading accounts of hardship, misfortune and distress and the tales have been more or less depressing. However, response to these appeals for help has been prompt and effective, much good has been accomplished and the happiness you have spread, in your rôle of fairy godmother, cannot be measured. Here is a letter from one generous reader who has been doing his bit to relieve the prevalent suffering:

"My dear Miss Brown: I called upon Mrs. D. at the address you gave me and found her, as you reported, in dire circumstances. She had been unable to find any work, with the exception of some neighbors' laundry, and she was so crippled and in such pain from neuritis in the right arm that she was almost incapacitated for whatever work she might find.

"Her flat was cold, a condition which undoubtedly aggravated the neuritis, and their only fuel was what the boys could find. The food supply was almost gone, the rent had not been paid for over a month, and Mrs. D. was at the end of hope and courage. In fact, she appeared so destitute that it seemed to me the help we gave her was too meager.

"I gave her sufficient money to pay the back rent and purchase some fuel and other necessities. Next I bought an electric pad and some medicines for the neuritis and finally a large supply of groceries, staples such as flour, sugar, oatmeal, beans, coffee, canned fruits and vegetables, etc. I know she will consider the hot pad an extravagance, but it will help her neuritis as nothing else can.

"She is obviously, as you said, of a better type and intelligence. Her gratitude was almost pitiful: it made me ashamed. She has been receiving some care at the county hospital clinic, but she needs rest and warmth and wholesome food before she will be at all well."

This is the kind of letter that makes us feel that our work is worth while and this Good Fellow is the kind of person who makes our work possible. I am sure the happiness eventuating from his charity is fully as great as Mrs. D.'s joy in the comforts which have so long been denied her.

There are many other families in a like predicament and there is a pressing need for more benefactors. Perhaps the help you can give is not so pretentious as this man's, but each bit is a step in the direction of relief. Won't you take inventory of your ways and means and write me the result? I'll be happy to tell you about a family who would benefit by your assistance.

Offers Sunday School Supplies.

"I have last quarter's Sunday school supplies for primary and beginners' department which I would be glad to give to some mission school that can make use of them. I also have back numbers of the 'Boy's World' and 'Girl's Companion.'

"L. R."

The small Sunday school whose coffers do not permit buying supplies needed in its work would do well to take advantage of this kind offer. There's some interesting reading matter for boys and girls, too. Write me for these things.

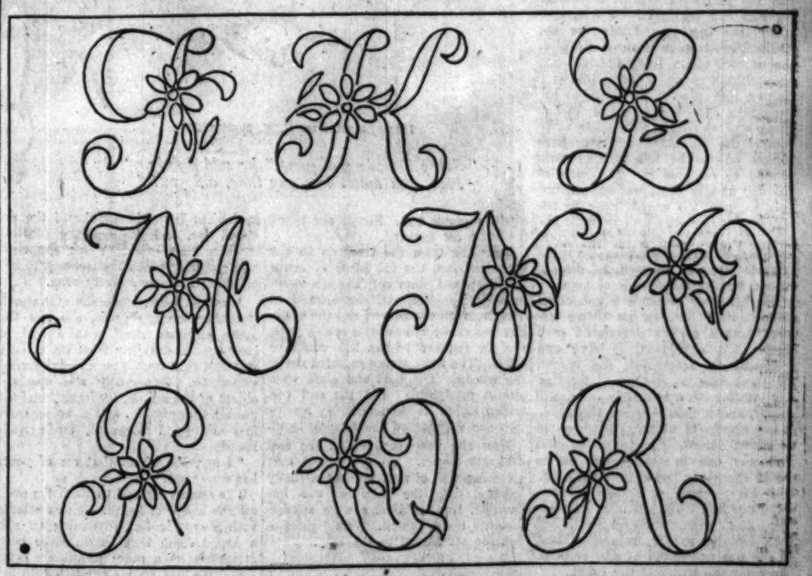
Wants Winter Coat.

"Has any one a warm winter coat, size 44, to pass on to me? I am a widow, 73 years old, and am not able to buy one. I have been suffering for years with rheumatism and other ailments. Mrs. B. F."

Because of her afflictions Mrs. B. F. will need a particularly warm coat. Have you one in her size which you can give?

Needlework

By Clotilde



The Raised Satin Stitch Brings Out the Beauty of This Flower Alphabet, Intended for Use on Linens and Lingerie.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

AN embroidered initial on your own lingerie or household linen, or on any piece you are making for a gift, adds much to the beauty of the article.

A flower alphabet is one of the prettiest to use, and need not be more difficult to do than the plainer letters.

Use tracing paper to transfer the letters to the material, taking care to have the material smooth and the paper fastened so it won't move.

The raised satin stitch is the best for these letters, using the outline stitch where there are single lines. For the tiny flowers, outline, seed and satin stitch may be used.

The first step in the work is to use a small running stitch, marking all outlines. These stitches must follow the shape of the letter perfectly, not going off the line even the fraction of an inch.

The next step is the padding, and this is done by using a couple of strands of embroidery floss or darning cotton, and taking running or chain stitches, keeping them short on the under side. The filling should always be heavier in the center of the space, thinning down as the outlines are reached.

Stitches are always taken at right angles to the edge in the satin stitch, making an even over and over stitch. A frame is always used for this work, and it is work that must be done slowly to be done perfectly. Where there are curves the stitches must be taken unusually close together on the inside, and on the outer edge there must be no spaces, but they must just come together. On the inside they must never lap.

The outline stitch is one of the easiest to do, and may be made to follow any direction desired. Start at one end of a line and take a short backstitch. Throw the thread to the left of the needle and bring the needle out to the right of the thread, just touching the stitch you started with. Continue in this way, keeping the stitches the same length except where a curve is used, and in that event the stitch will have to be a little shorter.

The seed stitch consists of rows of small backstitches a short distance apart, the stitches of each row being taken in between instead of opposite those of the previous row.

The last installment of this alphabet will be shown next Sunday.

FUNNY EXPERIENCES

Did you ever have a funny experience that makes you smile whenever you recall it? If you did and care to pass it along, write to Funniest Experience editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Already Supplied.

When I lived in San Francisco a few years ago I was constantly annoyed by wagon peddlers with their cries of "Pears! Nice-a pears! Cheap-a! Potatoes! Nice-a sack-a potatoes! Cheap-a!"

After being driven almost wild with their everlasting cries and rings at the bell I bolted the door and lay down on a couch to enjoy a new magazine. Just as I was getting interested the doorbell rang.

"Another everlasting peddler!" I thought. "I'll settle him in a hurry!"

Opening the door a tiny crack, I saw some one standing there and snapped: "My thanks. I don't want any today. I already have a sackful!"

The man backed away hurriedly, gazed at me with frightened eyes, and fled precipitately. I wondered why he acted so queer and decided to peek out of the window and see what sort of wagon truck he handled.

To my amazement I saw not a wagon but merely a poor creature with a tiny basket filled with pins, needles, and shoestrings. And I had told him I already had a sackful! No wonder he thought me crazy! J. K.

Necessary Equipment.

Being in charge of a ward in a hospital, the duty of taking inventory falls on me once a month. Last month my list was short a pair of crutches. It is my duty to locate or replace any missing article, so I was quite concerned about this and was hoping that one of the other nurses had found an extra pair in her ward, so that I could complete my list. Having this thought uppermost in my mind, I had hopes of settling the affair when I happened to see one of the nurses talking to a couple of doctors and another nurse.

She got ahead of me with the suggestion, "Let's go somewhere tonight."

I answered: "All right. Have you an extra pair of crutches?"

The doctors and the nurse who were near by looked at us in astonishment. Then we realized how it sounded, and after a brief explanation we all five had a good laugh. H. H.

The Chipmunk

By Eleanor Jewett.

I found a chipmunk on the wall;
His cheeks were swollen out with lumps.
I thought, good gracious land alive,
That chipmunk certainly has mumps!

The chipmunk winked his eye at me;
I looked around to ask my nurse
If I might play with him, when he Barked out: "It isn't mumps, it's purse!"

And purse it was, I truly found,
His cheeks were full as full could be
Of berries, acorns and of seeds—
The things a chipmunk likes for tea!

I tried to use my cheeks like that,
But though I tried and tried and tried,
My cheeks were not a bit of good;
They let my lunch slip down inside.

COINCIDENCES

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to "Strange Coincidences," Chicago Tribune.

After a Spat.

We were married when very young and neither of us was out without the other. To "run around nights" and especially without each other constituted the height of impropriety for married folks and to our youthful minds seemed sufficient grounds for divorce.

One day after a disagreement which in reality was only a mole hill, but which, to me, assumed mountainous proportions, I decided to do the very worst thing I could think of to "show him what was what!"

I purchased a reserved seat for a show in our local playhouse for that evening, secretly.

With a great feeling of having squared things, I settled myself in my seat and prepared to enjoy this very unusual treat.

I was no sooner settled than the usher directed a gentleman to the seat on my right.

Said gentleman was my husband, who also had undertaken to "show me and had ordered the seat, unaware that I also was going out that evening.

There were a few glares, but young love triumphed and we returned home arm in arm. F. A. B.

And Good-by Was Said.

When I was fourteen I ran away from home in Oklahoma to Kansas where I obtained work on a farm. I stayed there two years and, as young fellows are wont to do, fell in love with the daughter of a nearby farmer.

I finally decided to go home, but imagine my disappointment when I discovered that the "girl of my dreams" had gone away on a short visit to Kansas City three days before I was to start home. I made the best of it, however, and left on a hot August night without having the satisfaction of telling her good-by.

The train rolled along across the hot Kansas plains and we stopped at a division point to change engines and replenish empty stomachs. There was a west bound express on the track alongside ours and I was about to leave the car to stretch my legs and buy a sandwich when I chanced to glance across at the other train. My heart leaped up in my throat, as the saying goes, for just across from me was my sweetheart sound asleep in a day coach chair!

Both our windows were open and you can bet that I lost no time in waking her up and saying good-by before our trains pulled out.

Memories.

We were married forty years ago. The ceremony was at 7 p. m. in Burlington, Ia. As we descended the stairs to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, the family clock struck the hour of seven. On the fortieth anniversary of our marriage we were driving through Iowa, and stopped for the night at the Lincoln hotel at Jefferson, Ia. As we came down the stairs to go to the dining room my wife called attention to the hour as indicated by the office clock, exactly 7 o'clock. The almost unbelievable part of my little story is that as we stepped from the last step of the stairs the radio in the office pealed forth the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, which was followed by a complete marriage ceremony, a repetition of our own marriage ceremony just forty years ago and to the exact minute. It proved to a N. B. C. program and was an actual wedding ceremony. With somewhat of a shock we were carried back over forty years of time to the beginning of our married life. J. T. H.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

The Hairpin Bend

By Ethel M. Dell

It Was a Daring Adventure, but Ruth Carey Was Game; Sheer Space Gaped Up as Her Little Auto Stalled on the Precipice; Then Came a Crash, Ruth Leaping Out of Danger, but into What Was to Be Love.

ILLUSTRATION BY Y. E. SODERBERG.

"Sorry I made you jump," he said lightly. "By Jove, you didn't lose any time, did you?"

CERTAINLY the drive that led from Scarpe castle down to the seashore by many devious windings cut and blasted in the face of the cliff had not been planned for the benefit of motorists. Indeed, had it been made in present days it might with some reason have been suspected of having been designed expressly for their discomfiture.

Fortunately, it was private property, or it might have been acclaimed as the most eligible stretch of road for test climbing in the kingdom. For it abounded in difficulties from start to finish. Each turn—and there were many—was blind on account of the luxuriant growth of trees that overhung it, while one hairpin bend in particular was literally a snare for the unwary. No, emphatically it was not a road that could be described as anything but dangerous to motorists, and the driver of the little touring car who had set herself to master it closed her lips very firmly ere she had achieved more than a third of the ascent. The hairpin bend was about half way up, a formidable cutting on the verge of the precipice too narrow to allow a car to turn in one sweep and at an angle so acute as to compel the intrepid motorist to back almost on to the last inch of solid ground to compass it. The view of the bay at this point was superb, but only a pedestrian would linger to enjoy it; for here the wall of rock fell away practically sheer to the shore, towering above it also with a rugged magnificence that seemed to disdain all the mechanical devices of man.

The little car required a good deal of humoring, but, as its driver assured herself as she negotiated each gradient, it only needed nerve and judgment to accomplish the ascent, for there was no danger of meeting any traffic. Scarpe castle was still empty, and it followed that the whole of its wonderful winding drive would be deserted also. It was not a road that any one in their sober senses would choose to tackle in a car. She had only chosen it herself because some one had described it as impossible. Also, each turn and bend had been familiar to her from childhood, so she was not afraid of any surprise. She knew the best and the worst.

As for the car, it was her dearest treasure, bought from the careful savings of years, and she believed she had already learned all its vagaries, though it had been in her possession but a few months. Little Ruth Carey was very thorough and practical in all her ways, and she seldom set her hand to any undertaking that she was not fairly convinced that she could carry out. For six years she had to all intents and purposes filled the post of agent to the Scarpe estate under the guidance of her father, whom ill health had rendered unfit to play a very active part, and during those six years she had learned a good many things beside the capable management of an estate. Endurance, coupled with self-reliance, were some of the lessons that experience had taught her, and she had an almost boyish love of adventure; but this was usually kept under firm restraint.

Today, however, being her twenty-fourth birthday, she was allowing it a little license. The ascent to Scarpe castle by way of the cliff drive had never before been accomplished by a car, and she was determined that hers should be the first to achieve this distinction.

Long before she reached the narrow hairpin bend she knew that she had set herself a task which would put every inch of her ingenuity as a driver as well as her courage to the test, but she braced herself to the effort, steadily refusing to be disheartened by the increasing difficulties of the way.

The Noonday Blaze

Up and up she zigzagged, tenderly nursing the car's strength, feeling her way at every angle as she ascended. When once round the hairpin bend, she knew that the worst would be over. The road grew wider and less steep, and its curves ceased to be formidable. Also, the edges of the precipice was protected by boulders, so that no stranger descending would have any suspicion of the grim dangers that awaited below.

Steadily she mounted between the gray rocks and overarching trees. The little car was beginning to labor and she realized that she would have to pause ere long to cool down, but she wanted to get round the bend on to the easier stretch of road first.

Already it was within sight. She could see the black escarpment of cliff shining in the sun. This was the scene of the supreme test. Firmly she urged the little car forward.

Emerging from the trees on to the open cliff face the full blaze of noonday heat beat upon her. The sea swam in a pearly haze, and she seemed to hang between the heaven and the earth. She was crawling now at a snail's pace, the car reduced to the last ounce of effort. The loose stones crackled under the wheels. The heat and glare were almost intolerable. But the end was within sight. With unfaltering resolution she approached the terrible bend.

Now she was upon it and the real difficulty began. To get round that gleaming wall of rock without actually hanging over the precipice was impossible, but her brakes were reliable and her nerve superb. With tightened lips she set herself to the task.

Grinding Wheels

Forward a few inches, then back; forward and then back, worming her way round, her blue eyes firmly fixed upon the road! Forward and back, forward and back, while the little car panted and struggled as if in extremis! Forward again, then back with a sudden jerk that made her grip the wheel and snatch at the brake. Then cautiously forward again, but this time without result. The back wheels seemed to be wedged fast and they refused to move. The engine fought for a space and then heaved a loud sigh of despair and ceased. She started it again. It ran for a few seconds more with a sort of fierce protest and jerked back into silence. She tried yet again with the same result. The car was on the extreme edge of the road with not an inch to spare. She glanced behind her into sheer space. Then she looked to her brakes, and finally descended to discover the trouble.

She opened the bonnet to cool the engine, then turned her attention to the back wheels. She saw at once that one of them had passed over a huge stone imbedded in the edge of the road and that further progress would be impossible until this was removed. She dragged at it with her hands, but found it immovable. With all her care she had gone just too far.

She looked up at the burning sky and down at the dreaming sea, staring failure in the face.

Then in a moment she threw back her head and laughed. "I'll get a spade!" she said, and swung round to accomplish the rest of the ascent on foot.

It was then that a sudden sound reached her which made her spring to the rocks at the edge of the bend like a startled chamois. It was the grinding rush of wheels on the stony road above.

Her shout of warning came too late. There was no time for anything but that one wild spring for safety ere a long racing car swooped suddenly down the slope towards her.

There came a dragging of brakes, the horrible sliding of wheels that could not be stayed, a crash—and then a succession of crashes that shook even her nerve. She cowered on her refuge and covered her eyes.

When she looked up again the long racing car was still there, stationary now and spitting like an infuriated tigress, but her own had vanished!

As she gazed a spare, active figure leaped into view, rising like a jack-in-the-box from the depths of the arrested car, and she heard a peal of laughter that echoed along the cliffs with a ringing mirth that seemed to her bewildered senses scarcely sane.

A second later, while she still stared from her vantage point, she saw the figure extricate itself with a sort of loose-limbed dexterity from the driver's seat and turn round, as if searching for something. Apparently she was the object of the search, for immediately it moved towards her, and a voice, careless and good humored, made itself heard.

"I say, I'm afraid that car of yours has gone west."

The remark seemed to Ruth the coolest she had ever heard. It was uttered with a confidential, disarming air and a broad smile that would have been attractive on a more propitious occasion. He held up his hand to help her down.

"Sorry I made you jump!" he said lightly. "By jove, you didn't lose any time, did you?"

Ruth descended to his level without assistance, though the whole amazing happening had shaken her more than she would have cared to own. Her car was her first consideration. She went to the edge of the road and peered over.

It lay on the rocks a hundred feet below, all its wheels in the air, looking pathetically like a broken toy. She stood and gazed down upon it as though it had been a dead friend.

Then she turned slowly and looked at the driver of the racing car. He was standing close behind her, looking at her with a sort of comic concern.

"I say, it doesn't matter, does it?" he said persuasively, obviously trying to restrain the smile that still twitched at his cheery, sunburned face. "We got off with our lives, and I take it we're both insured."

She stared at him rather blankly. His attitude astounded her almost as much as the accident, but his frank camaraderie was such as no woman could resent.

Introductions

She found her voice at last. "How did you come to be on this road?"

"I don't know," he said easily. "How did you?"

She tried to summon her dignity. "I have a right here," she said. "But you—you were trespassing."

His smile broke forth again. "I say, what a foul accusation! How do you know?"

"Because it's a private road leading to Scarpe castle," she said.

"Is it, though?" he commented. "Well, I expect I've as much right on it as you have. Anybow, it doesn't matter. The thing was an accident. They'll have to pay up."

"Yes, but whose fault?" said Ruth, striving to be practical.

He threw back his head and laughed ag in till the echoes rang. "Why, nobody's, of course!" he declared. "It never is. Look here! I'll fill in your form and make a sketch of the accident and everything. You leave it all to me! I'll see you get a new car, all right."

"A new car!" said Ruth, and suddenly her chin quivered; she turned sharply away.

"Wouldn't that meet the case?" he said. "You're rather hard to please, aren't you? Just think what might have happened!" He looked about him. "And you must have been stuck, anyhow. You'd never have got round this bend. It's a damn sticky corner, this. We shall have to do something to it."

"O!" Ruth turned back again with enlightenment in her eyes. "You're Mr. George—the new agent!"

He smiled at her. "My name is George—yes! Clever of you to guess. And you?"

"I am the daughter of the old one," she said. "My father is giving it up."

"O, I'm taking it over from you, am I?" he said. "I say, what a ghastly beginning. We might easily have gone spinning to perdition together without so much as an introduction. I don't know your name even now."

"My name is Ruth Carey," she said.

He made her a ceremonious bow. "A pity your father is chucking his hand in! Is he fed up with the job or what?"

She explained, with an odd wonder at the fact that this young man had wholly ceased to be a stranger from the first moment of addressing her. "You see, the old Lord Scarpe never lived here. He was a helpless invalid for about twenty years—as long as I have known the place. It was just left in my father's hands, and I helped him. But now that the old man is dead, it has gone to an obscure relation, and my father always said that he wouldn't go on with it afterwards. So"—she smiled at him faintly for the first time—"that's how you come to be here."

"O, that's how, is it?" he said. "Well, I hope you're going to stay on and help me, or I shall make an awful mess of things. What's this new chap like, by the way?"

She shook her head. "I haven't seen him. I thought you had."

"O no! It was all done by letter—through his solicitors. He comes from Australia, doesn't he? I expect he's an awful barbarian." He smiled upon her again in his most winning fashion. "I say, you'll simply have to stay and help me. I can't face this situation alone."

Ruth found herself actually trying not to smile in return. She had recovered her mental balance now, but she had a vagrant suspicion that her judgment had somehow gone astray. "I think the first thing to be done," she said, "is to decide about my car."

"Of course," he agreed, obligingly. "Well, I suggest that you get into my car and let me back her up the hill. Then I can take you home and we'll fill in the forms together. You naturally will say it was my fault, and I shall say it was yours. That's always done. Our respective insurances will then go fifty-fifty on the deal and we shall be—as we were."

"It'll never be the same," said Ruth with a sigh.

He rallied her cheerily. "I say, don't be sentimental! You wait till a new car comes round to your door, and then——"

"But I shan't get a new car," she interrupted. "They'll only give me the value of a second-hand—if that."

"O, nonsense! You leave 'em to me! I'll bully them for you," he promised serenely. "Now you hop into my old bus and I'll take you up the hill. We shall certainly have to do something to this hairpin to make it navigable."

"You can never make it possible for us to pass each other, anyway," said Ruth.

"O, but I don't want to do that," he declared gallantly. "Only to meet and exchange the time of day without either pushing the other over the cliff."

"I'm afraid I don't think it's at all a good meeting place," she said.

"You wait and see!" he laughed back.

His gayety was of a type impossible to resist. As they backed up the steep ascent she found herself laughing with him at the difficulties of the way, notwithstanding the soreness of her heart. The sunny assurance of his outlook was infectious, and her sporting instinct moved her to respond. It would have been churlish to do otherwise. Besides, his own car had not escaped entirely unscathed, though the damage did not exceed a smashed headlight and crumpled wing. But when she commented upon them he only laughed.

"O, don't let's go into details! Life's too short. If we could only insure against all troubles as easily as against car smashes! Hearts, for instance! I've often wished I could insure against a broken heart."

"Has it been broken often?" she asked with interest. "I shouldn't have thought so."

He uttered his merry laugh. "Yes, you've got me there. No, not often! Only once or twice and never beyond repair! But one always feels a time might come—you know—like that hairpin bend—when one might turn a sharp corner and find oneself wrecked before one could pull up."

"I should think it would take a good deal to wreck you," said Ruth.

The Grim Castle

He was driving warily up the winding road with his head over his shoulder, but he flashed her a sudden glance at that. "Well, yes," he said with abrupt gravity. "It would. But I've often thought there's a hairpin bend in most people's lives. Some get around it and some don't."

They reached the top at length and ran on to the smooth road that led up to the grim old castle that frowned like a fortress on the top of the cliff.

"Jove!" he said lightly. "It's like a prison, isn't it?"

"Yes," she agreed seriously. "Daddy and I often think what fun it would be to lay out a lot of money and make it really beautiful. It's such a lovely position."

He surveyed the place with a reflective eye. "We shall have to get the new lord to put his hand in his pocket," was his verdict. "But you'll have to give me your advice, you and your father. I can't tackle this job alone."

"I don't even know whether we shall stay on here," said Ruth.

He turned towards her keenly. "O, you must—for a time, anyhow! It would be mean of you not to give me the benefit of your experience, and I'm sure you couldn't be that"—he began to laugh again—"after all I've done for you!"

Again she found it impossible not to laugh with him. "You'll have to talk to daddy," she said.

He fell in with the idea at once. "O, rather! Where do you live? Let's go and find him!"

"We live down in the village," she said. "But wouldn't you like to look round the place, now we are here—or perhaps you have?"

"Only a glance," he assured her. "I didn't get inside. It wasn't inviting enough. But I'd love to go all round it with you. May we?"

"If you like," she said.

He was so entirely different from her preconceived idea of her father's successor that curiosity as well as courtesy moved her to consent. They left the car, and she led him round the old gray walls till they came to an arched doorway by which they entered a paved courtyard.

"Are you taking me to the dungeons?" he asked.

She stopped at a narrow side door and produced a key. "No, these are the kitchens and grooms' quarters. It's all very old fashioned. They say the furniture hasn't been touched since William IV.'s reign. There are all sorts of funny little cupboards everywhere—and staircases where you would never expect them. I hope the new lord won't spoil everything."

"I won't let him," he said.

An Extraordinary Idea

She led him by devious winding passages to the great oak beamed entrance hall, where suits of armor and ancient weapons gleamed against the somber walls.

"Who looks after all this?" he said.

"We do," said Ruth.

"Not you personally?" He looked at her keenly. "You don't mean that?"

"Yes, I do. Why not? I've loved doing it," she said simply. "Daddy has paid me fifty pounds a year for the last six years for being his general factotum, as he calls it."

"Fifty pounds a year! Great Scot!" He continued to gaze at her. "What a princely salary!"

She colored a little. "It was as much as he could afford, and I'd have done the work in any case."

"Are you sorry to be giving it up?" he asked unexpectedly.

She met his look with plain directness. "Yes, very sorry. But daddy isn't strong enough, and he has a sister who wants him to go and live with her, so I suppose he'll have to go."

"And what will you do?" he asked.

She raised her head with a delicate movement of independence. "I don't know yet, but I shall find work somewhere. I'm not afraid of work."

"What sort of work?" he said; then as she hesitated: "Forgive me for asking! Don't tell me if you don't want to, but I'd awfully like to know."

"I don't mind telling you," said Ruth. "I expect I could get work on a farm. I'm fond of animals, and I'm very strong."

"What! Laborer's work?" he said.

She smiled. "Or milkmaid's work! I learned to milk a long while ago, and I can make butter, too."

He made an abrupt gesture as of one come to a sudden decision. "O, I say!" he said impulsively. "I'd give you half my salary if you'd stay and help me here."

It was Ruth's turn to open her eyes, and she did so widely. "What an extraordinary idea!" she said slowly.

"Yes, isn't it?" he said, wholly unabashed. "But not a bad one for all that. It means that you'll do most of the work and I shall get all the credit. Quite a reasonable proposition from my point of view. Come! You're not going to turn it down?"

She stood facing him by a tall narrow window that looked straight out over the sea all shimmering in the heat haze. "This feels like another hairpin bend," she said with a half smile.

"O, but there's no danger round the corner," he assured her swiftly. "No one's going to hurl you on to the rocks this time. Think what an immense advantage it would be for me to have some one at hand who knows all the ropes—anyhow, till the new Lord Scarpe comes along. I can see you're a mass of efficiency." He laughed his winning boyish laugh. "And I'm such an ass if you only knew."

All for Love

Ruth surveyed him with serious appraising eyes. "I'm beginning to think you must be," she said.

He held out his hand to her. "Well, you wouldn't leave me in the lurch, would you? You wouldn't like to see me come to grief. You couldn't be so vindictive as that."

"No, I'm not vindictive," she said. "But you took on the job single handed, didn't you? You weren't thinking of engaging an assistant before you met me."

"O, don't be so horribly logical!" he said. His hand remained extended, and after a decided pause she laid hers within it. "You know quite well we should make a success of it, now don't you? Don't you always know at first sight who you're going to get on with? I do."

"I'm not sure," said Ruth guardedly, removing her hand again.

"O, you're only saying that to tease me," he said. "You are sure. There now! It's a bargain, isn't it?"

She looked him straight in the eyes. "I'm not going to take half your salary," she said.

"All right. A third!" he said equably.

"No, not a third, either." She tried not to smile. "Nor a sixth, nor a twelfth, nor even a penny."

He put his hand to his head with a dramatic gesture. "I say, don't make me giddy! You're going to do it for love!"

She turned from him, still hotly fighting the smile which should not have assailed her at such a moment. "Shall we be sensible now?" she suggested. "I'll show you the rest of the house another time, but we'd better go home now and tell my father."

"O yes, let's go and tell him by all means!" he said with alacrity.

"I mean about the accident," said Ruth.

"All right," he said cheerily. "No need to rush things! We'll tell him the rest by degrees."

"I don't think," said Ruth very quickly, "that there is anything else to tell."

"Not till it happens," he agreed. "No sense in being premature, of course! Personally, I love drifting, don't you?"

"I'm not sure," Ruth said again.

He smiled upon her with a confidence too disarming to be resented. "All right. I'll ask you again in a week's time," he said.

They went out again into the summer sunshine and presently, by way of the main road which wound inland, down to the little white village on the edge of which, close to the castle gates, Ruth Carey and her father had lived for so long. The bailiff's house was no more than a cottage set in a green orchard, trimly picturesque, but the visitor surveyed it with keen appreciation.

"I say, what a jolly little home! And you've lived here all your life! That's exactly what it looks like."

"Come and see my father!" said Ruth. "Ah, there he is! Daddy!" She called across the grass to a figure in shirt sleeves engrossed over a flower bed. "Daddy! Here is Mr. George—just come!"

The figure straightened itself, looked and came slowly to meet them.

Confession

Duncan Carey was a man well on in the sixties, gray haired and thin, with a somewhat weary bearing, as though he had worked too hard all his life. There was an air of resignation about him, as if he had given up expecting anything really pleasant. His smile though kindly, was too tired to be genial.

"You are Mr. George?" he said. "I only had your letter this morning. I didn't expect you before next week."

Young George's smile lacked nothing in cheery goodwill. "I changed my plans," he said. "Thought I'd like to have a good look at the place while you were still in command, sir. I hope you don't mind?"

"Why should I mind?" said Carey. "You are very welcome. My daughter latterly has done more than I have. My heart is not so strong as it was once, and I have some difficulty in getting about as I used. But she will give you all the information you need from our side, and if you care to look at the books at any time"—he made a gesture towards the cottage—"they are all there ready for inspection. I think you will find everything in order."

"I'm sure of that," said the new agent. "Only hope I shall do half as well. Afraid you won't like me much when Miss Carey tells you what I've done already."

"O, but you didn't!" said Ruth quickly. "I mean—it wasn't all your fault."

He threw her a laughing glance. "Remember, no blame is attached to either of us! That's important. In fact, it was almost a case of suicide on the part of your car. Temporary insanity, I should call it."

"Combined with the hairpin bend," said Ruth, "which neither of us would have attempted in our sober senses. Daddy," she turned to her father with a hint of appeal, "there's been an accident, and I've lost the car."

"Lost it!" Carey gazed at her with a mild wonder. "What on earth do you mean, child? How—lost it?"

She explained. "I met Mr. George—unexpectedly—at the hairpin bend. I was stuck, and——"

"And I ran into her car and pushed it over the cliff," said George. "It was all my fault, of course, really; but we're pretending it wasn't—to please the insurance companies."

The Comic Side

Carey turned from one to the other with a bewildered expression. "I don't understand," he said to his daughter. "You don't mean you took the cliff road to Scarpe?"

"I'm afraid I did, daddy. It was very—foolish. But—I knew I should have many more chances, and I did so want to get round." She ended with her eyes downcast, avoiding his look.

George came swiftly to her assistance. "It was a jolly sporting effort," he declared. "I never admired any one so much before. You see, sir, it really doesn't matter. We're both insured and——"

Carey interrupted him. "Is the car wrecked?" he asked.

"Completely, I'm afraid. She's lying on the beach upside down. But it really wasn't Miss Carey's fault," the young man declared. "She might have got round if I hadn't pushed her over."

"O, but you know I couldn't!" she exclaimed. "I was badly stuck."

"How did you escape?" said Carey.

"She jumped," said George soberly. "Finest leap I ever saw! It's all right, sir, I tell you. We're insured. We shall get it out of them all right."

Carey looked at him with subdued agitation. "You'll be very clever if you do," he said.

"O, it's quite easy," smiled the other. "It all depends on how you handle them. They'll pay up all right. No doubt of it."

Carey made a tragic gesture and seemed to relapse into his former attitude of weary resignation. "You may—perhaps," he said. "Ours won't."

"O, but, daddy, why not?" said Ruth. "It was an accident. No one could say it wasn't."

Carey sighed. "I daresay it was, my dear. But, you see, I've always looked on you as a fairly safe driver, and as I knew you would have to depend on the car when we leave here, I let the policy lapse—six months ago."

"O, my stars!" said George. Then he turned round to the girl and smiled into her face of consternation. "Laugh!" he said urgently. "Laugh! It doesn't matter a tinker's curse. I'll get it out of mine."

There was that in his tone that moved her, she knew not wherefore. The situation was very far from being of a sort to call forth mirth. Yet she laughed with him, and as she did so she saw the comic side.

"Why, of course!" she said. "I was going to try and sell her—to you!"

"I'll buy her," cried George, "as she lies!"

No Sense of Humor

Perhaps it was excusable that Carey's sense of humor should fail to rise to the occasion. He had never been a humorous man. But since his daughter and his successor seemed determined to treat the matter as a joke he made no objection to their doing so. They were young, and young people often laughed at things which caused no amusement to the more mature minds of their elders. He himself had long ceased either to hope or despair over anything. He had learned with his waning strength to take life as it came, and most of its decisions were left to Ruth.

When she told him that Mr. George wanted them to help him in the taking over of the management of the estate he agreed that it might be a kind thing to do until Lord Scarpe returned, but left the doing of it entirely to her, according to habit.

Young George took up his abode at the village inn forthwith, but became almost an inmate of the Carey's humble ménage in his zeal to master all the Scarpe affairs. They spent a good deal of time up at the castle and about the estate, and to Ruth, who till then had regarded her father in somewhat the light of a sleeping partner, the energetic coöperation was a keen delight. She had always loved Scarpe castle, and the enthusiasm which the new agent brought to his work aroused her own to its fullest extent.

"If we only had money to spend on it!" she would say sometimes.

To which he would cheerily reply: "I'll get it out of this new fellow when he comes along."

They were full of schemes for improvements, but, perhaps naturally, the first thing upon which George wished to concentrate was the hairpin bend, and after several discussions they evolved a plan for its betterment which would make it possible for one car to get round without serious risk.

"It won't be mine, of course," Ruth said with a tinge of wistfulness. "The Lord Scarpe probably will want to use the road and so will you."

"You wait!" he rejoined cheerily. "You'll find yourself climbing round it in a brand new car one of these days."

She did not believe him, but she let the kindly prophecy uncontradicted. The wreckage of her own car had been taken from the rocks below, and he told her that he had the matter in hand and would let her know as soon as there was anything to report. In the meantime they went to and fro in his motoring car, superintending the work which had been started, and making plans to submit to the new Lord Scarpe as soon as he should make his appearance.

"I only wish he'd come," Ruth said one evening. "And then we could really begin on things."

"Yes. I'm getting a bit tired waiting, too," he agreed. "But I—

John Vanderlyn's Adventure

by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

What Has Gone Before:

JOHN VANDERLYN, a young American, is visiting at the villa of the Marchesa Trescobaldi, near Monte Carlo. The marchesa takes her guests, Col. Bruce, Joan Peveral, an English girl, and John, to an Arabian fortune teller down in the town. The Arab tells Vanderlyn that he is going to have an adventure with death and that he will not return to America until after he is married and his wife has borne him three children. John is skeptical, although he was impressed by the seer's first performance, which consisted of making each of the party relive an event of his or her past life. They drive back toward the marchesa's villa. On the road they come upon and rescue two women, victims of an auto wreck. The younger of the two is a Russian, named Dina Hitrowo, and the other is her aunt. Vanderlyn is greatly attracted to the girl, but she leaves without bidding him good-by. The marchesa's guests decide to spend the day across the border in Italy.

INSTALLMENT IV.

The Girl Gambler.

THE hostess looked round considerингly at the party gathered together. "Of course you must come, Mr. Vanderlyn! That will mean four in Lord Mansfield's car; and then you and I and Col. Bruce can go in mine."

"We'd best start at once," said Lord Mansfield firmly, "for it's a damned long way."

"The first thing to do," observed the colonel, "is for everybody to go and find and bring down here his or her passport. And then it would be as well if Lord Mansfield took them all in his sole charge. His name will carry weight and perhaps shorten the tiresome formalities at the frontier. The Italians are extremely particular now, and no bribe, however large, will pass any one lacking a passport into Italy."

After they had all, with the exception of the marchesa, left the terrace, Mr. Dove trotted toward her. "I think I'll ask you, dear Camilla, to drop me in Nice! I've several old friends and cronies I'd like to look up there, and I can make my own way back here quite comfortably." But, as he knew would be the case, she said gently, "Col. Bruce will arrange for you to be motored back, Theophilus. I'm in touch with a big garage there, and they're always bringing my friends backwards and forwards."

"In that case would it matter if I stayed and had dinner there?"

"Not in the least! Do just as you like."

She added, smiling, "You know that Belle Colline is really what the English call 'Liberty Hall.'"

"Indeed it is." And with real tenderness the old fellow took her pretty, soft hand and raised it to his lips. "Liberty Hall," he repeated, "and the most delicious châtelaine in the whole world!"

Lady Mansfield, tall, thin to emaciation, and with faded yellow hair, came out of the château and hurried toward them, a worried look on her fretful face. "I can't find my passport anywhere! James will be terribly cross with me. I don't know what to do about it?"

"But surely Lord Mansfield has got it?"

The marchesa's heart was large enough to feel real sympathy for the querulous, downtrodden wife of the poor profiteer.

"He makes me keep it always. And when we arrived I put it in the top right hand drawer of my dressing table. I saw it there only yesterday. I've left my maid looking for it—but, of course, I know quite well she won't find it!"

Hard on the heels of the poor lady came her big, stout liege lord. "My passport's gone!" he exclaimed in an angry tone. "I've hunted high and low—and so has my man, Dent. It was kept in a dispatch box where I keep some of my office writing paper."

At that moment Joan Peveral came forward, "I've mislaid my passport, so I'll have to stay at home." She looked round her. "Why, what's the matter? You all look as if you had the blues! Have I kept you waiting?"

"I've lost my passport!" cried Lady Mansfield. "And so has my husband."

"I expect they're all right," said Joan airily. "I've often mislaid mine."

The Missing Passports

"Unluckily, passports vised for Italy are worth anything from two thousand to ten thousand francs in France," said Col. Bruce vexedly. "And a British or American passport is worth twice more than any other."

"Why that?" asked Vanderlyn.

"For the reason that Italy is eager to welcome the right kind of tourists, and American and British travelers are, as a rule, just the sort of folk welcomed there. Not only do they spend money but they are not in the least interested in Italian politics. Would you go up and see if your's is safe?"

Vanderlyn smiled, for he always carried his passport on his person. But as he felt in all his pockets and patted himself more or less all over, his smile turned to a look of rueful amusement, for his passport, together with the thin leather case which had contained it, was gone!

Half to himself he exclaimed, "I must have worn another suit yesterday and forgot to transfer the case from one coat pocket to another."

But even as he spoke he felt quite sure that he had worn the clothes he had on now at Monte Carlo; in fact, he had not seen his passport since he had had to produce it in order to gain admittance to the casino.

He hurried up, two steps at a time, the central staircase which led to the first floor of the château. Then walking rapidly along the broad corridor to his bedroom, he opened the splendid piece of old Spanish furniture arranged now as a gentleman's wardrobe. As he had inwardly well known would be the case, there was no passport case in any of the pockets of the coats hanging there.

There came over him a sudden belief, nay, certitude, that he had dropped his passport while he was in the gambling rooms, or, as an alternative, that he had left it on the broad counter of the admission card office.

As he came out of his room he met Lady Mansfield's maid. "Well," he asked good naturedly, "have you found her ladyship's passport yet?"

"O, no, sir! I haven't found it, and, what's more, mine's gone, too, and so has Mr. Dent's!"

Lord Mansfield's valet came out of his master's bedroom looking utterly bewildered.

"I can swear I saw his lordship's passport yesterday in his dispatch box! As for mine I kept it in a drawer with my clean collars, and things of that kind; nothing else has been disturbed, sir, but it's gone, right enough."

Vanderlyn, the bearer of ill news, went down, and so out on to the terrace. "My passport has gone, too," he said briefly.

"It looks as if there's been a clean sweep, and that we shall have to go and see the English and American consuls at Nice and arrange for temporary passports to be supplied to us," said Col. Bruce.

"Still, Bernard, don't you think you'd better go and see if your passport has gone, too?" said the marchesa anxiously. She had already rung the bell that ran from the house to the marble table on which there still stood the coffee tray and stand of liqueurs.

Col. Bruce must have raced up to his turret room; it seemed but a moment later that he came back waving a green and gold booklet in his hand. "I could hardly believe my eyes," he cried, "but there this was—on my dressing table, where I confess I generally leave it."

All Too Civil

A few moments later arrived the marchesa's maid, an old fashioned, not over pleasant, plain featured Frenchwoman, who adored her mistress but liked nobody else in the world. She bore a large envelope in her mahogany tinted hand.

"Her excellency wants her passport? I have it here."

The marchesa looked from one of her guests to the other. "How amazing!" she exclaimed.

Col. Bruce opened his mouth; then he shut it again. He was a prudent man, and very seldom said more than he need.

"I think every one sleeping in the château had better see whether he or she has his or her passport," said the marchesa.

At the end of an hour every member of the big household had sought and found his or her passport, the exceptions being the butler, Powell, and the three footmen under him. Their four passports had disappeared. So there was nothing for it but to go to Nice. Then some one with dismay remembered that the consulates shut at three. That meant that they must all wait till the morrow.

Vanderlyn alone demurred. "I think—I'm almost sure—I dropped my passport in the Casino at Monte Carlo. I know I had it there yesterday."

"So had we all," growled Lord Mansfield.

Vanderlyn went on, "So, if I may, marchesa, I'll go at once to Monte Carlo to see if I can find it."

Col. Bruce accompanied the American to the garage, and, as they walked side by side, "What's happened," he said quietly, "is quite clear to me, Vanderlyn, though I don't choose to tell the others what I think. The man who brings over the clean linen each week from a laundry run by some English ladies near here must have been well bribed to steal any foreign passport he could find in the bedrooms at Belle Colline. My view is that he was successful both on the ground floor, where the menservants sleep, and on the first floor. But he must have been disturbed when on his way up to the third floor. That is where the marchesa's apartments are situated. One of the servants may have accompanied him up there. Unluckily, according to a bad custom, hereabouts, the laundryman takes the clean linen into all the bedrooms himself, so that now and again some good natured fool may give him a big tip."

"He had no occasion to go into my room," said Vanderlyn quickly, "for I haven't been long enough to send anything to be laundered; that's one reason why I'm sure I lost it at Monte Carlo."

Col. Bruce looked puzzled. "He may have just chanced it—in your case! The peasantry in these parts are practically Italian, as you know. They're extraordinarily quick witted, and fantastically eager to make money. A passport such as yours would be of greatest value to, say, an international crook who speaks English perfectly."

"I feel sure I shall find mine in the Casino," said Vanderlyn firmly.

Col. Bruce was too civil, as he would have put it to himself, to express his disbelief. But the two men, as always, parted on cordial terms.

At Monte Carlo

As he drew up in front of the Casino at Monte Carlo, Vanderlyn felt as if years, instead of only hours, had passed since he and the marchesa's house party had arrived there just about this time yesterday.

During his long motor drive which, as he was at the wheel, meant constant watchfulness and care, his subconscious self was absorbed in trying to recapture the elusive personality of Dina Hitrowo. It was of her, not of the errand on which he was bound, that his mind was full. It was as if some strange madness was working in his blood.

The great square in front of the Casino was almost empty. The denizens of Monte Carlo were all in the rooms gambling, or engaged on worthier occupations in the white dwellings, high and low, which stretched upwards beyond the palm studded green oasis which is known to Monegasques as "Le Fromage," "The Cheese," because of its peculiar shape.

A man in a chauffeur's uniform sprang forward, and in excellent English he exclaimed, "May I take monsieur's car to my garage?" and he held out a card. One of the uniformed attendants came forward. "This gentleman," he said in French, "is on the list of approved garages. Monsieur can have every confidence in allowing his beautiful car to be taken there."

The man gave Vanderlyn what looked like a huge gold medal on which was the number 43 and an address. "This means," he said proudly, "that I have forty-three motors already in my garage. There is not one that I will treat with greater care than monsieur's. When monsieur has finished—he can stay till two in the morning if he likes—he has only to send me this medal and his car will be round in a few moments wherever monsieur has had dinner, or enjoyed a little dancing."

Vanderlyn walked up the steps of the Casino into the atrium; and then he turned into the comparatively small office where, since the war, every would be player must undergo a certain scrutiny, show his passport, and pay a small fee for his entrance card.

The man behind the broad counter knew the American at once, as having come with the Marchesa Trescobaldi's party the day before.

"Surely monsieur has already got a card which will admit him for a month both to the rooms and to the private club?"

Vanderlyn told him of the lost passport. But, alas! there was no trace of it. "I have to admit," said the official regretfully, "that if a foreign gentleman leaves his passport in his coat pocket, he runs a very good chance of getting it stolen. You see, an American passport vised for Italy is worth about three hundred dollars to the thief. Can you wonder that they are often stolen?"

Vanderlyn went back into the hall, feeling annoyed that he had lost his afternoon for nothing. What a fool he had been not to seek out Achille in order to find out the way to the villa where dwelt the enigmatical girl who had made so deep an impression on his mind! For a moment he toyed with the thought of trying to find the place. But he realized that to do so would, in very truth, be like looking for a needle in a bundle of hay. The whole sea coast for miles and miles on either side of Cannes is bordered by villas of the kind of which Dina Hitrowo had given him so brief and vague a description.

With a queer, half-whimsical feeling that he would like to try his luck at the tables, if only to prove the truth of the adage, "unlucky at cards, lucky in love," for already he found himself, rather shamefacedly, thinking of Dina as a man thinks of the woman he knows he is going to love, he turned into what is known to the habitués of the casino as "The Kitchen." It is there that humble players have a chance of winning or losing small sums of money. And, naturally, it is always crowded. Indeed, from the moment the casino is open there is a rush for the roulette tables there.

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WIENER.

"You see, an American passport vised in Italy is worth about three hundred dollars to the thief."

The Mystery Girl

He was passing through "The Kitchen" when the crowd surrounding one of the tables moved apart, and something seemed to make him stop and gaze at the back of the head of a girl who was sitting at one of the roulette tables. He could see—he was half ashamed of himself for noticing it—that she had a lovely creamy white neck. Was it—surely it could not be—Dina Hitrowo?

The crowd closed up again, and he walked quickly round till he reached the other side of the roulette table and then he saw what, deep in his heart, he already knew to be the truth.

The Russian girl he had borne in his arms last night, and whose frankness had at once attracted and repelled him, this morning, looked extraordinarily different from what she had done yesterday and when they had parted today. In place of the pathetically shabby little red and white cotton frock and close white straw hat she had then worn she was wearing an elegant looking, scrupulously neat buff coat and skirt and a felt hat that matched her costume.

But what interested the hidden watcher to a painful degree was that, with her ringless hands, she was staking quietly and systematically plaques which were each worth twenty francs on that portion of the green baize cloth marked rouge. Looking neither to the right nor to the left, she appeared as if she belonged to another sphere from any of the women players round her. For one thing she was what none of them were, scrupulously and fastidiously clean.

After a while he noticed that a swarthy, stern looking man of about forty stood close just behind her chair. Something seemed to tell Vanderlyn that Dina knew this man, and a moment later he was proved right, for the person in question leaned over and said something to her.

All at once she looked straight across the roulette table, and Vanderlyn saw that, sitting exactly opposite to her, was a singular looking elderly woman. She was—she must be—the Countess Gregorovitch!

Walking a little to the right, he began watching them both, with a growing feeling of unease, it might almost be said unhappiness, filling his burdened heart.

This, then, was the meaning of their poverty? The old woman was a gambler—a fierce, unreasoning, instinctive gambler—as are so many Russian women. And it was she who must have taught Dina Hitrowo her vice. There was an intently eager as well as a completely concentrated look on Dina's countenance. Indeed, she was so absorbed in the system she was playing, which, as the American soon realized, required two to play it, that she never lifted her eyes above the roulette table before her. The man behind her was probably a mere casino acquaintance.

As for the system played by aunt and niece, it was almost childishly simple and was evidently proving very successful.

That system was played as follows: Each of the two partners staked simultaneously, the one on red, the other on black, one plaque of exactly the same value in each case. One of the two, of course, lost, and the loser doubled her stake, while the winner took her winning plaque off the table, leaving the other plaque on. The system was played as a kind of Martingale, which, if it prolonged the agony, diminished the loss caused by a fatal run on either color. But when the colors came up alternately, or fairly alternately, a large sum of money was won by the partners before there came the série of eight, nine, ten, dreaded or welcomed, as the case may be, by all players of roulette.

That Swarthy Man

Vanderlyn lost count of the time as he stood there gazing at the two women. He wondered that no one followed their game, for today it was as if they could not lose. Always, always, always, they won!

He watched intently the almost mechanical movements of Dina Hitrowo's lovely hands. Once there came a run of six on red, and her face flushed and paled by turns as she followed the little ball spinning round and round till it slowed down and hovered, as if in human perplexity, over a group of black and red numbers. Indeed, so instinctive was his sympathy with her that he found himself sharing her almost gasping relief when the seventh spin resulted in the ball, after a long quivering hover over a red number, finding its final haven in a black cavity.

But it was not with him, the as yet invisible watcher, that Dina shared her almost agonising sense of relief. It was with the swarthy, stern looking man, who still stood behind her chair as if—or so Vanderlyn now suspected—wishful to guard her from touch of alien hands. When the croupier at last shouted out "Black," she turned and smiled up into the dark face, as if mutely asking him to share her joy that at last all had come right. But there came no answering gleam of pleasure or relief on the man's stern countenance.

Vanderlyn told himself in vain how natural it was that the girl should be on terms of kindly comradeship with all and any members of the curious little world of regular gamblers in "The Kitchen" section of the casino. Her evident familiarity with this curiously powerful looking, highly vitalized individual filled him with jealous unease.

All at once she rose from her chair with a quick movement, leaving her piles of playing tokens on the green baize cloth. Quickly the man behind her slipped into her chair, and at once began playing in conjunction with the countess. So he was a member of a syndicate formed to exploit this system? Vanderlyn breathed a sigh of unconscious relief.

Hastening along on the outskirts of the crowd standing round the table, the American at last found himself face to face with Dina Hitrowo. But on seeing him, a look of embarrassment and of discomfort filled her lovely eyes, and he felt sharply chagrined.

"Have you been here long, Mr. Vanderlyn?"

She glanced nervously behind her as she asked the question. It was plain she did not wish her aunt to see her talking to him.

"I've been watching you for some time, mademoiselle. You've had great luck today, haven't you? I was dreadfully afraid you were going to lose all your winnings just now!"

"So was I——"

"Now that one of your friends has taken your place, won't you come out on the terrace? The rooms are getting so full."

She hesitated perceptibly. "If I go away I must tell the countess where I shall be," she murmured, as if to herself. Then to Vanderlyn she said smiling, "You see there is a small syndicate engaged in playing our system, Mr. Vanderlyn; and if my aunt becomes weary I must take her place, unless the fourth member of our syndicate has arrived. He ought to have been here a long time ago."

A gambling syndicate? Why hadn't he thought of that when that dark man had leaned over her in such a familiar manner? He felt absurdly happier all at once. What a fool he had been just now! The stranger who had aroused such a sensation of dislike, ay, and a kind of jealous fear in his heart, was simply that most sexless of comrades, a fellow gambler.

Together they walked round to where the countess was sitting. Dina cleverly threaded her way through the throng of men and women some of whom were obviously hoping that some player, having to purchase fresh supplies of tokens, would vacate his seat.

She whispered something in her aunt's ear, and the older woman turned and looked thoughtfully, measuringly, at the American. Apparently she approved of her niece's new acquaintance for, "She says that it's all right, and that I may go out of doors, for that the man who will take her place when she is tired is coming in five minutes," said the girl.

"I wonder how your aunt knew that?" Vanderlyn spoke his thought aloud.

Dina smiled. "We have a code of signals. The man who took my place held up his finger just now, it seems. That means that it is all right, and that the other player will be here soon."

The two walked in silence across the empty spaces between the roulette tables, and so out of the great building on to the terrace which commands the most splendid and picturesque view on that southern coast.

There were very few people there, and in the now waning sunlight the Russian girl looked wan and tired.

Vanderlyn touched her elbow—and, a second later, would have given his soul to have touched her again.

"Let us sit down," he said. "The sun is going down and soon it will be too cold."

Just Herself

She sank down on a bench with evident weariness, and for a few moments neither of them spoke. And then all at once that for which he had felt a few minutes before he would have given his soul happened. She put out her hand and laid it on his.

"You're very kind," she said gently, "wonderfully kind, Mr. Vanderlyn. When I am with you I feel I can be myself."

She said those words with an air of almost desperate sincerity. He clasped her hand, and held it for a moment tightly in his. Then he let it go. John Vanderlyn was not the kind of man who takes advantage of a woman's momentary feeling of gratitude.

"All I want you to be when you're with me," he said in a low voice, "is just to be—yourself."

"I'm being so now," she whispered back; and then she became silent.

"I suppose you come here to Monte Carlo very often," he said.

She started as if roused out of a deep abstraction. "Yes, I suppose I may say that I do come often here. Though now and again the countess comes by herself or with a friend. Unfortunately for me this system which is proving so successful requires two to play it, and it is more easy for a woman to get a chair and to keep a chair in 'The Kitchen' than it is for a man. However, if we go on winning we shall play for higher stakes. But I confess the thought of that makes me feel nervous. Yesterday there was a series of fifteen on red! That, for us, would have meant ruin."

She said the words very quietly but in a tone that made it clear that she meant what she said.

"Have you been playing a good deal this last week?"

He hardly knew why he asked the question.

She shook her head. "No, we have not been here for nearly a month."

She saw the surprise in his face and added, "It is all a question of money! The countess cannot play without money, and she has not always got the money to play with. She is angry now that she did not begin today at a table where the stakes are high. If we had done so, the profit might have been very large. You see, she believes in luck!"

"Are you staying on for dinner at Monte Carlo?"

"I think so."

"In that case will you and your aunt dine with me?" He saw her hesitation and added, "Of course, I shall be delighted to entertain also the other members of your syndicate."

The Lucky Countess

Vanderlyn felt an intense desire to know the two men who must surely be constantly thrown with the girl now sitting by his side—if, that is, they always played the system together.

"There will be no necessity for that," she exclaimed; "they always look after themselves."

"And then you will be playing on after dinner?"

"We generally come into the casino again for about an hour. If we have lost, we go on and try to make up the loss. If we have won, the countess hopes her luck will last."

"And then I suppose you take the train and a taxi from Cannes?"

"No, we always take the tram," she said in a low voice. "It passes very near the villa."

"Of course I shall motor you both back tonight."

"Can you really do so?"

"Of course I can!"

She got up. "I would rather you stayed out here on the terrace, Mr. Vanderlyn, while I fetch the countess. There is no necessity for you to go into the casino again."

He could see by the way she spoke that she meant what she said. And she hastened off, not by the way they had come but through the passage that now links the terrace to the square in front of the casino of Monte Carlo.

Vanderlyn watched her slight, swaying figure; the wind caught her skirt and made her appear like a skiff skimming on the surface of the sea. He remembered what she had implied—that she was hardly ever herself. Would she ever be so far herself as ever to tell him something of her past life? Was it true, as they supposed at Belle Colline, that she had gone through such awful experiences during the Russian revolution that she wished to pass a sponge over all that part of her short life? He wondered. And he wondered the more when she at last came back with the woman whom he told himself he now really saw as she was for the first time.

The Countess Gregorovitch had an ugly, clever, secretive face. It was clear that today she was in a very good humor. Indeed, she had cause to be for, "You must have brought me good luck," she observed graciously. "I saw you watching my play and me. I have done very well today. Most excellently well! Not one single serious run on black or red. Always an intermittance. Two reds, two blacks, one black, one red, one red, one black; four reds, three blacks, and so on. All is well for us up to a run of eight. When it comes to six or seven—O, la! la! we become nervous."

"But surely there are not often runs of eight on one color?" he observed.

"Not often?" She turned to her niece. "Why, there were four of them in one hour the other day! But I thank God that we were not at the moment playing. We were simply looking on. Tomorrow I shall begin operations on a greater scale."

Vanderlyn noticed that she never said "we" but always "I"—"I have won," "I have lost." She was evidently the head of the syndicate, perhaps the one who provided the money.

"My niece tells me that you are kind enough to offer us dinner and to motor us home afterwards. We are not going back to the casino tonight. It does not do to tempt providence."

What Want Ad Classification Does This Picture Represent?

Can you follow a trail? Do you like to figure out secret messages? Do you like games that make you use your wits?

Then get busy! Want-Ad Wanda is back with a brand-new series of Hidden Want Ad games. Again she challenges you to follow her trail and find the want ads which she has hidden in the want ad columns of today's Tribune. Loads of fun for everybody—a real treasure hunt, mysterious messages, baffling clues, lots of excitement!

Just Follow These Simple Directions:

In the want ad columns of today's Tribune there has been inserted a number of mysterious want ads. These want ads look exactly like regular want ads, except the wording is different. All together there are between 10 and 15 of these Hidden Want Ads. You are invited to hunt for the Hidden Want Ads and try for the $100 in cash prizes which the Tribune will pay.

The game starts with the picture on this page. This picture represents one of the main classifications of Tribune Want Ads. Study the picture and decide which classification you think the artist had in mind. Then turn to that classification in today's want ad section and look through the want ads under that heading until you find the first Hidden Want Ad. You can't possibly miss it.

After you have found this first Hidden Want Ad read it over carefully. THE WORDING OF EACH HIDDEN WANT AD GIVES A HINT OR CLUE TO THE HIDING PLACE OF THE NEXT ONE. It's just like a treasure hunt. You don't have to search through the entire want ad section to find the Hidden Want Ads if you will just keep your wits about you. The Hidden Want Ads all tie up with each other. The picture helps you find the first one. The first one helps you find the second one. The second helps you find the third, and so on.

Remember, there are no less than 10 Hidden Want Ads and no more than 15. It's up to you to decide when you have found them all.

Awards will be made to the persons who send in the most nearly complete sets of Hidden Want Ads arranged in the most nearly correct order in accordance with these rules. Neatness and ingenuity of presenting them will count. In cases of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

You may clip the Hidden Want Ads from the paper and paste them on the handy blank provided at the right, or you may copy them down on separate sheets of paper. You may indicate what you believe to be their proper order or sequence by numbering them 1, 2, 3, 4, etc.

This offer is open to all—men and women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

Entries should be mailed to "HIDDEN WANT ADS 'F'," the Chicago Tribune, Postoffice Box 1718, Chicago, Ill. All entries for today's game must be received in the Tribune office not later than 6:00 P. M. on Thursday, November 6, 1930.

You need not purchase the Tribune to compete. Copies of the Tribune may be examined at the Tribune's office or at public libraries free of charge.

No entries will be returned, nor can the Tribune engage in correspondence on this subject. The prize winners of today's game will be announced two weeks from today.

Steele's Red. 7. Delicious. 8. McIntosh. 9. Jonathan. 10. Hubbardston. 11. Northern Spy. 12. Pippin.

A Is for Apple Pie—Whose Appetizing Aroma Always Wins It First Place as America's Great Dessert.

To eat one apple is to want another. It is no feat at all for a hungry growing boy or girl to consume six or eight large ones daily—and the feast is without the attendance of stomach ache or indigestion, provided the apples are fully ripe. I speak from experience and observation.

Apples always have been the favored fruit of the people. Country folk still, and I suppose always will, depend upon them as their main fruit. Those of you who can recall with me childhood days on the farm remember how eagerly we watched for the first sign of ripening fruit in the Early Harvest and Red June trees. Sometimes we grew impatient waiting for the full development of that golden glow or red blush. But who censured us? Surely not he who fully appreciated the pleasant qualities of new apple sauce.

That springtime apple pleasure, however, did not eclipse the one of late fall and winter. It was when the day was done and the kitchen fire had died to a few embers; after the dishes were washed and put into the cupboard. Just as we were ready to assemble one of the children was sent to the cellar for a bowl of apples. Then we drew our chairs before the open fireplace in the "big room" and sat in a semi-circle contentedly champing unwashed, unpolished apples—a fruit that was almost as common and as free as the air we breathed then—a generation ago.

Join the Luxuries.

But this doesn't hold today. Apples are almost a luxury, especially in the city. At 10 cents apiece they aren't as economical food, and we are not eating as many as we should, even though they remain just as good fillers and are as pleasant to the palate. Modern city boys and girls, therefore, are not apple stuffed. For which we are sorry, but must abide by so long as we insist on urban life.

Apples are refreshing in many ways, and how many they can play if we will only let them. As an early morning appetizer, raw or baked, in sandwiches a dessert, and in the main course as an accompaniment of meat, baked or roasted apples never weary the palate. In jellies, butters, marmalades, and candied they become some of our most delightful confections. And last, but not least, apple pie, the king of all pies.

Of course I refer to apple pie at its best—the kind that Henry Ward Beecher's mother used to make and which Mr. Beecher so appetisingly describes. Good apple pie in Beecher's time would be good pie today. And the modern cook who excels in making this favorite pie is following pretty much the same rules observed by those old cooks. The apple itself was considered most important. They chose one with fine flavor and one that would cook tender in a reasonable length of time. Some people think just any apple will do for pies, but this is a mistake. Beecher's first choice of apples for pie was the Spitzenberg, which is a relative of our well known Jonathan. At this season of the year we find the Jonathan, Gyeening, Fall Pippins, and Ontario especially good for pie.

Use Plain Pastry.

The next factor, but no less important, is a good plain pastry—the kind that is short and flaky. Not so short that it crumbles into powder nor so flaky that it almost blows away, but just right. Roll pastry out and line a deep pie tin. Then roll the top crust and cut slashes in a fancy design for steam vents. Next, remove the apple peeling quickly—a thin one, of course. Apple peeling should be paper thin, for the best flavor of the apple lies next to the skin, so please be merciful when paring and you will be rewarded with a finer flavor than you would otherwise obtain. Use a stainless steel knife and have it sharp.

Three big apples four inches in diameter will make a fat apple pie. Greenings, Ontarios, and 20 ounce are the kind that take three. About four Northern Spys and about five Jonathans will be required for a 9 inch pie. After the apples are peeled cut into quarters and remove the core. Then slice the quarters into thin uniform lengthwise pieces into the pie shell, arranging the apples as you slice. Do this work rapidly so that the apples have no time to discolor. When the pie plate is about half full sprinkle five or six tablespoons of sugar over the apples and dot with a few bits of butter.

Then proceed to slice apples until they are well rounded over the top. Add five or six tablespoons more of sugar and more butter. No water is needed and no flavoring if you have chosen a good flavored apple. The flavor of good apples should never be masked with a flavor of spice. If the taste for pie hot rich use cinnamon and nutmeg, but be discreet, never overdo spicing.

The Upper Crust.

Put on the upper crust. For a nonbakable pie cut the upper crust in this way: Press a pie tin, of the same size as the one in which you are baking your pie, on the dough. There will be an impression of two circles made. Cut around the inner circle and place the round dough sheet over the apples. This dough sheet will lack about ¼ inch of touching the edge of the lower crust, but don't worry. In baking, the apples will shrink and the crust will expand, so that when finished the upper crust will be almost perfectly sealed. Instead of the juice running out into the oven it oozes up through the slashes and open spaces, leaving the merest drips of appetizing juice which Beecher says "suggests jelly, but is not jelly."

A perfectly baked double crust apple pie has a tender and flaky upper and lower crust, is golden brown, level on top, and is well filled with perfectly cooked apples of fine flavor and color. And the slices cut according to directions retain their attractive form and have a much more beautiful appearance than when cut in a haphazard way off the core. Too many women fail to use enough apples and they also fail to get their apples perfectly cooked.

Cook the pie until the apples are soft, and this will require at least an hour of baking. Cool the pie naturally. By this I mean let it stand on a kitchen table at room temperature until it loses its heat. Then eat.

Apple pie is in its prime when it is about one hour old. I think we are all agreed that it deteriorates rapidly after the first three or four hours. Discriminating cooks never serve it after the first day.

Dutch Apple Pie.

Another delicious apple pie is one called the Dutch. If you haven't made one, try it. Only a month ago I had the privilege of eating one of the best I had ever tasted. It was an exquisite creation, tasted just as good as it looked and was served in a public eating place. Like others of its family, it had only one crust, but that one, of course, was perfect. Apples of the finest flavor were used. They were peeled, quartered, cored and the quarters cut into two pieces. These thick pieces of apples were carefully put into the pastry. Much care had to be taken in arrangement of apples in that pie because the beauty of the pie depended upon the arrangement and quality of the baked apples. Butter and sugar had been sprinkled over the top of the fruit just as is done in the two crust pie. A little water, about two tablespoons, had been added to keep the apples from drying out too much in this pie. The temperature for baking Dutch apple pie is the same as for the double crust variety. The apples should be cooked until tender and the final product should be apple clear, tender and delicate in appearance and, as Beecher says, "Neither dissolved nor yet in its original substance, but hanging as it were in a trance between the spirit and the flesh of applehood."

Apple Dumplings.

Apple dumplings are another favorite way of using apples, but rarely are they made as good as they might be. Too often the apple is undercooked and is dry. Many cooks prefer to core the apple and leave it whole. Whole ones, of course, require longer cooking. I find that, after the cored whole apple is placed on the dough, slicing it into about twelve pieces, leaving the pieces just intact at the bottom so that the apple still looks whole when it is enveloped in the dough, enables the apple to cook more rapidly. Of course, apple dumplings should be cooked a long time—in fact, as long as an apple pie, which requires almost 1½ hours.

I prefer a rich biscuit dough for apple dumplings to pie crust. Apple dumplings are delicious steamed as well as baked. And steamed ones are especially nice served with that old fashioned cream sauce, more familiarly known in the south as "dip." "Dip" is just sweet cream of medium thickness, sweetened and flavored with a few dashes of nutmeg. It is much better than it sounds.

Space forbids our giving all of the good recipes that we would like to offer. So instead we are describing briefly the apples that perchance you are finding on your city markets at the present time. Suggestions for their use, as I have found them in cooking tests, are also given with the hope that you will be able to cook apples to perfection in any way you choose.

Decided Difference.

To many people an apple is an apple, and yet there is a decided difference between the numerous varieties. We may say that all apples are good, but they are not all equally good for the same purpose. For this reason the consumer may be disappointed in an apple because the variety purchased does not fit the use for which it was intended. The most common uses for apples in the household are for eating raw, pies, sauce, baking and salad. These uses might be grouped into two general classifications: for dessert [eating raw] and for general cooking purposes.

Grouping apples in this way, those varieties that are especially crisp, juicy, of delicate flesh and pleasing flavor and aroma would be listed in the dessert class. This class would include such fine apples as Jonathan, McIntosh, Huntsman's Favorite, Cortland, Wealthy, Delicious, Northern Spy, Yellow Newton, and Winter Banana. This is not to say that these varieties are not good for culinary use, for they are exceedingly good when cooked, retaining their characteristic flavor and aroma.

Among those which are valuable primarily for their culinary qualities may be mentioned Duchess, Wealthy, Twenty Ounce, Ontario, Rhode Island Greening, Baldwin, Tompkins King, Russet, Hubbardston, and Tolman Sweet. Duchess is the first of these on the market. Twenty Ounce and Wealthy, fall apples, are excellent for pies, sauce and salad. Twenty Ounce is especially esteemed for baking because if its large size.

Uses of Apple Varieties.

The uses of apple varieties now in season are listed below:

R. I. Greening	Excellent	Good	Fair
Snow	Poor	Poor	Fair
Ontario	Very good	Excellent	Excellent

Apple Chips.

Cut 3 pounds of sweet well flavored apples into quarters, then core and cut into thin slices. Do not pare. Add 4 pounds of sugar and one-fourth of a pound of Canton ginger and let stand for twenty-four hours. Add 4 lemons, cut into thin slices, rejecting seeds. Cook slowly for 3 hours. Put into glasses or stone jars and cover with paraffin.

Apple Jelly.

Cut twelve pounds of Jonathan apples into quarters and core. Do not remove peeling. Put into preserving kettle and add 6 quarts water. Cover and boil gently for 20 minutes or until apples are soft. Drain off juice, straining through a heavy canton flannel bag. Boil rapidly for 5 minutes. Add 1½ cups of sugar to each pint of juice and boil quickly until two drops of hot jelly sheet from the spoon simultaneously or until a few drops will form a jelly on a cold plate. Pour into sterilized glasses and when cold cover with paraffin.

Candied Apples.

For each pound of quartered and pared apples [Jonathan, Grimes Golden or Ontario] allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar and a half pint of water. Boil sugar and water until a rich sirup is formed. Add apples and simmer until clear. Take up carefully, lay on plates and dry in the sun. Roll in sugar and pack in tin boxes lined with waxed paper.

The Hairpin Bend

By Ethel M. Dell

pose he's a right to do as he likes, and we're very happy as we are."

"Yes, of course. And daddy and I will have to go when he comes. I was forgetting that," said Ruth.

They were walking down the cliff drive to view the progress of the operations. He turned to her somewhat suddenly. "Why?" he said.

She glanced at him in surprise. "Well, he won't want two agents, will he?" she said.

"P'raps not," he said. "But—there's a way round that—as there is round most things. You don't want to go, do you?"

"Not specially," said Ruth. "But——"

He paused abruptly in his walk to light a cigaret. "I don't want you to go, either," he said then, with an odd vehemence. "I've never met anybody to work with like you. I wonder how you feel about it."

"I!" said Ruth, pausing also because she could not well go on. "Well, of course—I feel rather like that, too. Only—it's not much good, is it? He wouldn't keep us both."

"He might," said George. He stood with his face to the sea, gazing out through the trees to the far horizon. "I mean," his voice came rather jerkily; he was smoking also in jerks, "he couldn't object—to a married agent—could he?"

Strangely Moved

"O!" said Ruth. His meaning burst upon her with a suddenness that was rather overwhelming. She stood in blank silence by his side, as it were, awaiting developments.

He continued with the same jerky tenseness. "I don't know if there's any one else with you. There isn't with me, and never will be. You bowled me clean over that day—at the hairpin bend."

"A week ago!" she said in a low voice.

He turned towards her, and she saw that his face was strangely moved. "Yes, I know it's only that," he said, "but I've been wanting you the whole of my life. I've always known I should meet you some day—found a corner." He smiled, but his lips were quivering. "It's not like that with you, of course. It couldn't be. Only—you'll admit—we do pull well together, don't we? That ought to count for something."

He stopped. She had held out her hand to him but it was at arm's length. He took it with reverence.

"May I think about it, please?" said Ruth. "No, there isn't any one else—but—but——"

"You're not sure that I could qualify?" he suggested. "Won't you give me a chance to try? I'm not a bad sort—as men go."

She smiled at that, also not very steadily. "I know you're not. I like you very much. But—you are a little sudden, aren't you?"

He released her hand and looked depressed for the first time in their acquaintance. "I suppose I am as God made me," he said. "But I'm not offering you half my salary this time. I'm offering you—all I have in the world."

"O, I know," said Ruth. She drew nearer to him almost in spite of herself. "Please don't be miserable! I haven't said no."

"Not yet," he said. "But you will."

His eyes again looked out to sea, and her heart reproached her. There was dejection in his attitude.

"I don't know why you say that," she said. "I've only asked for time."

He did not stir. "Look here!" he said. "Suppose I were rich—suppose I were Lord Scarpe, for instance, and owned all this—would it make any difference?"

"But of course not!" she said with emphasis. "I'm not—that sort."

He turned upon her, and she saw the gay smile that so appealed to her flash back into his face. "All right—Ruth!" he said daringly. "You can take as long as you like. Come on! Let's go and look at the hairpin bend!"

His spirits from that moment had quite regained their usual high level, and she found it difficult to believe that their brief conversation at the top of the cliff had not been a dream. For his attitude was once more frank and friendly and wholly free from strain.

When they finally parted at the gate of her father's cottage garden he drove away with an airy wave of his hat that expressed the very essence of careless comradeship.

"He couldn't have been in earnest," she said to herself, but deep in her heart she knew that he had been. And, looking a little deeper still, she knew that she wanted him to be.

Diamonds in the Daytime

Her husband was only a greasy mechanic, and that went against her grain. So she left him and her babies for another man. . . . .

PERCY MARKS, author of "The Plastic Age," tells the story

Next Sunday

A Letter

In the morning a surprise awaited her in the form of a sealed letter, which she opened with considerable curiosity.

"Good gracious, daddy!" she said after a hasty glance at the signature. "It's from Lord Scarpe. Listen!"

"Dear Madam:

"I have learned from an authoritative source that, owing to the dangerous condition of the cliff drive on my estate you have been put to considerable personal risk as well as the inconvenience of losing your car, which, I understand, was not insured. Under these circumstances, and taking into consideration the fact that you and your father have in past years been of most valuable service to my predecessor, I desire to accept full responsibility for your loss. I shall be obliged, therefore, if you can make it convenient to meet me on the spot on which the accident occurred at 10 a. m. tomorrow, when I shall have much pleasure in making such reparation as lies in my power.

"Your obedient servant,

"SCARPE."

Ruth raised her eyes with a dazed expression. "Mr. George must have told him," she said. "O, daddy, he shouldn't have done it! What am I to do?"

"My dear, I don't see that you can do other than as he suggests," said Carey quietly. "I presume he writes from the castle?"

"Yes—yes, it was posted last night." Ruth began to look hunted. "O, but how wrong of Mr. George to make him think he was responsible! And how strange that he should have arrived without our hearing of it! Daddy, you must come, too."

But for once Duncan Carey refused to accept his daughter's decision. "No dear," he said. "I doubt if I could get there in time, and in any case I think it would be better for you to go without me. I am no longer in his employ, remember, and any sense of obligation which he may entertain is due to you alone."

She found she could not move him from this, and the time indicated in the letter was already drawing near. The idea of going in search of George to compel him to accompany her had also to be discarded. She might fail to find him, and in any case her feelings towards him were now so mixed that it seemed advisable to sort them before confronting him.

But undoubtedly annoyance was uppermost with her as she set forth in the hot June sunshine. He had gone too far. He ought not to have done this thing.

She came to the beach road whence she had set forth upon the adventure up the cliff a week before. Men had been at work on the bend half way up clearing and widening, but today as she started the ascent on foot she heard no sound but the lazy wash of the sea. She wondered a little, knowing that the work was not completed; then reflected that perhaps Lord Scarpe had put a stop to it. His unexpected return might complicate matters. Certainly her share at least was over. She realised with a pang that the pleasant partnership of the last few days was at an end and her annoyance flickered and died.

It was a hot climb, and her feet as she urged them upwards felt heavy and reluctant. Though she was too businesslike to be late, she had no wish to reach the corner, no desire whatever to make the acquaintance of the man who had summoned her thither. Why had he chosen the hairpin bend? It would surely have been far more gracious to have received her at the castle.

Cheery Effrontery

Wearily she toiled upwards and at last she neared the spot. Still no sound reached her. The place seemed deserted. Almost instinctively she regarded the work with a practical eye as she came to it. It had been carefully planned and was in process of being well executed. What fault had he found with it? A quiver of indignation assailed her. It was hard to see the work which she and the new agent had so energetically undertaken thus summarily arrested. She began to wish heartily that George were with her after all.

And then she reached the bend, turned it, and found him.

He was sitting on the step of a car awaiting her. It was not his usual car, but one so wholly the replica of her own lost property that she stared at it, almost believing it to be the same.

He rose to meet her, but though his face wore a smile it was of a somewhat doubtful quality.

She was the first to speak. "You can't have got her repaired!" she exclaimed incredulously.

"O, no!" he said, and his smile broadened. "She's brand new, as I said she would be—ready for you to hop into and drive straight up the hill and home. I've got her round all ready—as you see."

But Ruth still stood staring. "Where is—Lord Scarpe?" she asked slowly.

He made an airy gesture. "You'll find him at the castle."

She continued to stare at the new car. "So—that's what he meant!" she said. Then she looked at her companion. "I knew you would never get it out of your insurance."

He met her look with cheery effrontery. "Well, I got it, anyway. That's all that matters."

"It isn't!" said Ruth. "And I can't take it—possibly. You never ought to have done it! It wasn't Lord Scarpe's fault."

"But it was," he said.

"It wasn't!" she repeated in growing agitation. "He had nothing whatever to do with it, and I'm ashamed that he should have been bothered about it in any way. You'd better take the thing straight back to him and tell him so." She turned from him with a sweeping gesture of repudiation.

"O, I say!" he said. "Are you going to give me the sack, too?"

She kept her back to him, strangely possessed by an emotion which she hardly understood. "I don't know what you mean," she said. "But—it was very wrong of you."

He waited patiently behind her. "It's a bit hard," he said after a moment, "to be given the sack all round. And anyhow—I meant well."

"What do you mean?" she said.

"Just that," he returned. "Lord Scarpe has given me the sack, and he's going to offer the job—to you."

She turned swiftly. "Don't be absurd! What are you talking about? I'm sure that isn't true!"

"It is true," he asserted. "He thinks you know more about it than I do—which is also true. That's really what he wants to see you about. The car is only a sort of make-weight."

"And what are you going to do?" she demanded rather breathlessly.

He shrugged his shoulders. "O, I'm a scrap! I don't count."

"You're not!" she declared indignantly. "Do you think I'd do a thing like that?"

"I should if I were you," he said.

Nothing Else Matters

She gave him a scathing look. "I know what you would do if you were me," she said.

"Well, what?" he said.

She paused an instant; then: "You'd say 'Let's marry!'" she said with an odd little choking laugh.

He held out both hands to her. "And go into partnership! Well, is that what you are going to say?"

But she hung back, still half laughing. "What would you say if I did?"

He took her gently by the shoulders. "I should say—'Why don't you marry Lord Scarpe?'"

She retreated a little from his hold then as he checked her she stood and faced him, trembling slightly, but with growing assurance. "I don't know why you say that," she said. "I'm not in the least attracted by riches or position. Nor is he in the least likely to ask me."

He drew a long deep breath, then very quietly he set her free. "My dear," he said, "it's a damn shame I know, and you can call me—anything you like. He asked you—last night."

"What?" she said dumfounded.

He stood a moment, looking at her, his face oddly expressive of embarrassment and an uneasy sort of triumph. Then suddenly he began to laugh as he had laughed that day when her car had plunged to destruction and his had halted on the very verge.

"O, I say!" he protested. "Don't look so lost; It wasn't my fault. You did it all. You said I was George—the new agent."

"Yes, I know," she said, still gazing at him.

"Well," —with an effort he checked his laughter— "I hadn't the heart to contradict you. Besides, I rather liked the idea. It was so much jollier. But I was straight with your father. He knows. I say—do laugh if you can!"

"O!" Ruth said. "Daddy knows!"

He nodded, drawing a little nearer to her. "Yes. I told him the very day after. Are you very angry? Does it make any real difference? You said last night it wouldn't."

She looked up at him, and somehow her face caught a gleam of humor from his. She smiled; and then slowly he hands came out to him.

"It would have made—an enormous difference," she said, "if——"

"If what?" he said, gathering them up closely to his heart. "If I hadn't told your father?"

She lifted her face a little higher. Her smile had deepened; it said more than her words.

"No—no! Daddy didn't matter if I hadn't loved you," she said.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Holland now has 50 policewomen.

No fewer than six women are practicing law in Ireland.

Women in Germany are said to be less radical than men voters.

Miss Hazel Green of San Francisco, Cal., is the first woman to be assigned to a foreign post by the United States department of agriculture in the foreign trade bureau in Panama. Preliminary to her new work she traveled in Central America for three years, familiarizing herself with the customs and language of the people.

The oldest person in Ohio is Mrs. Susan P. Kennedy of New Lexington, who will celebrate her 105th birthday in September. She has no special rules set for longevity. She explains, however, that she drinks plenty of black coffee and has smoked a pipe since she was 17.

Mrs. Laura G. Fraser, famous sculptor of New York City, has been awarded more important commissions for medals than any other woman in the United States. Her latest work is a medal designed in commemoration of Col. Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic flight. She is the only woman who has ever been commissioned to do government coins.

Mrs. Harry Brown of Pittsburgh, Pa., was recently made an officer of the Legion of Honor of France, in recognition of her work in the world war. She is the first woman to be decorated at the Legion palace in France since the order was given the late Empress Eugenie.

Why This Marriage Delay?

By Doris Blake

Postponement—According to L. C. T.—Is Due Not to Indiscriminate Petting But Purely to the Economic Factor.

ATTEMPTING to explain the antagonism between the sexes, which was given as one of the reasons for marriage postponement, we hit upon petting—practiced as it is without discrimination—as a fruitful cause. While we still believe the reaction of both sides to indiscriminate petting parties is not a healthy one, still, we are willing to be convinced that it may be but one angle of the case.

Certainly the economic side of marriage cannot be left out of consideration. So, today, we give over our space to L. C. T., who offers a phase of male reasoning as to why single life is preferred to marriage:

"Dear Miss Blake: May I, as an habitual reader of your column, take issue with you upon a certain theory? There is a war of the sexes—no dispute about that. But I must take exception to the theory that petting has brought about this antagonism. Petting is an outlet, a sort of safety valve, for purely physical emotions. But this current of dissatisfaction is a psychological one.

"This warlike trend is noticed in men from the ages of 20 to about 28—in girls from 17 to 26. In other words antagonism sets in at the same time her youth begin to think of marriage. That makes it look as if there were something wrong with marriage, or, at the way that marriage is considered.

In a Normal World.

"If antagonism begins in young men at the age of 20 let us consider that youth a year or so before, when the seeds must have been sown. At 19 or 19 our youth is working at his first real job. He has not been out of school long — naturally his thoughts do not run to the wedded state as yet. But as a normal lad he has desires for social contact with girls of nearly his own age. In a normal world then we would find the boy of 19 and the girl of 17 thrown together. One all agiow with his adventure into the business world—the other with the bloom of womanhood beginning to appear, attaining her place in social life. It doesn't sound as if there would be much necking going on. But that would be a NORMAL world.

"Instead, in this abnormal world of ours we find the boy looking for social contact only to discover the girl going out with older men. Men who have established themselves in business, men to whom 'dates' are only minor luxuries—men who are interesting because they can teach some of those little playthings of love—such as petting. If the younger boy should stumble upon a date with this fast stepping miss he is expected to spend a like amount of money to show the girl the same sort of pleasures. It is not normal for him to desire petting, but he finds it expected of him because the older and more experienced man did it. When he goes out with girls who have not been with older men he still feels that it is expected.

"His social life becomes stunted. He cannot afford to keep up with the older men. Girls to him are prohibitive luxuries. The youth waits until he, too, can afford them. A few years later he discovers himself financially independent. He looks about to recover that social life he missed before. But the girl that was too expensive before is now considering marriage. The boy is not ready for marriage. He has yet to pass through that stabilizing social stage. The natural procedure then is to turn to younger girls. Even if he should consider marriage, there is the thought—'she was too expensive for me before, she would be too expensive for me now. How could I support her?' He scrupulously avoids all conversations of marriage, the girl wonders why.

One Man's Philosophy.

"A young man's philosophy as told to me by one of them: 'Why,' said he, 'should I marry? I can spend my evenings with working girls who are in touch with the world's affairs, who can converse intelligently upon many subjects, and above all—who try to make themselves at all times interesting.' He went on to say, 'If I marry, I am tied down to my job more or less. It would make it difficult to ever go into business for myself. As it is, I can change my work whenever I see a better opportunity, regardless of the immediate income. I can run my home without the help of in-laws and meddlesome neighbors. In fact, there is only one reason for marriage. That would be to have children. And that seems to have gone out of style!'

"I thought there was quite a bit of logic in that. Especially since he lives by himself in a well furnished four room apartment and drives a medium priced car. He has two bank accounts and is considering entering business for himself in a year or so. For a 25 year old boy I think he's done rather well. Yet he considers marriage too expensive. For he only earns $45 a week. The average girl insists upon at least $75. Could she—would she make his life any happier?

Petting Not the Cause.

"That is why I say that petting is not the cause of the 'war of the sexes.' But that marriage itself is! Or rather, the economic side of marriage. Until some wise economist changes the whole arrangement the antagonism will go on.

"Earning an equal amount of money, a girl can live a much richer life than a man. Her dinners and shows are paid for by men, her expensive fur coats are gifts of fond parents, all her pleasures come likewise. She has become accustomed to living high—without paying for it.

"Think of what that poor man is leading himself into when he contracts to take upon himself the expense of supporting her in the style to which she is accustomed. When he must pay alone what dozens paid before!

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print, address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Caught the Prize Winner

The northern Wisconsin resort at which I spent my vacation last year offered a prize for the largest bass to be caught in the lake during the summer. I had tried all my favorite lures during a week of intensive fishing, but to no avail. One night I dreamed that while canoeing at the far end of the lake I saw a large bass leap out of the water and then disappear with a loud kerplunk.

Inwardly ridiculing myself, I set out the next evening to fish the far end of the lake. There on my first cast I caught the prize winner, a four pounder. I. W.

Matrimonial Assistance.

While crossing the Pacific in 1912 I was reading a book in which the hero sees in a dream the girl he is to marry. He recognizes her later as the girl of his dreams, follows her and wins her. I ridiculed the book to some friends, saying that although the various incidents mentioned in the book were possible, they were most improbable, and therefore, in my opinion, the book was not well written.

That night I left the ship and took a train across Japan. While asleep I dreamed of seeing a man walking through the sleeper. Just then a voice said to me: "That is the man you will marry." The features of this man were indelibly impressed upon my memory.

In the years that followed I had several admirers, but none of them had the dark eyes and mustache of the man of my dream. I forgot this dream man. In 1928 I was married here in Chicago. A few months after, while going through my husband's old trunk, I found an old photograph of him taken about 1912, when he wore a mustache, and immediately I recognized the man I had seen in my dream. Judicial Interpretation.

One night while stopping at a hotel in Wisconsin I dreamed I was given a ticket for violating a traffic ordinance. What it was I couldn't find out and was much troubled.

The next morning when I went to my car there was a red ticket on the door telling me to appear at the police station. I had left my car out all night, which was a violation of city rules. My dream had come true. Fortunately the judge was lenient.

Warned in a Dream.

Some years ago we had a dog named Browne of which we were most fond. When he died we tied a blue ribbon abound his neck, placed him in a basket, spread a white cloth over him, and had two men take him away.

Some months after that I dreamed I saw Brownie in my bedroom barking furiously about something. I thought he looked nice with his blue ribbon on and wondered what he was excited about.

I dreamed that he crawled under the bed and by arching his back bumped the springs and I awoke.

I did not get up at the time, but in the morning opened the kitchen door and found the room filled with gas. I had touched the gas jet, which was loose, when turning out the electric light and did not know the gas was escaping until the morning and for that reason friend dog came back to warn me in my dream. THE BIGGEST LIAR

Who was the biggest liar you ever knew, and what yarn did he tell? If you want to see him in print, address Biggest Liar editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Careless Mr. Weasel.

A man, old now, but one who has had many dramatic experiences in his day, tells this story of a hunting trip of his boyhood.

"I'd tramped all day. Hadn't seen a thing. I was plumb tired out carryin' my father's old musket around so I set down on a log to rest. Little log, it was, not more than a foot through and about eight feet long. I hadn't set there more'n a minute when I heard a scratchin' and a scramblin' in the log. I kept watch of the end and pretty soon a weasel popped his head out. I pulled up my gun and he dodged back. First thing I knew I heard a noise at the other end of the log and there he was peekin' at me over there. So I pulled on him, but he was gone quicker'n a wink.

"I switched the gun to the other end of the log and waited for him. But did he peek out there? No, sir! He kept dodgin' in and out the end behind my back. So I turned round and held the gun on that end. Then I'd hear him scratching at the other end. Well, sir, I switched back and forth there for some time but that weasel was too slick for me every time.

"By 'n by I got my dander up, told Mr. Weasel I could stay there just as long as he could. So there I stayed, a-switchin' back and forth, allus just one move behind the varmint, until along towards dark when he' began to grow tired and careless. Yes, sir, downright careless. I was watchin' him mighty close, all of a sudden he stuck his head out of both ends of that log at once, and then I jing, I got him." C.

Child Takes First Place.

It was shortly after THE TRIBUNE had published an account of some penniless beggars when, late one night, a dirty boy of eleven or so asked me for carfare, I only had 3 cents" in a whining voice. He didn't get it, but I waited, and when the trolley finally stopped (they don't run frequently on the far south side late at night) he beat me on it, paying the full fare!

No, he hadn't "touched" any one else. A little child certainly led all the liars I've ever known. P. L. A.

Spaniards Have Many Problems and No Worries

Major Issues? Who Cares, and What of It?

In a series of articles published last summer Mr. Allen of The Tribune foreign staff discussed political and economic problems confronting present-day Spain. In this new series, of which the following is the first, he takes up other aspects of that ancient and romantic country.

By Jay Allen.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SEVILLE, Spain.—[Special Correspondence.]—That the Andalusian beauties with the dark and liquid eyes ride now in American autos really makes so little difference. But the earnest questers for romance are sick about it. "We come too late," they mourn, and their distress is affecting to see.

Especially as one knows that life in Seville is still something unique. And essentially what it has always been, a pleasant confusion of languors and subtle excitements, relieved just often enough by the mystic outbursts of Easter week and other quasi-religious jamborees of the year. If it had ever been more so, people couldn't have stood it.

But the handbook of romantic values which tourists bring abroad hasn't yet admitted the automobile, which seems strange when you consider that it is one of our leading exports. And when any but a fugitive and wounded soul from Detroit can see for himself that it is servant rather than master here in Seville.

Donkeys snap back their ears and laugh outright at it. There are a hundred streets in Seville so narrow that it can't penetrate. And certainly the aforementioned beauties are just as alarming as they ever were when they rode to the bull ring in shining carriages behind sleek mules.

* *

The Spice of Danger.

You don't find any Sevillanos mourning the passing of the good old days and however badly the tourists may feel about it, they know that the automobiles and street cars which careen through curving streets really add a new thrill, the spice of danger, to their lives.

Of late a silver shadow passed in the sky behind the Giralda tower and moved on across the saffron Quadalquiver to the new airport, where a mooring mast is being completed even now.

There may be more Graf Zeppelins and more planes like the broad-winged Juan del Gran Poder, and Seville may again become Europe's gateway to the Americas. It is probable that traffic tangles in the pellucid Andalusian sky may work some change on life here, but at this writing the heavens are innocent of any such threat. The old Quadalquiver, which has seen Phoenecian and Roman galleys, the lean craft of the Arab, and the high, carved galleons, today nurtures a rather scrubby traffic, but she is still Seville's only port worthy of the name.

Auto horns penetrate lush patios and deep into the shadows of old palaces, the lordliest of Spain, where grandees used to sit and pray and twiddle their thumbs awaiting the galleons, but they carry no threat of change. You hear that the business men of Seville, traditionally the stronghold of monarchy in Spain, are turning Republican, but it is a quiet and conservative kind of republicanism, and the great estates scattered over the plains of Andalusia seem in no danger yet.

Before altars heavy with gold and saints bright with jewels that were saved as ransom for souls from the eagerly awaited freight of the galleons, prayers are as fervent as they ever were.

In humble San Gil this morning the gracious, doll-like Virgen de la Macarena, as plump in her modern dress, seemed still to be dispensing favors. An amply moulded beauty with splendid earrings, a rose in her hair, and no shoes, knelt and seemed to coquet with her for something earnestly desired but obviously not very serious. Maybe a permanent wave.

* *

No Carmens There.

The girls in the cigaret factory have got no slimmer nor any younger, but, then, one knows, or should know, that Carmen and Concha Peres never existed outside the imaginings of a couple of incurable French romanticists and their cult. The angel over the gate with the horn to his lips which, they say, he will blow whenever a virtuous wench passes in or even out, still stands in pleased, perhaps not overly expectant, silence.

Of course, Señor Otero of the Spanish dancing academy wrings his hands over the changing times and each new jazz step. But he has been doing this since the days of the waltz and the polka and, one can't help but notice, still keeps alive by giving lessons to the little Argentinas of tomorrow.

In the Calle de las Sierpas, too narrow ever to know a gas buggy and denied to any kind of traffic, business is still conducted with civilized restraint. So well that you hardly notice it. There are so many other things to notice as you sprawl in a chair on one of the café terraces which elbow each other here. For instance: That the awnings stretched pleasantly over the street from housetop to housetop tint the rays of the late afternoon sun, but do not strain out much heat; that a great many men wear the short bolero; tight fitting breeches, and the soft, gray sombrero, and that the sway backed women of Andalusia are still up to their old tricks. Undulating instead of walking. An achievement which continues to excite the wonder of males on café terraces—too languid, however, to rise to the chase in this heat.

"Now, there's one thing you can be sure of," says an agreeable Spaniard from behind a tall and cloudy glass, "that our varieties are only

Civic Schedule Refutes Claim That Opera's on Road to Death

By Edward Moore.

MARY GARDEN'S name is not on the list of immediate operatic prospects, even of those extending to the end of the second week. Wherefore the Chicago public will have to wait until the chorus of enraptured reporters can meet her face to face and ask her about the true inwardness of her telegraphed interview on landing to the effect that opera is on the way to its death.

In all justice to herself, Miss Garden should have made a few exceptions. Memories going back two decades will testify that the operas in which she has appeared personally are about as far from being dead as could be imagined of any form of art, whatever they may have been when other artists took them up.

At any rate, the Civic Opera company would seem to disagree completely with her in theory as well as practice. Take a glance at the present week's schedule. It calls for two operas that were given last week, five that were not, one debut, two artists reviving rôles that they have not sung for three years, and the whole in a judicious blend of the Italian, French, and German languages.

* *

New This Session.

The new works, new for this season, that is, are "L'Amore del Tre Re," "Norma," "Fidelio," "Lohengrin," and the justly famous operatic twins, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." It is with the twins that the revival of rôles and the single debut are concerned. Claudia Muzio is to appear as Santuzza in the first and Charles Marshall as Canio in the second, the first time, so the press department says, that they have done these parts in three seasons. And John Charles Thomas will make his operatic bow to Chicago in the second. He was known here years ago in light opera, later as a recital artist of wide and varied répertoire. Recently he has been singing grand opera in Europe. As Tonio in "Pagliacci" he will extend another phase of his musical development to the public here.

Miss Muzio is singing her first Fiora in "L'Amore del Tre Re" to a Chicago audience this afternoon. Knowing the part, knowing her voice and her marked abilities as an artist of the operatic stage, the performance in advance would seem to mean something quite out of the ordinary, and this is said with bright memories of some of the great Fioras beheld here and elsewhere. One thing can be promised with a good deal of confidence. Miss Muzio's Fiora will not be a copy of any other Fiora ever presented since the work was first put out. None of her rôles are ever copies of any other artist's. She has an inspiring habit of constructing her own.

* *

"Fidelio" Heard Again.

And "Fidelio" put itself successfully into the public ear last season after some thirty-five years of silence. There may have been some who went to the Civic Opera house expecting to hear Beethoven in the mood of his symphonies or his later string quartets. If so, they were disappointed. They should not have thought so, anyway, considering the time of his life when Beethoven wrote the score. What they heard was something almost Mozartean in the clarity and loveliness of its melodies.

Presumably the overtures will be managed as they were last year, the "Fidelio" as a prelude to the work, the "Leonore No. 3" as an entr'acte. Frida Leider and René Maison will be the pair of married lovers whose conjugal woes make the story of the piece; Kathleen Kersting, who made an agreeable debut in the opera, will again be the Marzelline; Hans Hermann Nissen, now in his first season with the company, will appear, likewise Alexander Kipnis and Edouard Cotreuil.

"Lohengrin" will have Mr. Maison,

THE end of the battle for the voters' favor comes the fore part of the week, but the battle for the theatergoers' favor takes on renewed activity, with no less than five new "legitimate" attractions opening up in Chicago. "Mendel, Inc.," with Helen Dodge, is coming to the Adelphi; "The Last Mile," with Spencer Tracy, to the Harris; "Death Takes a Holiday," with Philip Merivale, to the Princess; "Sons o' Guns," with Gina Malo, to the Grand Opera house, and "Lysistrata," with Mrs. Charles Coburn, to the Majestic.

For the movie fans, there are "A Devil with Women," with Victor McLaglen and Mona Maris, at the Monroe; "The Cat Creeps," with Helen Twelvetrees, Raymond Hackett, and Neil Hamilton, at the Palace; "Dich Hab' Ich Geliebt" (Because I Loved You), with Mady Christians, at the Punch and Judy, and "Renegades," with Noah Beery and Warner Baxter, at the Chicago.

THE BIG TRAIL [4 stars].
THE LADY SURRENDERS [3 stars].
THE SANTA FE TRAIL [3 stars].
AMOS 'N' ANDY [3 stars].
OLD ENGLISH [3 stars].
LAUGHTER [3 stars].

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Well, d'you like the six I've picked for this first of the month party?

"THE BIG TRAIL" I adored, and raved of it thus, in the original review: "What a long, long trail that WAS, awinding to the land of the pioneers' dreams! And how admirably Raoul Walsh in 'The Big Trail' has caught the spirit that inspired the treks of our ancestors and impelled their covered wagons over the peril and hardship infested prairies and mountains of early days! Here is a picture to reckon with! A picture to thrill the soul, delight the eye, and give a fillip to the patriotism of the most cavilling observer . . . ! Will 'westerns' ever become unpopular? . . . Not as long as there are men like Mr. Walsh to make 'westerns' like 'The Big Trail.'"

* *

"THE LADY SURRENDERS," adapted from John Erskine's novel "Sincerity," doesn't follow the original very closely, but proves a case where an unfaithful adaptation is mighty alluring. Even the title pleases—and that, I rise to remark, is saying something. . . . Less expertly acted, less cunningly directed, less tastefully staged, the cinema version might have been disappointing. But, as it stands, fortified by Mr. Erskine's idea and sparkling, trenchant dualogue, "A Lady Surrenders" is a screen cream. . . . Perhaps the sincerest compliment I can pay the picture is to say that, while it is a long one, it seems short.

Broadway Goes Soulful When Weird Drama Puzzles Addicts

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The local drama went soulful this week, thereby puzzling Broadway followers and giving temporary comfort to those to whom soul problems in the theater are manna for the metaphysicians. The soul study is called "This One Man." It was written by a comparatively youthful dramatist named Sidney R. Buchman. It is his first play and was produced originally in Los Angeles as "The Man Saul." Its chief actor is the Paul Muni of the movies who used to be Muni Weisenfreund of the Yiddish theater.

The combination of Mr. Muni and "This One Man," I may also tell you, offers the most interesting adventure with the serious drama that this season has presented. You have heard of two souls with but a single thought. This is a play about two humans with but a single soul between them. It poses the fascinating mystery of the Holland brothers, Saul and Marvin. Saul is a physically perfect human with no more heart than a stone. Marvin is a physical weakling, tender hearted, sensitive, fine in character, noble in motive, whose very fineness has disgusted both Saul and their mother.

* *

Marvin's Problem.

Saul, the hero of the piece—"King Saul," mother calls him—grows up to be a gangster; hard, cruel, vicious. Marvin, sharing the family idolatry of his brother, acquires the conviction that he is carrying the heart and soul that should have been the spiritual heritage of Saul. Saul marries, but it is really Marvin who loves his wife.

Neither he nor Saul is a complete man, reasons Marvin. Therefore, some way must be found by which he can fade from the scene and, in fading, transfer the good that is in him to Saul.

The mother dies. Saul, released from prison to visit her deathbed, escapes his guards and returns to his gang. Marvin, always at his heels, uncannily aware of all his plans, insistent that he [Saul] shall become a decent member of society, so befuddles the bad one that he bungles a safe cracking job, commits a murder and is caught.

Caught with him is the ghostlike Marvin, now demanding that he be permitted to assume the crime and pay the penalty. In that way will his wish be fulfilled. Saul, mystified and fearful of the strange things that are happening to him, fights against Marvin's sacrifice. He wants nothing to do with a good soul.

Marvin goes to the chair and in the sweep of sorrow and compassion that engulfs Saul a new man is born. He flings himself on his prison cot and for the first time in his life is shaken with sobs of pity.

Afraid to Laugh.

Broadway's first audience wanted to laugh at "This One Man," but did not dare. For all its fantastic mystery the play wields something of the fascination of the supernatural over its audience. If it can reach the public that supported "Death Takes a Holiday" and "Berkeley Square" last season, it should do well for a time.

Mr. Muni's performance is a perfect study of the hard and mystified gangster. Paul Guilfoyle draws much that is fine from the ghostly Marvin. Constance McKay plays Saul's wife sympathetically.

When a play has but four characters they have to be extremely interesting characters or tell an absorbing story to escape dull entertainment. The four characters in Frederick Lonsdale's "Canaries Sometimes Sing" are not particularly interesting and tell practically no story at all. Ergo, they are not likely to be with us long.

Mr. Lonsdale is one of the popular

Leiber Starts Second Season; Guild's Revue

Postscripts to First Nights Grave and Gay.

By Charles Collins.

A SHAKESPEAREAN repertory which changes its bill for every performance and gives seven plays a week is a serious problem for a theatrical reviewer. One cannot keep pace with it without abandoning everything else in town and buckling down to the classic treadmill as if on an arduous pilgrimage to Stratford-upon-Avon.

So this morning Fritz Leiber, the torchbearer at the Civic, is exactly six plays ahead of me; and if the new shows continue to pour into Chicago at the present rate I am afraid that at the end of his eight weeks Mr. Leiber will still be leading me by several laps. This man is a veritable athlete of the drama.

I am curious to know how Ingeborg Torrup is doing as Portia; what sort of a Viola is Mary Hone; if Maxine Elliott is a seductive Olivia, and whether or not Virginia Bronson rises to the dark deviltment of Lady Macbeth. For the story of the improvement of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society's company [if any] rests with its feminine wing. The men are about the same, in capability, as before, if the stalwart Tyrone Power, who dropped out in midseason last winter after a noble start, is not figured into the equation.

My impressions of "Hamlet" were that the personnel of the enterprise is about on a par with that of the first season. I had counted on an enrichment of the acting talent; in fact, I was inclined to demand it. I found a performance that ran along on last year's level except in the rôle of the Ghost, where Mr. Powers' magnificently sepulchral voice was missed. That is to say, a bread and butter "Hamlet"—good enough, perhaps, for a generation which has been starved of Shakespeare, but not good enough to qualify as a symptom of a classic renaissance.

In such cases the appropriate word of consolation is: "Well, anyway it's Shakespeare, and therefore worthy." Which nobody can deny. But the Swan of Avon cannot live upon the adjective "civic" alone. Great literature demands great acting—and also, in this period, resourceful, art minded stage direction . . . Well, we shall see, later on, whether or not the Leiberians are progressing.

Juniors of the Guild.

The Theater Guild sent its "Garrick Gayeties" to the Blackstone in an experimental mood. The well known vicissitudes of the show business compelled an interruption of the Guild's program of drama for its organized audience, and this revue, a by-product of its activities, was dispatched here to fill the gap.

The experiment has justified itself. There have been no sharp outcries of annoyance from the subscribers who have thus been compelled to wait three weeks for a glimpse of Turgenev's "A Month in the Country," and so far as these "Gayeties" are concerned, the ayes have it. Playgoers who speak in awed voices of the good old days when "The Little Show" and "Charlot's Revue" were the vogue do not need to shun "The Garrick Gayeties." It's a clever and friendly frolic, knowingly staged and briskly performed.

The program begins with Bernard Shaw—or a young man wears his notable whiskers—succumbing to the temptations of jazz, and twenty-four numbers later it ends with a mellow burlesque of wild western romance called "Rose of Arizona." In between there all sorts of skits and jingles and frenzies, alert with topical humor and and educated point of view. The show has a charming spirit of youth—of young and ambitious professionalism, eager to show its elders in the art of entertainment what the coming generation can do. And its girls—the important element in any revue—are captivating.

Libby Holman came out of the first "Garrick Gayeties," and you know where she stands now. [Incidentally, this pastime takes a good natured shot at Miss Holman and Helen Morgan and the other "torch singers" in a number called "There Ain't No Love."] Libby went right up the ladder after the Guild gave her a chance. And you may count upon the future of the three muses of this production—Rosalind Russell, Doris Vinton, and Imogene Coca. Rosalind is a winsome romp; Doris is a merry singing and dancing girl, and Imogene is a wide eyed and quaint little beauty. They'll get along.

An Italian Fantasy.

When "Death Takes a Holiday" has its premiere at the Princess tomorrow night, as the second play on the program of the Dramatic league, it will introduce a dramatist whose signature is new to Chicago audiences. His name, Alberto Casella, should not be confused with that of Alfredo Casella, an Italian composer whose works are occasionally played by Mr. Stock's orchestra.

The author of "Death Takes a Holiday" is just an Italian lawyer, a native of Prato, who happened to write a play. Many a Chicago lawyer has done the same thing—but without so much luck. Casella's first piece of play writing won immediate success, achieved international recognition, and is now a standard work in the repertory of every playhouse in Italy.

When "Death Takes a Holiday" was first staged, it was attacked by Italian critics for being in "two keys"—that is to say, they thought that the blend of the supernatural and the real was not according to the rules of the literary game. To which Signor Casella gave answer:

"My comedy is grandiose, because it deals with the impossible. If the tale were possible, it could proceed only according to human hypothesis, arriving at a conflict between Love and Death. So, as a fantastic comedy, I must write in the terms of the natural and the supernatural—of this here and the beyond—in opposition."

All of which, stripped of its Italian rhetoric, merely means that he wrote

Mr. Nissen and Mr. Kipnis, likewise Lotte Lehmann and Maria Olszewska, which looks like good casting. And Miss Raisa is due to repeat her gorgeous Norma tomorrow night. So all's well with the opera company, whatever may be the development of screened figures and the mechanical reproduction of music.

Music Notes.

The Advertising Men's Post Glee club has begun rehearsals for its fourth season under the direction of William G. Pohlmann. The soloists will be George Smith, baritone, and William G. Pohlmann, tenor.

The Kinsolving Musical Mornings will begin a new series at the Blackstone hotel Thursday, Nov. 6, with a song recital by Heinrich Schlusnus, baritone. Later items include Jascha Heifetz, violinist, Nov. 20; Madeleine Grey in folk songs, and Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson upon two pianos, Dec. 11; Florence Austral, soprano, and John Amadio, flutist, Dec. 30; and Mario Chamlee, tenor, and Joseph Szigeti, violinist, Jan. 8.

Mr. Stock is presenting five compositions hitherto unheard in Chicago on the Friday and Saturday orchestral concerts of this week. Walton's "Portsmouth Point" overture has been heard before, and Schubert's tenth symphony is a standard, but the new pieces include two by Frederick Delius, "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring" and "Summer Night on the River"; two by one Braina, whose name is not in the "Modern Dictionary of Music and Musicians," the preludo to the third act of "Virginia" and "S. O. S." and Gruenberg's symphonic poem, "Enchanted Isle." At the time of writing, nothing is known of these works except their names.

The first of the young people's concerts will be played on Thursday afternoon, and is intended for children of the elementary schools. Two weeks thereafter almost the same program will be played, but being planned for the high schools, its treatment will be different. Wagner's "Tannhäuser" march, Saint-Saëns' "Danse Macabre," Pierné's "March of the Little Fauns," Strauss' "Bat" waltz, and Nicolai's "Merry Wives of Windsor" overture are on the list.

There ought to be some excited conversation at the Playhouse tomorrow afternoon when Hans Barth appears under the auspices of the Musicians Club of Women. He is not only a harpsichordist and pianist, but has invented a piano that plays in quarter-tones and has written some music for it. The first part of his program is ancient harpsichord music; the second, piano works by himself, Brahms, and Chopin; the third, quarter-tone pieces by himself and Gershwin. Thus is the musical background broadened.

Word of two scholarships has reached this desk. The first amounts to $200 for instruction to a young singer between 18 and 22 years of age by Louis St. John Westervelt, and offered by the Junior Friends of Art. Hearings will be held at the Columbia School of Music Wednesday, Dec. 3, at 4:30 o'clock.

The second is for dancing tuition at the Bella Bender Ballet school, offered to girls between 14 and 20 by the Delta Omega Tau sorority. It is for one year with an option of a second if the pupil proves worthy. Delta Omega Tau headquarters, telephone Webster 3295, will answer questions.

Of Jascha Heifetz, who will work his marvels with the violin at Orchestra hall this afternoon, the following salient facts are offered: He made his first appearance as a child prodigy at the age of 9, twenty years ago; he is the owner of $100,000 worth of violins [two of them]; he likes the movies and would travel miles to see a Chaplin comedy; he once made a hole in one and gave up golf forever; he once opened a safe by listening to the fall of the plungers and gave up safe opening forever; he plays with a fetish Ceylon ring hung about his neck; he has not reached the top of his art, he says, also adding that his daughter shall never be a violin artist.

In addition, he will play "The Lark," by Castelnuovo-Tedesco; Bruch's Scottish Fantasy, a Romance by Leopold Auer, his former master, played to that artist's memory; some short pieces including an arrangement of his own, and Ravel's "Tzigane."

Another thumb-nail sketch, this time of Leo Podolsky, pianist, at the Playhouse this afternoon, classifies as further publicity. This is it:

"Leo Podolsky has made 162 appearances in twelve months in Java and Sumatra and the orient; a trip of 10,000 miles across Russia and Siberia —from Odessa on the Black sea to Vladivostok—in one month, giving concerts all along the way and achieving a record of maximum traveling and maximum concerts in thirty days [dressing mostly in trains for the concert and changing in the station after the concert, while awaiting trains to go farther]; a round world trip in four and one-half months, playing forty concerts in fifty-one days; winner of Rubinstein and Liszt prizes at the Vienna Imperial Academy of Music; piano recitals in New York, Berlin, Tokio, Moscow, Paris, Chicago, Amsterdam, Bombay, Petrograd, Singapore, Boston, Shanghai; playing in temperatures of 100 above zero and 100 below zero."

HERE are two members of the Chicago Civic Opera company, perhaps classifying as junior in point of years, but in both cases with distinct talents. They joined the company at the same time two seasons ago, and they are both in the week's billing, though not in the same cast. Miss Burke, soprano, will appear as Nedda in "Pagliacci," Thursday night, to the Canio of Charles Marshall and the debut performance of Tonio by John Charles Thomas. Miss Glade, mezzo-soprano, will sing the part of Adalgisa in "Norma" tomorrow night, at which time Rosa Raisa will appear in the name part.

Drama with Soul Problem Hits Broadway

First Play of Young Writer Tackles Weird Theme.

By Burns Mantle.

playboys of both London and New York. He writes observingly of the domestic scene, usually in its more troubled aspects. His gift is for bright dialogue and amusing character sidelights. But success has made him careless.

His canaries that sometimes sing in this play are four mismated husbands and wives. Geoffrey Lymes, a playwright, finds himself locked in a cage with Anne, who is a terrific poseur and a stalker of genius in the social forests. Geoffrey would like to be out of it all, but doesn't know how to get out.

* *

An Eventful Week-End.

Invited to visit the Lymes over the week-end are Ernest and Elma Melton. Ernest is a gentleman. Elma was a showgirl. Ernest worries himself white with chagrin because Elma refuses to curb her vivacity, and Elma, who would like to be mischievous in a big way, resents Ernest's attitude.

No sooner are the four together than each husband looks on the other's wife interestedly, if not covetously. And each wife sees in the husband denied her most of those qualities she misses in her own. Out of which grows a sort of understanding that trades shall be effected.

Another two weeks, however, and they are not so sure. The husbands, in particular, are in doubt. So a compromise is effected. There shall be no more than one divorce. Geoffrey will let Anne go her favorite ways and, when he is free, he will go to live with the Meltons as a paying guest—an arrangement that comforts both Geoffrey and Elma.

Not much here to build three acts on, as you may see. The smart crowd that takes its entertainment lightly and does not care much what it costs so long as they can appear well informed theatrically at their dinner tables, may keep "Canaries" chirping for a few weeks. Robert Loraine and Yvonne Arnald, who was over for "And So to Bed" a year ago, head the cast.

* *

Comedy with an Idea.

Another English comedy that no one is going to miss much is called "London Calling." At least it is English to the extent of having been written by Geoffrey Kerr. Geoffrey is English in everything except his wife. He married her in this country, she being June Walker.

"London Calling," produced by the usually more knowing John Golden, is also blessed with an idea. An American woman, meeting an Englishman on shipboard, marries him and goes to London to live. Disappointed that her first born becomes an English citizen automatically, when she is to have a second child she returns to America in the nick of time. Thereafter she decides to stay in America. As a result one of her sons is English and lives with father, and the other is American and lives with mother.

In the play the English boy comes over to visit and discovers shortly that he is quite American enough to fall in love with a native gold digger and to sell bonds to the Warburgs. As the American brother is also in love with the same gold digger, there is a minor complication.

In the end both boys decide that their own affection for each other is much more important than their love for the girl, so they ditch her and go out arm in arm, searching for cocktails and a party. Mother, meantime having taken a liking to her English son, grows sentimentally curious about his father. It is she who hears London calling as the play finishes.

Young Mr. Kerr plays his own English lad agreeably. Charlie Lawrence is the American son, Anne Sutherland the mother, and Helen Flint the gold digger. A good cast with little to work on.

Nitwit and the Barber.

When the town nitwit entered a barber shop one day the barber asked him: "Where were you, Johnnie?" "Out to the cemetery," answered Johnnie.

"Who is dead out there?" asked the barber.

"Everybody," answered Johnnie.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

PINEX for Coughs

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN CHICAGO.

SUCH a week as this Armchair Playgoers have rarely had in Chicago. There are four openings which they may take themselves to vicariously if they like, besides a week of Shakespeare in which is offered one play not on last week's bill —"Richard the Third."

GILBERT SELDES. [Pinchot Photo.]

"Mendel, Inc.," opens on Sunday evening. It is the dramatization of the novel which tells the amusing and touching story of the old boy who would not work and whose wife, because he was just naturally born lazy, figured out that the family would be better off if she went out to business and left him at home to keep house, and how, to save himself labor, he invented a cleaner which brought them all fortune. It's in the popular "Jewisher" dialect and spirit. It was not nearly so popular as a novel as it has been as a play.

"Death Takes a Holiday," which opens on Monday night, is by Walter Ferris and has been published by Samuel French. It was one of the most popular of the season last year in New York. It has a novel fundamental idea—Death taking a holiday for three days and going about among humans. He falls in love with a beautiful girl and through her he finds out why mortals fear him as they do. The title page of the play says that it is "based on a play of the same title by Alberto Casella," which means that the Italian play has been adapted.

And speaking of adaptations, there opens on Tuesday night Aristophanes' "Lysistrata," which has been translated and brought up to the minute by Gilbert Seldes to such an extent that it is really an adaptation. A Greek scholar who has seen it produced says that, although the translation is not literal, the effect upon the audience in New York was exactly the effect that the play must have had upon the audiences of Athens some time over twenty-five hundred years ago. Mr. Seldes has put it into colloquial English which exactly interprets the colloquial Greek in which it was written.

Walter Prichard Eaton, talking about it the other night, said that it was a play on two fundamental and primitive passions, man's desire to fight and the desire of man and woman for each other. "In other words," he said, "nobody is ever fearful of 'Lysistrata' not being a success. It is a good, thorough, bawdy play." He was chided about the pronunciation which is used in this production—LysisTRAta—which is against all rules of Greek pronunciation. LysiSTrata is correct and it is characteristic of American producers that they would dare change a classic pronunciation because the proper one makes hissing sounds. However, Mr. Eaton treated the matter very lightly. "It isn't how a play is pronounced, but how it is produced that counts," he said.

Gilbert Seldes and his brother made the translation which was used as a libretto for the production which the Moscow Art Theater Musical studio did here a few years ago, but this version is said to be a new one. Laurence Houseman once did a translation and adaptation which gave the lord chamberlain a very bad quarter of an hour, as the French say, before he licensed its production in London in 1912. When the Woman's Political union produced it in New York the year before the war the audience gasped. Last year they only roared. "Lysistrata" in the Seldes translation is published by Farrar and Rinehart.

The fourth of the openings of the week that you may be present at is "The Last Mile" [which opens on Monday]. It is published by Samuel French. It is, as you know, a play whose first scene is the death house of a prison twelve hours preceding electrocution.

AN AMERICAN IN SPAIN

By Jay Allen.

troubled by our complexities." No disputing that.

* * *

Geographical Absurdity.

Take the geography. For a country to have a geography like Spain's is in itself an absurdity. The Pyrenees cut her off from Europe. The narrow sea water to the south prevents her from being actually Africa. A greater barrier in past ages than oceans. Gibraltar, where England sits, and Tangiers, internationalized, are monuments to the chance she neglected to become the first African power.

She is plateau barren and raw, thrust up 2,000 feet into hard, high sky. She is coastal fringe that varies in aspect from Norway to Palestine. She is desert and luxuriant garden.

And the people who inhabit her. Basic racial elements in common, no doubt; but so have the Scotch and Irish. The Portuguese, on the Atlantic slope of the peninsula, not even a part of the nation. The Catalans, on the other side, not wanting to be, or pretending as much. The Basques, in the north, nurturing a regional movement of their own with a fine name, Biskaitarrism, and the Gallegans, in the northwest, another.

More important than political ambitions is the variety of characters and tradition which they bring to the bright mixture known as Spain.

The Basques are only 600,000 in number, but they are so important in Spanish life that you would think them millions. They speak a mysterious language that has more than ill dialects and affinities with Dacotan, Aztec, Sanskrit, and maybe others—but none easy. They cling to ancient rights called fueros. Fiscal autonomy is one of them.

Said a king slyly to a Basque: "Would it be against any of your fueros to give me a light?"

* * *

Wealth and Socialism.

In their inaccessible ravines by the Bay of Biscay they live lives almost Swiss in prosperity, cleanliness, and independence; they have a saying that it is better to be the head of a mouse than the tail of a lion. Carlism still lurks in the Basque hills, as through all the mountainous north, and bishops can still use it frighten the court from liberal reforms. In Bilbao there is wealth, in Jesuit hands often, and socialism. Zuloaga, the painter, Pio Baroja, the novelist, and Unamuno, the philosopher, are Basques.

The Asturian in the hills west of the Basque is stiff necked, but broken to the Castilian tradition. All hidalgos, they say. Hidalgo means "son of somebody," which, taken literally, is hard to dispute.

Farther on the Gallegan. In white villages that cling to precipitate pine slopes. Gaunt pigs tall as ponies roll naked babies off doorsills.

Sometimes, traveling a tortuous road through a misty valley, you hear a weird, unearthly cry ending in a savage whoop, something that might have risen over a Druidic sacrifice and gone echoing ever since through these gray green hills.

Just a Gallego coming around a bend in an oxcart which a Roman would have scorned. He has been easing his primitive soul with the atruxa, the old Celtic war cry. His hills are sanctified with the dust of many saints. James the greatest, but he leaves the axles of his cart ungreased, to frighten away spirits there long before the saints. In Brittany and Ireland his brother Celts know this trick. Round headed, hazel eyed, mild, industrious, the Gallego bends hopelessly over his destitute soil, goes south to reap, or away altogether.

Short and Roundish.

The Aragonese lives on the rock and clay slopes of the Pyrenees and the valley of the Ebro. He is short and looks roundish in his leather pants with woolen drawers protruding, the woolen leggings and the six yards of sash around his waist. His hair is often red and his eyes blue. With his long head, he says, he can drive nails, and the four marshals of Napoleon who took two months to reduce Saragossa in 1808 probably thought the same.

With his muscular women in their high bodiced homespun dresses he dances the jota. The steps are gay and free to a happy clatter of castanets. They belie the stiff and turbulent character of this people that entered the initial combination with Ferdinand.

The Valencian down by the Mediterranean coast speaks a language of his own. Like Catalan. Not enough like it for them to make common cause politically. But sufficiently for recent exchange of letters in their exotic tongues between the local authorities of Barcelona and Valencia when it was a question of annoying the Castilian.

Like the Catalan, the Valencian looks out. He is cut off from Madrid by the Iberian range, which the railroad has to skirt, doubling its time. He really likes everybody, though, bringing to this Spanish mixture a character like the Andalusian, easy going, fervent, juicy.

For he lives on the edge of this smiling Andalusia, where Jew and Arab reached their highest development; where El Andalus, with much of both, lives today in passionate indolence, happy, relishing even his deep sense of the tragedy of life.

In the center of it all Castile, the lofty meseta that is half of Spain, hemmed around by mountains and rivers into a true citadel.

The silent peasant of Old Castile, sunburnt, frostbitten, lives under his peaked sombrero close to the soil and his saints. You need saints in such hostile surroundings, more than in cities, where you can regulate temperatures and have doctors to alleviate tribulations like toothache and childbirth. Saints he look to, but no man. No man is his better.

Out of Old Castile came the will for unity which, being unilateral, gave rise to the compulsions which to this day have not prevailed. At Medina del Campo you can see the castle where Isabella the Catholic came of the idea that has obsessed her successors.

On the flat plain roundabout they raise the neat little bulls, with the horns close together, which many toreros prefer to the wide pronged monsters from the fields by the Guadalquiver. In the center of this plain a shrunken city in gold-brown stone.

When East Met West.

Salamanca.

Closer to twelve hundred than university, where the minds of east and west met for centuries. Here the idea of the church-state was born. A strange company of great ghosts haunt it: Columbus, the dreamer; Loyola, the soldier of Christ, and the gentle Fray Luis de Leon.

And a very live presence is Don Miguel Unamuno. This old philosopher, no ghost yet, though he has become the official banshee to the Bourbons, has best interpreted that unique spiritual phenomenon, the Castilian soul, which has puzzled and irritated the world at large as no other.

"If Unamuno had known the Ottoman Turk he could have made a snappy comparison and saved a lot of words," says a much traveled diplomat in Madrid.

Things have changed, Unamuno points out, since the old days before American wheat came to Spanish ports, when Castile was the granary, and the glum, tenacious Castilian best fitted to impose his will. The center of gravity is no more. "We can only say that there is a Spanish fatherland," he writes, "when the necessity of being Spaniards will have become the freedom to be, when we will all be Spaniards because we want to, wanting to because we are . . ."

Writing in the Heraldo de Madrid, a certain Sanchez-Rivera sets forth the view most widely held by the enemies of Castilian centralism: "Recognition of the personalities of the regions through regional parliaments and administrations, all on an equal basis, empowered to legislate and administer local taxes, utilities, education, etc. . . . like the two countries which march at the head of the world civilization, America and Germany." This is seen as prerequisite to any move to get Portugal into an Iberian union.

Pending such developments you find Castile, her intellectuals excepted, sitting in the center of her realm, her somber and compelling gaze fixed on the backs of others. Inertia, the weight of centuries, is on her side.

Hopelessly Confused.

For all the centuries of compulsion you find that there are few Spaniards, Espanols, in Spain, but a great many Vascos, Catalans, Gallegos, etc. There is no national anthem, truly speaking; the wordless royal march serves as such. "Viva Espana" this correspondent has never heard anywhere except at bullfights. But national pride exists, as is quickly discovered when it is stepped on, by the league of nations, for instance. Spain has always been Spanish and nothing else to the foreigner; no one really wants to break away. But unnatural compulsions have resulted in shoving differences into unnatural relief.

Spanish politics is hopelessly confused by the regionalist issue. The republic of '73 broke up mostly because of a row between Federalists and Centralists. Today Centralist Republicans in Madrid can't seem to cooperate with Federalist Republicans in Catalan and Vasconya. Socialists who believe in decentralization fear that the Catalan industrialists would use it to strengthen their autocracy. "Men as well as regions must be free," they say.

For all her ambitions Castile has an amusing provincialism of her own. Possibly two-thirds of the people born in Madrid have never strayed farther than the dance gardens of La Bombilla or at most a bull fight at Aranjuez. "Via Madrid que es mi pueblo," says the Madrileno, which is only local pride. In Illinois they have local pride, but don't feel that Californians, for instance, should be curbed and the jargon they speak banned by law. The Madrileno can and does feel very superior about the others, without always understanding why he should pay taxes to build highways linking Madrid with the heathen.

Yet for unity Spain has long waited upon roads and railways. Primo did a big job. He laid down new tracks that were sorely needed, electrified the northern lines, improved roadbeds and rolling stock. Trains are cleaner and run on time now, but the system is still sketchy. He aimed to increase the trackage from the 14,000 kilometers he found in 1923 to 24,000. The extraordinary railway fund from which the lines could borrow for improvements under state control had to be abolished a few weeks ago and it is difficult to see how any government can continue with his program now.

* * *

Fine for Tourists.

There is no question now of finding funds to realize the great dream of Spanish economists: the narrowing of the whole railway system to link it with Europe. And then Primo's trunk highways—5,000 kilometers of them since 1926—stretch out like fingers to the far corners of Spain. Fine for tourists. Better roads have meant an increase of about 20,000 automobiles a year, but the total is still just under 130,000—75 per cent by the Americans. Add the 50,000 trucks and you get only one car for each 125 inhabitants. Compare that with the 1 to 4.5 in America and 1 to 10 in France.

What Spain really needs is about a million kilometers of passable country roads. At present she has only one-ninth the road mileage of France. The dictatorship set up the Bank of Local Credit, which greatly facilitated rural projects, but there were scandals, very juicy.

Road improvements have made possible 30,000 kilometers of bus lines—more than railroads—which reach mountainous districts that the railroad would never have tapped. But even at the rate Primo was going he would have needed another ten years to give Spain the communications required by a twentieth century state. And how much money?

He went fast and in his six years managed to increase the national debt by $750,000,000: Luckily, he increased the nation's revenues. In 1902 they were $250,000,000; in 1927 they had reached $340,000,000, and when Primo fell, $400,000,000. He hardly increased taxes, which are not high; he collected them.

Old Spain is being electrified. Railways in the north; villages, no matter how remote, brightly lighted. More than 1,600 of her torrents supply light and power. The Duero is being harnessed—half a million horsepower in the Spanish zone.

But Spain is tough and set in her ways.

The main line to Andalusia, the oldest in the country, has run through Villacanas, two hours out of Madrid, these many years now. The cave dwelling population of about 4,000 goes unblushingly about its pre-history existence. A cult of religious flagellants there carries on some thorough scourging in the glare of electric bulbs.

It, when you travel, you get the twelve thousand students now in the impression that all of Spain is traveling, this is because there are so few trains only two, sometimes one, a day between the capital and important centers. There seems to be no explanation of the fact that all of the third class passengers carry, in addition to wine skins, bundles and babies, a flock of live chickens tied by the feet. Nor why ticket windows are opened only a couple of seconds before train time. Luckily, millions of Spaniards are content with seeing the world from donkey back. To travel you have to have money. And the urge.

A dapper Andalusian climbs into a train at a village near Ronda. No baggage, not even a chicken, so he can't be going far. He sinks exhausted into his seat.

"It is so far," he sighs.

"So far where?"

"Everywhere."

* * *

Why Should He?

In a hill village back of Santander a leading citizen remarked that it must be poor fun journeying in that new bus all the way to the coast—15 miles.

He has never tried it, then?

No, why should he?

Well, he could go and have a look at the ocean, for one thing.

He could do that by walking to the crest of that hill five kilometers away—or so they said who had made the climb.

He had never seen the ocean and never would. On less than three drinks he would not, however, dispute its existence.

He was a crusty old Asturian with a face like a last year's crabapple. And what airs as he did the honors of his village and his neighbors' cider barrels! If George Boroow came back today after more than a hundred years he would certainly recognize in him the peasant who assured him that Asturians were fit company for kings and often of better blood.

Big business—the modern faith that has brought many factions to worship at the same alter—that is uniting Germany, breaking down state lines in America, seems, like Protestantism, uncongenial to the Spanish soul. The converts in Bilboa and Barcelona are held a little suspect in the rest of the country.

In Madrid recently there was an American, born a Basque, who had made a pile in glass display cases for grocery stores. He thought his fatherland, which he understod to be reborn with Primo de Rivera, would be a fine market. He sold some in his old home town of Bilboa and got high-powered figures showing how they increased sales.

Grocers in Madrid and Seville were terribly impressed by these figures and, of course, refused to buy.

"If our sales increased we'd have to get more help and maybe bigger stores, which would complicate our lives."

"The face of Spain has changed since I went away," says this Basque sadly, "but not the psychology, I fear."

Overflowing Abundance.

Away back in the thirteenth century, King Alfonso the Wise said: "More than all other lands of the earth, Spain has an overflowing abundance of every good thing—fruitful in crops, delicious with fruits, abounding in fish, rich in milk and in all things made from it, plenteous in deer and all kinds of game, well stocked with horses and mules, securely protected by castles, made glad by good wines, rejoicing in an abundance of bread, with great wealth of minerals, tin and mercury, iron and copper, silver and gold, precious stones and all kinds of marble, salt from land and sea and rock, and many other minerals; lapis lazuli, ochre, clay alumand of all kinds that are found in other lands; abounding in silk and all things made from it, sweet with honey and sugar, lighted with wax, seasoned with oil, and gay with saffron."

What Alfonso the Wise said 700 years ago is still substantially true, although the population has more than trebled since his day. And yet, paradoxically, Spain passes still far economically the most laggard of the major states. With ten million acres under wheat and eight under barley, corn, oats and rye, and the great majority of her population working on the soil and in the mines, she can't feed herself or supply her mineral needs. Her trade balance is catastrophic.

"Spain can at any time become the richest nation in Europe," says Aubrey F. G. Bell, an English authority on matters Iberian, "provided that capital can be put in her agriculture, mines, and industries."

Spaniards are bashful about admitting it and foreigners have got in the habit of thinking otherwise, but there is plenty of capital in Spain. The government never has difficulty in floating loans at 3 and 4 per cent. In 1927 a loan of 100 million pesetas to the Argentine was quickly absorbed on the Spanish market. Probably an unwise move, in view of the currency situation, but Primo characteristically thought the gesture worth it at any cost.

The money is there, but how to lure it from the quietude of bank vaults and government issues into industry and agriculture?

* * *

One Sore Need.

In her struggle to keep her individuality Spain has put up a "not wanted" sign to foreign capital. It does get in, though; witness the telephones and the hydro-electrical developments—American and Canadian money. Spain has chosen the way of nationalism and paternalism in industry. Her tariff barrier is the highest in Europe. Agriculture, naturally, suffers as a result. And industry, which is supposed to benefit, actually languishes. Production costs are high, and so it can't compete on foreign markets; its own are undeveloped.

There is money, but credit is sorely needed. In agriculture, to back export marketing groups and help buy machinery and fertilizer. The state has stepped in and revived the historic cooperative organizations known as positos, and the church, with its national Catholic-Agrarian confederation, does a vast loan business, owning seventy periodicals and five dailies and wielding immense political influence. There is progress, but the obstacles are great.

As you wander in Spain you see everywhere the old Roman plow, a simple device consisting of a forked timber tipped with an iron coulter, but you aren't supposed to notice it. If you do, Spaniards get all bothered and tell you about the half million dollars' worth of agricultural machinery that is imported annually from the United States alone.

In the progressive regions around Saragossa and Lerida you do see machinery. In Albacete, the heart of the wheat country, there is almost none. A third of the Spanish grain crop is gathered without reapers. Ninety per cent of it is threshed as Cain threshed his, on a piece of hard flat ground that has been rolled, flooded, and dried. They strew the grain on it and drive about over it with sledges with chips of silex in the runners. Then they fork it in the air, and the wind, if any, blows away the chaff, leaving the grain to be scooped up. If it rains, it is too bad.

There are not 30 harvesters in all Spain. Around Valladolid and Burgos the peasants will buy reapers, the old model, without the binder, which they consider too complicated. But they stick to the Roman plow. They take three years to pay for a reaper—about 1,200 pesetas.

Those close to a million peasant landowners in the heart of Spain who earn less than a peseta a day can't buy machinery of any kind. They couldn't use it on their tiny plots. They can't buy fertilizer. Or much else. They are a total loss to Spanish industry.

So you get back to the agrarian problem. As you do when you consider education.

* * *

The Greatest Problem.

With between 40 and 45 per cent of her population illiterate, education would seem to be Spain's greatest problem.

"Spain has not yet entirely confused intelligence with book learning," says an apologist of things as they are, instancing the keenness, the innate nobility, good manners, and fine speech of illiterate peasants, comparing them with the "mechanical product" of modern schools.

Primo de Rivera had a soldier's mind. The obvious thing seemed to him new schools, more teachers. He fell to. For reasons best known to himself he had to give his minister of war about twice as much as he could spare for his minister of education, and could not always adhere to his program of 1,000 to 1,500 new schools a year. But in 1928 there were 75,000 schools, against 27,000 in 1900, and 183,000,000 pesetas were spent on education, against 42,500,000.

But three to four out of every ten little Juans and Dolores still escape the schoolmaster.

"The number of schools must be tripled and teaching methods revolutionized," an educator told me, "before we can claim to be on a footing with other modern states.

"Teaching methods above all. Illiteracy is bad, but imperfect education with a bias—I mean the church here—are perhaps worse.

"Church schools are often well equipped, but civic sense, intellectual curiosity, tolerance are rarely taught in them."

In 1923, when only half of the Spanish youths of school age went to school, they were equally divided between church and state. Primo's building program had given the state a slight advantage.

"Religion and patriotism is what we will teach," said Primo de Rivera, from which it is evident that liberalism gained nothing from his improvements.

* * *

A Liberal Influence.

The strongest activating force in Spanish education is the famous junta for the development of studies. Educational experiments at its inspiration have won world attention and in twenty years it has raised the teaching standard in Spanish universities amazingly.

It is a liberal influence, although its aim is neutrality in confessional matters and "spiritual peace engendered by mutual respect and equality before the law." It works with a gloved hand, but is continually under fire from the church. It develops the tools of education, sending its people abroad to see how things are done.

"Wherever in Spain you encounter a new development you can surely trace it to a foreign contact," a member of the junta told me. Progress in Spain will always be more individual than national."

The junta holds that grandeur in school buildings is less important than quality of instruction. It frowns on the outlay of four hundred million pesetas on the new university city in Madrid when primary schools and teachers are woefully lacking, when there is not enough money provided to keep the present ramshackle university building clean, the laboratories stocked with guinea pigs, the professors on full time service, and the most brilliant of them from accepting foreign offers. It does not feel that the highly individual Spanish genius will flourish under campus conditions. But the king wanted the vast construction which you can point to from the palace windows. "Country schools, modest but efficient, and fruitful laboratories located conveniently here and there would not be so conspicuous," a professor remarked.

No "Silent" Movies.

Millions of Spaniards, or rather Basques, Catalans, and Castilians, et cetera, sit nightly and watch flickerings from Hollywood. Films have never been silent in Spain. In all save the ritziest cinemas the painful reading aloud of titles by the literate for friends and relatives sometimes several seats removed results in a clamor beside which a sound film of the New York fire department in full hue and cry is as nothing.

The Spaniard gets wildly excited over the slapstick and grotesque in films. Both have been important elements in his art since even before Colombo promised to bring back Chicago, knowing nothing of Hollywood. He will readily boo sentimentality, and the virtuous sexiness that Mr. Hays' good boys dish up embarrasses him.

It is hard to see what influences, if any, all this is having. The Spaniard is impervious to so much. "What difference does that make to me?" he is apt to say when confronted with different ways of doing things. Certain it is that the Spanish senorita, after seeing Nancy Carroll and the others romp with their boy friends, doesn't knife her duenna. And you see no signs of the caballero changing his direct philosophy for the ideals of the wholesome cavalier of the screen.

On village squares where they used to dance the peasant sits now and watches the movies on fine Saturday nights. Salvator de Madariaga says: "The Spartan-simple Castilian peasant is receiving the direct impact of western and even middle western civilization through the films, and who can say how deeply or in what direction the sight of glittering luxury in fast living mortals is going to work on his character?"

Another Spanish professor says to that: "The Spanish peasant has remained so after centuries of contact with his fast living nobility, and has not been corrupted by the glitter of his jeweled saints."

As with everything else in Spain, it is too soon to say.

* * *

"We Should Worry."

Aside from the more exciting political aspects, and then only in so far as the censor will allow, the real problems of Spanish life get little attention in the press or anywhere else. For almost seven years now public discussions have been banned. And when things are discussed, so bitter is the struggle over controversial aspects of major problems that real issues are completely lost sight of.

To imagine Spain doing anything in unison except rising against a foreign meddler would be hard. To imagine her worrying along under the weight of her many problems would be harder. And useless.

For the truth is that Spain, although her problems are numberless, has few cares.

"LAUGHTER"—" holds the interest, charms the eye, appeals to the intelligence—and persistently arouses sympathy for the wrong person. . . . Perhaps in the hands of a less astute actor than Frank Morgan, one could pass C. Mortimer over more lightly. But the man as depicted, with his shield and huckler of quiet dignity and underlying wistfulness, is irresistible. He makes you realize that the rich and the great can be simple and lonely souls, too. . . . Nancy Carroll is utterly delectable, a different Nancy than you've known before, and Frederic Marsh gives a lilting performance. . . . " And so on. Nice picture!

"AMOS 'N' ANDY!" "No doubt about it," said we, "'Check and Double Check' will most decidedly be regarded as 'somepin' by children, minstrel show lovers, and those who take delight in the radio activities of Amos 'n' Andy. The boys have achieved the accomplishment of looking and talking on the screen exactly as you imagine they would from their voices and dialogue over the microphone. . . . The story, as a story, is no great shakes, but it admirably suits the purposes of the stars, providing them with a full quota of fool predicaments to get in and out of. . . . Supporting players do well all they're required to do, but this naive, chucklesome comedy is Amos 'n' Andy's show, and if I'm any judge of an audience's reactions, Lady Luck sho' has smiled on 'Check and Double Check.'"

"OLD ENGLISH" I loved. While it "moves much more slowly than 'Disraeli' and hasn't the universal appeal of the latter, Mr. Arliss' characterization of that grand and grumpy old gentleman, Sylvanus Heythorp, is just as masterly a one as was his portrayal of the olly English statesman. . . . The old bones creak; the lungs wheeze; the eyes are rheumy; the feet stumble; the fine old hands tremble. Eighty years old, the body! But you forget the flesh in your engrossed awareness of the workings of a MIND, shrewd, active, satirically observant. The mind is eighty years YOUNG. It sees 'Old English' through to a finish that leaves all things well. . . . Settings and costumes excellently uphold the 'atmosphere' of the period. Direction, photography and sound are copacetic. The cast supporting the fascinating Mr. Arliss is splendid—background. ONLY background—against which the central characterization stands out like a fine old cameo.

Other 3 star films of October were "Madame Satan," "Playboy of Paris," "Brothers," and "Lilliom." "Old and New" (4 stars) was listed among June's best pictures.

Bits aBOUTem.

WALTER CATLETT, Broadway musical show star, will do a short subject series for R. K. O. called "Broadway Headliners." CLIFF EDWARDS and ROLAND YOUNG are raising beards to play the tramp companions of Lawrence Tibbett in his new picture, "The Southerner." JOAN CRAWFORD, it is whispered, can cry real tears when she needs 'em in a scene, but can't weep a drop at rehearsals. RICARDO CORTEZ has signed a long term contract with R. K. O. because of his work in "Her Man."

GEORGE BANCROFT will play an unscrupulous editor in a story of newspaper life written for him by Oliver H. P. Garnett, formerly a New York newspaper man. The piece will be called "Unfit to Print" and Kay Francis and Reggy Toomey will be prominent in the supporting cast. Director? John Cromwell.

See you tomorrow.

VOICE OF THE FAN

"Hark, from the Tombs"—

Dear Miss Mae Tinée: I agree with Lautaro De Los Andes in his letter in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Oct. 12, 1930, that the talkies offer the public "weird and cacophonic jabber." Only, as one who for years has been a first nighter at the showing of new films, must I declare that films lost caste the day they foisted on the public the metallic blah-blah that is presumed to pass for human voices in dialogue. Every woman's voice in the talkies is de-feminized. Robbed of its femininity, its charm gone, it has some of the sounds of a blacksmith shaping a horseshoe, some of the sounds made by "L" trains. So much for the lady's voice burned to a crisp on the griddle of a noble art.

Now, as to the other—the man. Well, he generally conveys the impression of a browbeating pirate, excepting the times when he is making sickening love to the girl as no decent girl would stand for.

"Hark, from the tombs a doleful sound," is the first line of a hymn written probably more than 100 years ago, but that line describes many of the talkies today. Voices in a barrel, a man shouting from a cellar, a woman failing to please by trying on the masculine voice of her big 200 pound brother.

Talkie Causes Riots in Lands Across the Sea

By Tom Pettey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK. — [Special.] — Instead of bringing universal peace to the world talking pictures are creating riots, diplomatic incidents, and embargoes all along the shores of the seven seas and as far back into the interiors as airplanes can fly. It was not so long ago that the elders of the industry were touting young Mr. Talkie as the original olive branch bearer, and were equipping him with seven league boots and dispatching him on good will errands. Nowadays the garrulous fellow always is getting into some kind or other of a row every time he yanks out his passport.

It is not because he talks too much, either. The trouble is that Mr. Talkie is trying to carry his American personality into a lot of foreign countries where American personality is not properly appreciated. One has only to read the foreign cables for a couple of weeks to find just where the Hollywood product stands.

Down in Mexico Señor Mendoza Gonzales of the ministry of the interior would prohibit the exhibition of all foreign language talkies. The Señor Gonzales was particularly incensed at one of Joan Crawford's recent feature pictures entitled, "In the Land of Mountains."

* *

Native Tongue Preferred.

In Lisbon the good Portuguese attend only those theaters showing native language films. The American films, we are told, "not only fail to excite interest, but come under sharp criticism."

In Palestine a Yiddish talking picture entitled "The Jewish Mother" and made in America turned out to be such a sensation that a mob of several thousand Jews almost tore down the Mograbi theater. It happened that Hebrew and not Yiddish was their language. A half dozen tear bombs and a half hundred uncorked ink bottles, judiciously applied, convinced the promotors they had made a lingual mistake.

At Prague the cinema fans like neither American nor German talkies and recently a most disorderly crowd successfully "censored" a German production. Then the mob moved down the street and cheered several theaters where Czech made films were being exhibited.

The Irish Free State movie goers have their own ideas about what shall be shown in their theaters. Film companies have been kicked about so much that they are threatening to refuse to bring any talkies into the Free State.

The Japanese are about as liberal minded people as one can find and they have tried their best to like American made talkies, but now they are making their own, wherever possible. French and English sound studios are beginning to operate on a large scale and Russia is turning out enough films to satisfy the soviet.

All in all, it looks as if the movies are going to have to give up any idea of turning the world into a big brotherhood of Hollywood talking converts all speaking English and all wearing American pants or dresses.

* *

Theater in Museum.

The Museum of Peaceful Arts in this city has looked at the News-Reel theater and decided the public approves. In consequence there is a new theater in the museum where sound and silent pictures are exhibited.

What goes on behind the walls of great factories and laboratories throughout the world is shown from noon until 2 p. m. and the public is admitted free. A typical program runs something like this: A talkie showing how sound pictures are made, a short feature depicting the laying of a submarine cable from Newfoundland to the Azores and an educational short showing the history of sugar from the field to the table.

The capacity of the theater is only 200 at the present and it is filled every noon hour by uptown office workers.

Buster Keaton Adds Bull Fight to Other Roles

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Buster Keaton is the parlor lion these days. Buster is in great demand since his recent return from Spain. He puts on a great little travelogue for his pals at parties; impersonations and sound effects thrown in.

He has a whole bull fight repertoire; first he plays the picador, then the matador, then the toreador and last, but not least, he gives an impassioned rendition of the bull's rôle with a heart rendering death scene. It is capital. The other night he had Leon Errol in convulsions. The only element lacking in his performance is that of the love theme and it is possible Buster may yet add it a scene with the pathetic Mrs. Bull looking through a knot hole in the fence to watch her hero do his stuff.

* *

Fans or Patriots?

Keaton says that the comics are the most popular of the movie stars in Spain even if they are not good comics. When the bull ring crowd spotted Buster, Mrs. Keaton (Natalie Talmadge) says, they dropped the toreador they were carrying on their shoulders and made a dive for Buster.

At first, she thought they intended to murder him for his butchery of the Spanish language in his first Spanish talkie, but it proved that they were better fans than patriots, for they carried Buster around on their shoulders and the toreador was second best.

Home Wrecker.

There's a New York stage actress now in Hollywood, who is seemingly setting out to disturb as many Hollywood homes as possible. The young lady has already fortified herself with a fortune obtained by the marriage and divorce route and is now setting out to have as much fun bothering busy film stars' wives.

She has one bona fide wrecked home to her credit and is well on the way to another. Not long ago the New York lady ran up against how the gals from the wide open spaces handle these affairs. She emerged with a black eye.

The encounter, as reported, happened in this wise: The wife, suspecting for a long time, walked in on a tête-à-tête unexpectedly and smacked a mean pocket book right in her rival's eye. The wife in the case is a leader in Hollywood social circles and one of the best dressed women in the colony. She plays sophisticated rôles on the screen. If she will admit it all we'll tell you who she is next week.

POISON CASES the LAW NEVER HEARS ABOUT!

That "Tired Feeling" Day After Day Is a Warning!

More persons are poisoned from within than ever quaffed a fatal potion! When stomach becomes "acid" or intestines sluggish, it sets up putrefaction in the intestinal tract. Illinois Mother Knew Best . . .

WISE mothers find the things that keep children contented, happy, well. Most of them have learned they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The best proof that this method really works comes from the fact that mothers who try it once continue to use it for years, when its help is needed.

The experience of Mrs. P. H. Reser, 5642 Division St., Chicago, is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Betty Lou and Mardeau for more than four years. Whenever they're the least bit constipated or restless I give them a little. It has them comfortable, happy in a jiffy. Their splendid condition proves I knew best when I decided to use this wonderful preparation with them."

For three generations, California Fig Syrup has been the choice of knowing mothers. Physicians endorse the use of this pure vegetable product whenever a child's bowels need help. It contains no harmful drugs; cannot form any habit. Weak stomach and bowels are strengthened by it; appetite is increased; the digestion and assimilation are assisted. So weak, undernourished children usually gain in strength, weight and energy; become happy, buoyant, rosy by its use.

Seven million bottles used a year speak volumes for its effectiveness and merit.

"Death Takes A Holiday" that way because that's the way he wanted to write it.

And as for the actor who plays the role of Death in this fantasy, Philip Merivale, he comes wearing the insignia of stellar rank, which are new to him. For fifteen years or more he has been an outstanding figure among the leading men of the American stage, and because of his striking characterization in "Death Takes A Holiday," the Dramatic League of Chicago and elsewhere has given him the award of merit that the theatrical temperament prizes most highly.

Mr. Merivale came to this country from England in 1915 as leading man with Mrs. Patrick Campbell in Shaw's "Pygmalion," playing the phonetic professor, a rôle which was originated by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. Since then he has been seen in Chicago with Patricia Collinge in "Pollyanna"; with George Arliss in Barrie's "A Well Remembered Voice" and H. H. Davies' "The Mollusc"; and with Francine Larrimore in "The Duchess of Elba."

Laughing off a War.

If you want to know, when you see "Lysistrata," to be staged at the Majestic next Tuesday night, what war the women of Athens are raving about, it was that long drawn out brawl between Athens and Sparta called the Peloponnesian war. It lasted twenty-nine years, according to the history books; and many a high school or college student in the days when young Americans studied the classics, has considered it the world's greatest bore.

"As long as the Peloponnesian war" was a simile for tediousness on many a campus in the "Sweet Adeline" period. Aristophanes spent his life trying to laugh it into an armistice.

ACTING WITH LEIBER

INGEBORG TORRUP.

AMONG the new members of Fritz Leiber's Civic Shakespeare company this season is Miss Torrup, here pictured as she appears in the role of Portia in "The Merchant of Venice." She is experienced in the classic repertory, and for the last few years has been leading woman with Walter Hampden's company in New York.

Famous Plays Come Crowding Into Chicago

FIVE first nights are on the stage calendar for Chicago this week, and the list of new shows is the most impressive of the fall. Each of the five has been an outstanding hit in New York. Here is a catalogue of the premières:

"The Last Mile"—Opens tonight at the Harris theater. This is a stirring drama of prison life, weaving the terror of electrocution into a story of convict riots. It was written by John Wexley, who acknowledges indebtedness to a sketch published in the American Mercury under the title of "The Law Takes Its Toll," which recorded the last thoughts of Robert Blake, then in a death cell on the eve of his execution.

This striking tragedy is acted by an all male cast which includes: Spencer Tracy, James Bell, Henry O'Neill, Howard Phillips, Ralph Theodore, Allen Jenkins, Frederick Forrester, Ernest Whitman, George Leach, Herbert Heywood, Don Costello, Richard Abbott, Orville Harris, Clarence Chase, Jerry Lynch, and Albert West. The play was staged by Chester Erskih.

"Mendel Inc."—Opens tonight at the Adelphi theater. This is a comedy which had a seven months' run in New York, based by David Freeman on the book called "Mendel Marantz." It tells an amusing story of the domestic life of a Jewish inventor who is incorrigibly lazy and impractical. The title character will be acted by Alexander Carr, easily remembered from the "Potash and Perlmutter" plays, and the leading rôles are in the hands of Joe Smith and Charles Dale, formerly of the vaudeville team called the Avon Comedy Four. Lisa Silbert, a star of the Yiddish drama; Anna Chandler, Maurice Freeman, William B. Calhoun, Sheila Trent, Ralph Sanford, Phil White, and William Tannen [son of Julius Tannen] complete the cast.

"Sons o' Guns"—Opens Monday night at the Grand Opera house. It is, of course, the elaborate musical comedy which was one of the best entertainments of the New York stage last season, and the last vehicle for the comic genius of Jack Donahue. That lamented comedian is succeeded by the well known Harry Richman, who is given the rank of a star. The leading woman is Gina Malo, and others in the large company are William Frawley, David Hutcheson, Mary Horan, Bartlett Simmons, Louise Mele, Richard Temple, Ellsworth Jones, Joseph Spree, Harry Holbrook, Louis LaBey, Firlie Banks, Adele Storey, Jerry Downes, Vida Manuel, Alex Maranth, Alfred Bardelang, and the Albertina Rasch dancers.

The libretto deals with the way of buck privates with little French girls.

"Death Takes a Holiday"—Opens Monday night at the Princess theater as the second offering in the subscription season of the Dramatic League of Chicago. It is a fantastic comedy which has been a great success in the principal cities of Europe, and which was one of the red letter plays in New York last season. It is an adaptation from the Italian of Alberto Casella, and tells a story of how Death comes to earth, more or less incognito, to discover why mankind isn't fond of him. He stays three days, falls in love, and then returns to the never never land, a wiser archangel than he was before.

Philip Merivale, an admirable actor, is the star of the company. His associates include Helen Vinson, Julian Royce, Eleanor Stuart, Frank Greene, Wallace Erskine, Irby Marshall, Roland Bottomley, Allen Wiley, Olga Birbeck, Thomas Bate, and Frances Amherst Johnson.

"Lysistrata"—Opens Tuesday night at the Majestic theater. This is a special production for Chicago of the classic Greek comedy by Aristophanes which Broadway has discovered to be something decidedly worth seeing. It is staged under the auspices of the Philadelphia Theater association, with stage designs by Norman Bel Geddes and incidental music by Leo Arnstein. It should be one of the high lights of the dramatic season in Chicago.

The Chicago company of "Lysistrata" includes Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn, Juliette Day, Burford Hampden, Nydia Westman, Hope Emerson, Dan Malloy, Vessie Farrell, John Connery, Albert Barrett, Ilse Gronau, and many others . . . To suggest the story of this immortal frolic: the women of old Athens, sick of man-made wars, declare a sex strike against their husbands and lovers until peace has been declared. Much annoyance ensues on both sides of the conjugal argument.

The easy way to have soft, wavy, gleaming hair...

THE modern, sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day modes of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

THE opening performance of the Chicago Civic opera on Monday night was attended by a brilliant audience. Prominent among those present were several women who are active members of the Friends of Opera, which undertakes the selling of the opera box subscriptions. Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick is honorary chairman of the Friends, and Mrs. Edward Hines, who was attired in black velvet for the opening, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, and Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, who wore pale pink satin, are on the box committee.

Mrs. George T. Langhorne was one of the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Northrop, who occupied the Charles H. Schweppes' and Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed's box on Monday evening.

Arthur Meeker Jr. escorted his mother to the premiers.

Politics, Parties and Charities Will Speed Up Chicago Social Life for Next Few Months

By Mlle. X.

FOR the next ten or twelve weeks there will be a lively acceleration in Chicago's social pace, with any number of gay little jig steps added to its usually decorous gait. All sorts of things contribute to this general—and annual—speeding up of life. Politics, philanthropies and preparations for the winter parties are well in the lead during early November, forerunners of the festivities that mark the height of the season. The demands on fashionable energies and pocketbooks are always legion. This year, with the shadow of hard times hanging over all sociabilities, they will be on the up-graph, but Chicago leaders are open-handed and resourceful and problems only add to their endeavors.

With election day just around the corner—day after tomorrow, to be specific—the political excitement of the last few months has reached fever heat. Ever since last spring's primaries, when those two well known fellow citizens of ours, Mrs. Medill McCormick and James Hamilton Lewis, were chosen as candidates for the office of United States senator, dinner table discussions and tea table chatter have had a distinct political flavor. The later announcement that Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill would run as an independent candidate for the same post contributed further zest to campaign arguments, and now, with only two days to go there's a fine flurry of interest in the outcome. Bids at contract bridge and backgammon doubles are interrupted by debates as to qualifications; from appetizers to coffee, platforms and prohibition are the topics of the moment; there's little use in trying to get away from the subject, at least for the next forty-eight hours.

* *

Spotlight's on Debutantes.

Last Monday evening the long-heralded opening of the civic opera season pulled back the curtains for the annual pageant of winter events, and now the social spotlight is picking out the youngest members of society, the debutantes, for its attention. For those wise elders—parents, grandparents, uncles and aunts—who doubt the benefits of a first winter "out," the while they do what they can to add to its whirl of gayety, I have it on good authority that at least a certain group of the pretty youngsters is planning to forego some of the daytime frivolity offered them, first that they may devote themselves to the work they have taken on as provisional members of the Junior league, and second, that they may conserve their health and strength.

This year's crop of buds is extremely attractive not only as to good looks but as to good sense, good manners and intelligence. Their desks are already piled high with engraved cards to luncheons, teas, dinners and dances; their December engagement pads are dotted with notes of evenings to be saved for which invitations are not yet out; their responsibilities as many. If they carry out their present the future leaders of society here are well ordered ideas, it looks as if they'd be a pretty capable lot when it comes time for them to take over the reins.

One of the most popular in the group is Mrs. E. L. Hasler's tall and lovely daughter, Constance. Mrs. Hasler has closed her Lake Forest house, at the corner of Green Bay road and Vine avenue, and moved into Mrs. William H. Hubbard's smart little Scott street apartment for the winter. Just at present the fair Connie is much occupied with arrangements for the Christmas Eve ball to be given for her at the Blackstone by Miss Gwethalyn Jones. Owing to the recent death of the latter's uncle, Thomas Jones, this kindly and experienced hostess won't officiate at the party, but as she wouldn't for worlds disappoint her young friend in this, her first winter, the dance is to be held as was planned many months ago, and the thrills of the moment include the making out of lists, the choosing of decorations for the ballroom, and the selection of the gown for the occasion.

Among the other gay and socially conspicuous young women who are making their bows to society this year are Corinne Brewer, Virginia Waller, Beatrice Kirk, Fayette Smith, Helen Stanley, Hortense Henry, Geraldine Swift, Winifred Wheeler, Caroline Smith, Josephine Dennehy, Ghita Watson and Elsa Armour.

* *

A Joint Coming-Out Tea.

The first two will have their coming out tea together a week from tomorrow, to be given by Mr. and Mrs. William Waller Jr., Mrs. Mahlon Daniel Thatcher and the E. H. Brewers. Hortense Henry and Geraldine Swift—the former is the daughter of the Huntington Henrys and granddaughter of the E. F. Swifts, and Geraldine is the Gustavus Swifts' child—have given up their original plans and will combine forces later this month. Fayette Smith, daughter of the Alex Smiths and niece of Mrs. Clyde Carr and Mrs. Will Blanchard, and Ghita Watson, daughter of Mrs. Walter Wolf, are likewise to have a joint dance, a ball at the Blackstone on Dec. 23.

Elsa Armour, who is the daughter of the Watson Armours and a descendant of the famous and picturesque founder of the Armour clan here, genially and generally referred to as "P. D." will make her bow on Friday of this week at a tea given by her parents at the Casino. On the 29th the Phil Armours are having a dance for her at the Onwentsia; on the 19th Mrs. J. Ogden Armour and the John J. Mitchells will entertain for her at the Casino; and on Dec. 22 she and Beatrice Kirk will be guests of the occasion at a ball given for them by their parents at the Blackstone.

* *

Some Famous Initials.

Speaking of that first "P. D." reminds me that the use of initials as a means of identification is not limited to this particular part of the world. In England "T. P." could have referred only to that fine old figure, "Tay-Pay" O'Connor. The mention of "J. P." in New York circles always connotes a Morgan. These are only two of many instances that might be cited. Nor are the statesmen and magnates of the country the only ones to be thus known. Down in Florida at fashionable golf courses many of the little black caddies are tagged in similar fashion.

My favorite a winter or so ago was known as "A. C." One morning I turned to him as I stepped from a deep and treacherous trap.

"What does 'A. C.' stand for?" I asked.

Rolling his eyes and scratching his woolly head, he deliberated for several seconds, and then replied in all seriousness, "Ah dunno'm. Mah mommy neveh did tell me!"

Many valuable and interesting suggestions come the way of her who—well, let us say, perpetrates a column such as this. Among the recent ideas lent your chronicler was one from the pretty young mother of a bud of the winter, who thinks that admittance cards ought to be sent out with invitations to the débutante balls—not to keep out the traditional "gate crasher," but to prevent the entrance of the shadowy members of Chicago's underworld, who might so easily depart unnoticed with a strand of pearls or a diamond bracelet.

Woman Geographers Organize.

As to the earnest endeavors of the hour, a new association is in the process of forming here in Chicago—a branch of the National Society of Woman Geographers, organized in 1925 to act as a medium of contact between women engaged in geographical work and its allied sciences, such as ethnology, archæology, botany, natural history, sociology, folk lore, arts and crafts, and so on. The roster of active members is made up of those women who have done distinctive work whereby they have added to the world's store of knowledge concerning the countries on which they have specialized, and have published in magazines or in book form a record of their work. Corresponding members are those who fulfill the requirements for active membership, but who reside outside the United States and Canada. And the associate members are widely traveled women, interested in furthering all forms of geographical exploration and research.

Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams of Washington is president of the society, with Mrs. Frances Carpenter Huntington of the same city as vice president, and Mrs. Grace E. Barstown Murphy of Bronxville, N. Y., as treasurer. The Chicago chapter includes Mrs. Fay Cooper Cole, Mrs. Herbert Bradley, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Frank Loesch, Mrs. Forsythe Sherfesee, Mrs. Russell Matthias, and Mrs. John Borden, and although but little has been done here in the way of getting together and establishing a course of proceeding, plans are already in the air for a meeting in the near future.

Apropos distant wanderings, I'm told that young Philip Chancellor, who has made such good use of his time and inheritance since his 21st birthday nearly two years ago, is due for a Chicago visit before long. For sev-

First Night of Opera Finds Gotham Clothes Conscious

By Nancy Randolph.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—The week in retrospect brings out only the fact that the opera opened rather more brilliantly than one might have supposed and that preparations for the horse show at the Garden are now in order.

Sartorially the opening of the Metropolitan was a huge success; socially it was just another affair.

I am glad to see that strict evening dress is being insisted upon by the elite of New York. Once upon a time, and not so long ago either, men would accept bids to the opera, even in the parterre, and turn up in a smoking jacket and black tie.

Happily the opera this week showed that looseness of that sort is gone, for the time being at any rate. It was the English colony here that first took up the slogan of "full dress for men" and refused to permit any one to attend an Anglo-American affair who didn't wear tails and a white tie. Now every man at the opera arrives in all the dignity of full dress and the reformation has gone so far that even the harmless opera hat with its amusing springs has been banished. Shiny toppers are the thing for men, and he who would be right in his dress must observe all the rules.

* *

Depressing Effect.

Of course, the passing of Harry Payne Whitney had a depressing effect upon the first night of the opera season. If it hadn't been for the fact that so many of the new families were occupying the parterre boxes the effect would have been even more noticeable.

As it was, the whole Vanderbilt clan allied to the Whitneys by marriage, was absent, as well as several of the close friends of the famous sportsman, who, out of respect to his family, cancelled the parties they had scheduled for the opening night. The blank spaces in the parterre were only three or four, but had it been any other night than opening night there would have been many more boxes empty. As you know, several of our foremost entertainers consider that they simply must be in a box at the opera on opening night and that they simply can't stand being there any other night. For the privilege of having a parterre box that one evening they pay—enough.

The opera always gives one a full idea of what the fashionable woman is going to wear all winter. Needless to say there were no flashing jewels in ornate settings. The tiara and dog collar of diamonds have gone the way of the pearl choker and the mussed room coiffure.

* *

Gowns Are All Long.

White, it seemed to me, is the color of the season. There were no end of black velvets and chiffons, not to mention nets, but the outstanding note in dress was white—white ensembles of velvet or satin and wraps trimmed with white fox and ermine.

Gowns are all long, with swirling trains that emphasize the long hip lines. Wraps were often part of the ensemble, but there was a great individuality of choice in this respect. While most the wraps were of white or black velvet, trimmed in fur, there were many of startling red and blue. Color, I must admit, is gloriously predominant.

Babs Hutton, the debutante daughter of the Franklyn Huttons, wore white satin. The ever fashionable Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, who is reputed to spend $100,000 a year in one 5th avenue shop alone, wore a gown of flame chiffon. Her wrap, however, was black velvet trimmed with white fox. On Thursday she wore a white wrap of ermine.

Mrs. Robert Goelet was decidedly striking in her gown of silver metal cloth. She carried, as is her habit, a huge fan of pale pink that emphasized in the dimness of the Metropolitan her lovely coloring and her two immense ropes of pearls.

Mrs. Henry Clews, as befitted a matron of years' standing, wore dignified black velvet with shoulder straps of jet and a long diamond necklace. Mrs. W. Goadby Loew wore a gown of silver cloth with a diamond and emerald necklace and earrings of the same precious stones. Her satin wrap caused many a gasp as she passed.

* *

In the Penguin Club.

As usual, every one gave more than one glance at the huge ominous box of the Metropolitan Opera club, sometimes known as the Penguin club since the box with its exclusive male members, all arrayed in full kit, does sometimes give the impression of a group of arctic birds in somber silence. Nevertheless the opera club is just about the oldest tradition that the opera has. Its members are made up of men about town who turn up religiously the nights the club has possession of the box and between acts go silently from box to box paying their respects. Some of the rules of the Metropolitan Opera club are amusing, the one, for instance, which insists that no member may occupy eral months he's been tucked away in a far corner of the globe, investigating the plant, animal, and human life at Altutaki, most remote of the Cook islands in the south Pacific, and doing some marvelous work in photography, both on the surface of the earth and under water. When the Chancellor-Stuart expedition of the Field museum returns to this part of the world to make its report, he'll put in an appearance as one of its leaders, but I understand he is to stay here only a few days before returning to his parental roof tree in Santa Barbara.

Ample Supply of Lectures.

And mention of the Field museum brings to mind the fact that the free Saturday morning lectures for children, one of the important series in those given each year in the James Simpson hall, are now in full swing. The original plan was to have the talks from 10 to 11, but the youth of the city responded in such large and enthusiastic numbers that it was necessary to devote twice as much time to them. In addition a free luncheon is served afterwards to all those who can't afford to buy it.

The expenditure of the children's fund is made especially to benefit the school children in the poorer districts; and, as there's a generous appropriation each year for this fund, consider well how far your money will be made to go when some bright morning a pleasant feminine voice urges you in the name of Mr. Stanley Field to take out a membership in the museum.

For those grownups who would count the winter lost without an ample supply of lectures there are besides those on Saturday afternoon at the museum, free to the public, and the Sunday afternoon talks for members only; a number of others from which to choose in various parts of the town. Two are left on the Wednesday morning list of Chicago modernists, sponsored by the League of Women Voters: Mrs. John Alden Carpenter's talk at the Casino this week and that to be given next week by Frederick Bartlett at the Arts club. There is the Tuesday morning series given by Horace J. Bridges at the Fortnightly and there are the next two offerings of the Chicago Drama league—that on Nov. 17, at the Arts club, at which Barratt Clark, writer, play reader for the Theater Guild, and editorial adviser to Samuel French, will speak, and another, to be given by Louis K. Anspacher on the second of next month at the Blackstone.

As for extra musical treats of the month the Bryn Mawr alumnæ on the north shore are presenting the Kedroff quartet in a concert at the New Trier High school on the evening of Nov. 10 for the benefit of the alumnæ regional scholarship fund. Among those interested in the enterprise and working for its success are Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. William B. Hale, Mrs. Charles C. Haffner Jr., Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Mrs. Wallace Patterson, Mrs. Henry L. Stout, and Mrs. Michael W. Straus.

When Chicago Was Young

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

By Herma Clark.

Chicago, Feb. 28, 1875.

Dear Julia: Winter is nearly over, and I am glad. We have had such a cold season, the worst, I believe, in many years. I shall be glad to see spring come tripping over the prairies.

We have been kept rather closely at home for some time by bad colds, but are all better now. Will was so miserable he could not attend the C. M. Hendersons' reception, but I went with some friends, and enjoyed it very much. The Henderson home is at 396 Prairie avenue, and is very handsome. All the haut ton were present, as our society columns say now. Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Pike, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wadsworth, and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Wadsworth were among the people I saw. I really never beheld such wonderful flowers as they had all over the house. Isn't it remarkable to get flowers in winter?

Another pleasure we had last week was Charlotte Cushman's perfrmance in Macbeth. The performance was called a "farewell," but of course one doesn't believe much in farewells any more, we have had so many of them. But I'd go any time to hear Charlotte Cushman. I thought her just magnificent as Lady Macbeth.

On Washington's birthday we went out to Lake Forest to attend the entertainment given by the Ladies' Missionary society of the Lake Forest church. It was called a Washington's tea party, and was held at the Dickinson home, described on the program as being "sette on ye Washington avenue, at ye bye-waye of Linden avenue."

The admission fee was "two shyllinges, to be payed to ye olde colored servant (of Washington's body-guard) on comynge in. All shyllinges wh. come in for this entertainment are to go for ye sake of all those wh. need them." "All ye men folks" were asked to "tye ye horses under trees or sheddes, and to supply them with fodder, so that they should not disturb ye synggeres."

Some of the toilettes were really noteworthy. Abbie Farwell, who is so very pretty, wore a sea-green silk, with underskirt of pink silk and an India muslin court train. Effie Neef wore a black velvet dress with pink satin court train. Young John V. Farwell Jr. made a good Brother Jonathan, handling his pocket knife with dexterity.

The guests were received by a colored man, "Deacon" Samuel Dent, elaborately done up in scarlet breeches, with white stockings and knee buckles, gray surtout, and an enormous ruffled shirt bosom, and a powdered wig. He looked, indeed, his part as Washington's body-guard. Dent is one of Lake Forest's characters. He owns the only livery carriage in the place and if we go out on the train, we always have him as our Jehu, as we make calls. They tell us that he has quite casual manners, and when engaged to drive Lake Foresters to and from parties he will drive up to the door, whistle, and if his fare does not appear promptly will drive off, leaving the passenger to walk.

The Washington tea party was a great success, financially. The sleighing was perfect and we had a lovely time.

We are pleased at the announcement of new residences to be built soon quite near us on the north side. The Cyrus H. McCormicks are to begin a fine home on Rush street, between Huron and Erie streets. John V. Clarke is to build at the corner of Rush and Erie streets, and Henry J. Willing at the corner of Rush and Ontario. E. C. Larned and his son, Walter Larned, are to build on two corners of Rush and Ohio streets, and Leander McCormick and S. H. Wheeler on the two other corners. These are all well known and rich citizens, so you may realize we are delighted to find that they have chosen Rush street for their homes. Rush street certainly leads in the choice thoroughfares of the north side.

I must close and go to Bourniques, for I promised to drop in and watch Mr. Bournique teaching young Martha's class in the new minuet-quadrille. I understand it is very popular in the east.

With love, your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

"Old Timer" of Lake Forest: Thanks for the story.

Samuel Dent, Lake Forest's colored character of early days, lies buried in the cemetery by the lake, the spot marked by a monument provided by friendly citizens he had served for so many years.

Most of the houses whose prospective erection Martha chronicled in 1875 are no more, but the old Cyrus H. McCormick one still stands at 675 Rush street.

Mrs. Owen McDermott of Chicago sends us a number of verses written by her father, John F. Maher, who died Sept. 30 of this year. Mr. Maher, a former employé of THE TRIBUNE, came to Chicago in 1865.

We print a couplet from a verse pasted in a scrap-book forty-five years ago, the lines being in the spirit of this column:

"From the first purple rays to the last golden glow,
A glory illumines the sweet long ago."

I only wish, however, that we had a bit more real society and not so much new richness.

Does She Smile or Pout?

Smiles mean good digestion. The pouty girl is likely suffering from malnutrition. Give her two spoonfuls of Thompson's in a glass of milk two or three times a day with meals. It is a wonderfully digestible food and aids the digesting of other foods. Thousands of pouty girls have been changed to smilers through improved digestion—nearly all druggists and grocers handle Thompson's.

French Novelty Opera Based on Life of Actress

"Virginie" Gives Story of Striking Career.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—The Paris opera several times a year reserves some novelty for its faithful subscribers. Within a few weeks Director Jacques Rouche, who always contrives some intriguing bit, will stage "Virginie." Rehearsals are now going forward, and needless to say expectations are at high pitch, which may be well, because "Virginie" cannot be otherwise than an extremely successful Parisian hit.

The author of the book is the witty and ingenious Henri Dubernois, whose successes in the novel, short story and theater are without number, and he is always keyed to Parisian taste. The music was written by Alfred Bruneau, a member of the institute and a distinguished composer and critic. Many years ago he produced several operas with the text written by Emile Zola, and the originality and power of his "Messidor" and other operas had a marked influence on the development of the modern French school of music.

* *

Drawn from Life.

The story of "Virginie" combines several episodes from the life of that intensely Parisian actress, the celebrated Virginie de Jazet, whose career was one of the most striking in the annals of the French stage. She began in 1802 at the age of 5, dancing in the Theatre des Capucines, then located at the cornar of Place Vendome and Rue de la Paix. For many years jealousy prevented her from starring long in any production, either in Paris or the provinces, but she finally came fully into her own, and her wit, audacity, skill in dressing for playing boys' parts, and a marvelous flair for hitting the public taste, made her until her death in 1875 one of the supreme darlings of Paris.

She played, while Sarah Bernhardt was still a yearling, the rôle of Duc de Reichstadt, Napoleon's son, in the play "Fils de l'Homme," a part similar to one in which Bernhardt later scored success in "L'Aiglon." In 1864 Victorien Sardou wrote "Degel" for her. The work of both the composer and librettist gives promise of high entertainment for the forthcoming "Virginie."

At Carlsbad for Cure.

A group of Chicagoans just turning their faces homeward after several months' travel comprises Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin, Mrs. Rensselaer W. Cox and Jane Cox. The party took the cure at Carlsbad and then made a long motor trip through Germany, Austria, and Switzerland. They spent the last fortnight in Paris.

Frederick Ullman is here for a short visit after traveling in Germany. Walter N. Ross and wife have just arrived from London for a long stay here.

Charles S. Dewey recently spent a few days here on his way to Washington, coming from Warsaw, where he has been financial adviser for the last two years. His family will settle in Washington in January, where a daughter is now entering school. Mrs. Paul Healy, prolonging her stay here, has been hostess at several dinner parties. She will sail for home late in November.

Turkish Farmers Latest to Form Political Party

ADRIANOPLE, Turkey.—(AP)—Turkey's 2,600,000 farmers are beginning to cry for parliamentary representation now that Mustapha Kemal's sponsoring of the new Liberal party indicates that political parties in Turkey may number more than one.

Preliminaries for the formation of a farmers' republican party have begun in this one time capital of the Ottoman empire.

Sponsors of the new party point out that Turkey is the only agricultural country in the world having no farmer's voice in parliament. Farmer deputies, it is urged, would speed up government development of Turkey's vast agricultural possibilities so that the republic would no longer need to import food.

The People's party, the party of Kemal and Ismet Pasha, is promising increased aid to farmers as one of the chief reforms in its new program. The government authorities maintain that already farmers' taxes have been reduced from an annual total of $6,000,000 gathered by sultanic collectors to $3,000,000. They further promise to abolish the tax on farm tractors and to extend the farm credits of the Turkish Agricultural bank.

FIGURES LEAD IN AMERICAN SHOW

"SADDLING ENCLOSURE," by Randall Davey, to be seen in the Forty-Third Annual Exhibition of American Paintings and Sculpture, which opened Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute and will continue through Dec. 18. This is one of the few thoroughly delightful canvases in the exhibit. Mr. Davey's horses are a delight even when seen under the discouraging shadow of an unexpected shower.

The Artists Seem to Have Reserved a Kindlier Sweep of Their Brushes for Depicting the Men Rather Than the Women.

By Eleanor Jewett.

TO be in the crowd but not of it is the first sensation that struggles for expression after a rapid survey of the American Paintings and Sculpture exhibition which for the forty-third consecutive year opened last Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. Figures predominate. Men and women stare at you from the walls or let their glances slip past to some more worthy goal. There are nudes, semi-nudes and persons of presentable dress. All of them, one is sorry to remark, are not entirely pleasant. There is a number whom you would never regret not entertaining at your dinner table.

The artists apparently have kept their milk of human kindness for the men and have allowed the female contingent to be as nature made them with a kick of the artistic temperament to help them on the downward path. John Carroll, the New York modernist, is without doubt the wildest defamer of feminine pulchritude. His "Eugenie" is a woman in a thousand—nightmares.

The most important prize went to a soberer exponent of the weaker sex. The sculptured "Water-Carrier" by Heinz Warneke was awarded the $2,500 Frank G. Logan medal. Mentally she does not exist, but physically she is fully present. Warneke has made rather a lovely blend of curves from a peasant type. The short, stumpy legs and thick ankles are forgotten in the pose of the small round head on shoulders that slip smoothly into a faultlessly polished and rounded torso.

* *

Second Prize for Ritman.

Louis Ritman, who is the visiting instructor this year in the Art institute school, was given the second important prize, the Frank G. Logan medal and $1,500, for "Julien." Those who possess unkind natures may see more than a coincidence in the awarding of this prize to Mr. Ritman. The third large prize, the Frank G. Logan medal and $750, was awarded to "Friends," by Jacob Getlar Smith.

The Art institute news letter has this to say about the number of pieces in the exhibition: "The total number of accepted works in the exhibition amount to 212 paintings and 67 pieces of sculpture." Note the use of the word "accepted." On the authority of a member of the jury for this exhibition it is stated that of the 1,200 paintings submitted in Chicago, only 87 were accepted. In New York the jury of acceptance took another 50. The remaining 108 paintings, therefore, cannot properly be said to be "accepted"; they were invited.

The Art institute in inviting such a large percentage of the pieces is only following in the footsteps of its eastern colleagues. The Carnegie invites a number of paintings every year and so does the Corcoran in Washington. Whether the practice is fair to the aspiring painter is a question. It would be interesting, however, in such exhibitions, where one-half the paintings are juried and one-half invited, to have the invited work marked in some way (preferably a gold star in the catalogue), so that the public might know exactly who was responsible for its presence in the gallery.

In the case of the Art institute American show, painting after painting was turned down unanimously by the jury. One who saw the rejected paintings said there were many among them of great beauty and interest. What are our juries up to?

* *

Variety and Interest.

The current exhibition is full of variety and interest. It has been beautifully hung. One of the smaller galleries in particular, where you will find the painted statuettes, is most delightful. The sculpture is perhaps more pleasing as a whole than the pictures, but there is less of it, and that cuts the odds in its favor.

Among the paintings are a number of charming, attractive, and excellently handled canvases. Abram Poole, for one, has a fascinating nude holding a globe of the world aloft. Nicolai Fechin has a bewitching painting of a little Indian girl from the Taos country. Leon Gaspard has a vivid bit of color in his portrait of a Russian child. Laura van Pappelendam has a bright Mexican landscape pointed by the pert introduction of a brisk rooster.

* *

Prize Awards.

The prize awards are as follows: The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $2,500 to "The Water Carrier," by Heinz Warneke; the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $1,500 to "Julien," by Louis Ritman; the Logan prize of $750 to "Friends," by Jacob Getlar Smith; the Norman Wait Harris silver medal and prize of $500 to "Valley of the Chevreuse," by Guy Pene du Bois; the Norman Wait Harris bronze medal and $300 to "American Gothic," by Grant Wood; the M. V. Kohnstaam prize of $250 to "Snow," by Francis Speight; the Mr. and Mrs. Augustus S. Peabody prize of $250 to "My Granduncle Gaetano," by Umberto Romano; the Martin B. Kahn prize of $100 went to W. Vladimir Rousseff.

The "Julian," by Louis Ritman was also awarded the William M. R. French memorial gold medal, given only to graduate students of the Art institute school.

* *

"Fossil Hunters" Here.

The fact that the famous picture which last year in the National academy exhibit captured the second Altman prize when hung upside down, "The Fossil Hunters," by Edwin W. Dickinson, has been brought to grace a wall in the current American show must not be overlooked. The painting is huge, in blues and grays. There is some distinction to the blue, but little to the figures, which lie about in the shadow of its beauty. Our greatest respect must go to those who in Gotham realized that it was wrongly hung. Now that it is hung here right side up, a brass plate making all mistakes impossible, there is room for amazement at the cleverness of the men who discovered its proper base

CLUB WOMEN ENGROSSED IN ELECTION

MRS. HERMAN C. GRESENS. [Wallager Photo.]

MRS. ARTHUR H. CARPENTER. [Hinchliffe Photo.]

MRS. HERBERT W. SANBORN. [Ray Huff-Richter Photo.]

MRS. HERMAN C. GRESENS, chairman of the ways and means department of the Renaissance, is chairman of a card party to be held tomorrow at the Edgewater Beach hotel for the benefit of the club's Art institute scholarship fund.

The La Grange Woman's club, of which Mrs. Arthur Howe Carpenter is president, will be hostess to the clubs of the Sixth district at a reciprocity program on Tuesday afternoon.

The Chicago College club is sponsoring an illustrated talk to be given by Dr. William A. Thomas, who was first mate on the MacMillan 1930 Iceland expedition, on Thursday evening at the club at 196 East Delaware place. Mrs. Herbert W. Sanborn, the president, will preside.

League of Women Voters Wants Ballots Marked Affirmatively on the Jury Question.

By Roberta Nangle.

NOW that October, with its flurry of formal club openings, is past, the feminine organizations of Chicago will settle down to the winter's steady routine of meetings, parties and programs. The new officers by this time are familiar with their special duties, the department chairmen have their committees well organized, and the individual members have selected the branches of club work to which they will devote themselves during the year.

Perhaps the best way to appreciate the wide scope of the club woman's interests is to glance at one week's list of activities, which embrace every activity from the purely social to the philanthropic.

* *

Women on Juries.

This week, of course, the election will be of primary interest to every woman. Led by the League of Women Voters, practically every club in Chicago has taken up the cry for women on juries, and, judging from the emphatic statements of prominent club officers, every woman who goes to the polls on Tuesday will vote "yes" on the ballot.

Picking other events of interest from the week's club calendar, there are first of all a number of large benefits for charities. The Renaissance, an organization which helps young art students, is sponsoring a card party tomorrow afternoon at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The proceeds will be applied to the club's scholarship fund in the Art institute.

* *

For Day Nursery.

Another philanthropic event is a luncheon, card party and style show to be held on Thursday at Marshall Field's by the West End Catholic Woman's club for the benefit of the day nursery maintained by the club.

Among the outstanding business meetings and programs of the week is a luncheon at which a group of the Women's Advertising club will meet with the Men's Advertising council on Thursday at the Hotel La Salle. The speaker for the women's group will be Miss Mary I. Barber of Detroit.

* *

Luncheon Precedes Program.

Then there is the Woman's auxiliary to the Chicago Medical society, which meets this week on Wednesday at the Medical and Dental Arts club to hear a discussion of "Patent Medicines and Public Health," by Dr. Arthur Joseph Cramp. The program will be preceded by a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock and a regular meeting at 10:30 a. m.

Referring again to philanthropic activities the Blind Service association deserves mention. Two weeks ago the association sponsored a successful concert given for and by blind artists. The affair was well attended and the sum realized will be used to assist the blind of the city.

* *

Lecture for the Blind.

On Tuesday evening the association will give its first lecture program of the season at the Industrial Home for the Blind. The subject is to be "Europe Today." All blind persons and their escorts are invited to be the association's guests at the affair. The Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women will act as hostess.

And now, to close on a sad note, let us remind club women of the memorial hour for the late Mrs. Charles J. Trainor, to be held by the Native Daughters of Illinois on Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the headquarters of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, at 30 West Washington street. Mrs. Trainor, who died suddenly last summer, had been for years a prominent and much loved club woman. She was founder and president of the organization which is sponsoring this tribute to her memory. The presidents of the ten clubs of which she was a member will be present.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

A NUMBER of past presidents were having luncheon together at the district meeting and were reminiscing as they ate.

"I didn't know a thing about parliamentary law when I went into office," recalled the tall one. "And the blunders I made! At one of my first meetings, after the finance chairman had given her report, a member of the finance committee stood up and said she wanted to present a minority report. I'd never heard of a minority report and I ruled her out of order."

"Whew! I'll warrant the riot was on," interjected the petite one.

"It was," agreed the tall one. "I stopped it at last by admitting I was wrong and telling the members we hadn't gotten to minority reports yet in the parliamentary law class I was attending."

"One good fight will teach you more parliamentary law than a dozen lessons," observed the red-haired one.

"On the other hand, if she'd had the lessons and learned about the rights of the minority there wouldn't have been any cause for trouble," declared the petite one.

"Anyway, her experience goes to show that members are usually quick to overlook the mistakes of an officer who admits she's wrong when she is," put in the one with amber beads.

"I made plenty of blunders during my term, too," confessed the petite one. "The worst was when I invited some nonmember girl friends to pour at a social meeting of my club. Afterwards I was kindly but firmly informed that pouring was an honor that had always been reserved for the members of the club."

"Precedent!" proclaimed the red-haired one. "You can sometimes interpret bylaws in more ways than one, or you can unconsciously ignore them if you're not caught at it, but precedent—following it exactly, or look out!"

Question.

"If a chairman calls only enough members to meeting to make a quorum, is any action taken legal?—R. N."

Reply.

Every member of a group must be informed of a meeting when action is to be taken.

Remarkable Pictures.

The Chester H. Johnson galleries in the Fine Arts building are more lovely this year than ever before. They have been enlarged by the addition of another room facing the lake and this with its admirable decoration makes the gallery one of the choicest in Chicago. The current exhibit is well calculated to arouse our respect and curiosity. Mr. Johnson has gathered together a number of important examples of the work of such painters as Pissarro, Severini, Van Gogh, Renoir, Matisse, Manet and Degas.

It is a remarkable list and a remarkable collection of pictures. There is something for every taste. For the dyed in the wool conservative there are the English portraits. For those with a freer rein on their conscience there is the entire gallery of bewitching and fascinating paintings. A visit this week or next, before the pictures are withdrawn, will repay student and layman alike.

The exhibition of recent portraits by Frank O. Salisbury in the Anderson gallery is attracting much favorable comment. Familiarity with Mr. Salisbury's work does not stale its flavor. The several portraits stand out in their beauty of color, minuteness of detail, and excellence of painting. "His Majesty George V." is a part of the large canvas of the Order of the Bath which hangs in London. The portrait here shows the king in his striking costume and is, they say, such an excellent likeness that the painter has been invited to paint the king again. The portraits of the Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson and Admiral Ralph Earle, U. S. N. R., are both impressive and beautiful without infringing in any way upon the virility and masculinity of the sitters. Delightfully fresh and charming are the portraits of Mr. Salisbury's twin daughters, now grown, the one Mrs. Douglas Crichton as a bride and the other, Miss Monica Salisbury, a lovely bit of femininity in the palest of pink.

Notes on Art and Artists.

Gerald A. Frank, our Chicago painter, has had thirty-one paintings on exhibit in the Vose gallery in Boston of which the critic writes: "Decorative indeed are the paintings—in which imagination, strongly tinged with poetry, romanticism and perhaps a dash of mysticism, is a leading characteristic. Another is love of pure, glowing color and rhythm of line." The criticism is just.

Charles W. Dahlgreen is painting the autumn hills and trees of the Smokies in North Carolina.

The Chicago Society of Artists opened its annual exhibition yesterday in the studio gallery of Increase Robinson in Diana court.

At the Knoedler gallery there has just opened an exhibit of recent paintings by Louis Kronberg and fifty etchings by Cameron.

Paintings by Paul Trebilcock, Roy Collins, Frank Peyraud, Rudolph Ingerle and Carl Buehr are in the exhibit which opens today in the lounge of the Shawnee club of Wilmette.

The Arts club will hear Dr. Arthur Upham Pope tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock on "Some Unknown Architectural Monuments in Persia."

Paintings and water colors by Arthur Briscoe and Montague Dawson dealing with "Ships and the Sea" may be found in the Ackermann galleries.

Richard Kroth opened an exhibit of his water colors and oils, figure studies and landscapes, yesterday in the studio of the Chicago Art theater, 410 South Michigan avenue.

The Illinois Women's Athletic club announces an exhibition of paintings by Mary C. Peterson from Nov. 10 to Nov. 20.

At the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, there opened last Tuesday an exhibition of recent paintings by Gerritt V. Sinclair, extremely dull modern; paintings by Arthur G. Rider, colorful and decorative, and of portrait sculpture by Alice L. Sierns, intelligent, impressive and skillful modeling.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD, DRINK WATER

Add a spoonful Jad Salts to first glass before breakfast to clear intestines of poisons that may pass from intestinal tract to kidneys and invite trouble.

If you have miserable pains in your back, or strained feeling, don't jump to the conclusion you have a bad kidney ailment and start dosing yourself with a lot of medicine. Plain water is the best diuretic—the best flusher of the kidneys you can find.

Drink a full glass one-half hour before breakfast to which you've added a spoonful of ordinary Jad Salts. The water will flush the kidneys. The Jad Salts will cleanse the intestines of the dangerous toxins of Systemic Poisoning which are probably the real cause of those back pains.

According to recent discoveries of able men of science, these toxins frequently pass from the lower intestines to the kidneys, causing pus formations and pain—and inviting trouble. Get them out of your system and chances are, those pains you've diagnosed as "kidney pains" will go like magic. You'll feel a general easing up, less of that horribly tired and strained feeling at your back. You'll feel more snappy and alert than perhaps for years.

You can get the Jad Salts at any corner drug store. Just ask for ordinary Jad Salts. Take as suggested above. Also drink two glasses of plain water between every two meals and at bedtime. Then if your "kidney pains" aren't completely gone in six days or less, see a good doctor. Try this simple way today. You'll be glad that you did.

Chicago Called Forerunner in Religious Field

Theologians Say It Leads All Other Cities.

By Joseph Ward II.

PARADOXICAL as it may seem, Chicago has the reputation of having within its metropolitan boundaries more institutions for religious education than any other city in the world. And it is more than reputation; it is fact. The paradox might well be removed if a comparative survey of "gang" population were to be made in the large cities of the world. The result of such a survey would probably indicate that Chicago's gang population is large, but that its reputation for having such a condition within its limits has been gained through publicity channels rather than through accurate survey.

That Chicago is the forerunner in religious education is a statement to be made with a great deal of satisfaction. While no direct compilation of statistics has been made to show the relative number of theological seminaries and training schools in the large cities of the world, the assertion is backed up by a number of prominent theologians in this city. Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago divinity school and president of the Chicago Church federation, made the statement that "without a doubt our city is the home of more institutions having religious education as their aim than any other city on the face of the earth. It is probable that the number of students studying in such schools also exceeds that of any other metropolis. Chicago's progress in the last ten years is magnificent."

Dr. Frederick C. Eiselen, president of the Garret Biblical institute, backs up this statement by saying, "If there is any other city having a greater registration of theological and divinity students in its educational institutions, it could only be Rome. There is no doubt that Chicago is the home of more such schools than any other city."

* *

Chicago Rivals Rome.

Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, felt that the statements made by Dr. Mathews and Dr. Eiselen were entirely justified. We note with interest the assertion of Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's church on the north side, when questioned regarding the situation. Dr. Bradley says: "It is perfectly true that we have more institutions of religious education than other large cities of the universe. It is also true, as far as I have been able to determine, that Chicago is heading the list in numbers of students as well. Rome, of course, has always been the greatest Catholic center of education of the world. But with the advancement of Catholic training schools, academies and theological seminaries in metropolitan Chicago during the last few years, the total number of registered students, both Protestant and Catholic, should easily outdistance that of Rome. To Cardinal Mundelein must go the credit for this remarkable advancement."

At the present time only an approximation may be made regarding the student registration and the number of institutions in this district. There are well over thirty seminaries and training schools, and 2,500 registered divinity students would be a conservative estimate. Of the statistics in other large cities little is known, although it has been pointed out unofficially in a meeting of the Theological Faculties union, an organization comprising the faculties of some ten theological institutions in the metropolitan district, that Chicago is undoubtedly far ahead in the number of schools and probably in the registration of students.

* *

Buildings Recently Completed.

Most of the development along these lines has been during the last decade. Consequently, the majority of theological seminaries are of recent completion. A tour of the various institutions would reveal some of the finest architecture in the country. Chicago Theological seminary, the Presbyterian seminary, Western Theological seminary, Garret Biblical institute, and Meadville Theological seminary are all of recent build, and present accommodations for study and dormitory life not to be equaled.

It is hoped that in the near future official statistics may be released giving us actual facts for reproduction, not only along lines of religious training but upon the complementary factor of our fallacious paradox.

Lutheran churches of Chicago will observe the 400th anniversary of the presentation of the Augsburg Confession this evening with services at the Civic Opera house. The historical scene at the Diet of Augsburg in 1530 will be reinacted by a cast of Lutheran pastors and laymen. This will be preceded with an historical prologue and an introduction by the Rev. Herbert Kohn, chairman of the celebration. A children's choir from the Pilgrim Lutheran church under the direction of Walter Sassmanshausen, and the Valparaiso university choir of Valparaiso, Ind., will furnish music for the occasion. Frederick Schweppe is the director of the Valparaiso unit.

A number of pastors from the Chicago churches and vicinity organizations will participate in the cast.

Dr. Jones Will Address Sunday Evening Club

Change in Mission Fields Is Subject.

"FOR at least ten years the principal missionary societies of the Protestant world have found it increasingly hard to satisfy their supporters with a program inherited, in its essential features, from the past, while at the same time they have been haunted with a sense of impending major change."

RUFUS M. JONES.

This statement, taken from an October issue of the Christian Century, is no doubt the explanation for the organization of the Association for Christian Coöperation. Dr. Rufus M. Jones, professor of philosophy in Haverford college, is its new president. He is to appear this evening before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall, speaking on a related subject. Dr. Jones has been one of a group of men and women who have seen the impending change approaching in missionary work. Mr. Charles J. Ewald, a Christian worker in Latin America, has been one of the chief contributors in founding the organization. Dr. Mary E. Wooley has been honored with the vice presidency, and the list of directors embodies many of the outstanding "thinking" pastors, teachers and laity in America.

The association states its purpose as being "a desire to enter into fellowship through service with earnest groups of leaders of thought in various countries who, availing themselves of the marked awakening of religious interest among the educated classes, are endeavoring to make a fresh approach to the life and problems of their peoples, with a view to making their culture more vitally Christian."

The Sunday Evening club counts itself fortunate in having Dr. Jones as its guest speaker for the evening. When questioned concerning the formation and technical features of the new association, Dr. Jones was reticent. A second statement from the Century clarifies the issue: "Its members are concerned that it shall not seek publicity. There is nothing secret in what the association is doing, or preparing to do, but its members are determined to keep it clear of the machinery of organization and publicity which characterizes so many movements."

It is to organizations and men such as these to which advance in Christianity may be attributed. The dissatisfaction with the old missionary routines has been expressed by many of the Protestant churches. It is hoped that with the new association for Christian coöperation a unity may be realized which will do away with sectarianism, petty quarrels in the mission fields, and establish one great institution with one end in view.

MENTHO SULPHUR

Two Symphonies Head List of Month's Disk Releases

By Edward Moore.

TWO symphonies make a more than commonly agreeable start on the record release for the month. One is from Brunswick, Mozart's fine work in G minor, the other is from Victor and is the sixth and last by Tschaikowsky, otherwise known as the "Pathetiques."

Both have famous names in connection with their manufacture. The Mozart classifies in Brunswick's Hall of Fame—International, and was recorded in Europe from the playing of the State Opera orchestra of Berlin conducted by the famous composer, Richard Strauss. It occupies seven of the eight sides of four records, beginning with No. 90082.

In Europe Strauss is quite as noted in the capacity of conductor as of composer. There would seem to be a reason. Certainly he knows his Mozart, as this set of records amply proves. Also he has a fine orchestra with which to work.

There is no information at hand regarding the size of the orchestra, but one imagines that for this recording it is of moderate dimensions, which is quite as it should be. It was the kind of orchestra for which Mozart wrote, and knowing his medium, he wrote in such a way that there is no thinness of tone, but only an excellent balance. This balance is excellently maintained by Strauss and his men. In addition they play with beautiful tone, fine spirit, and all the gay, sunshiny musical quality that Mozart put into his music.

* *

Also From Berlin.

The eighth side, the final space of the four records, is taken up by another specimen from Berlin, the opera orchestra of Charlottenburg conducted by Alois Melichar in Schubert's "Twin Brothers" [Zwillingsbrueder] overture. Again there is a good orchestra and first class recording. The trouble is that this overture does little to enhance Schubert's reputation in the minds of those who know him by his better work. It is bright and cheerful in manner, but its melodies are not in Schubert's most inspired manner.

Turning to the Victor release we find that the Tchaikowsky "Pathetique" has been played by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky. It classifies in Victor's Musical Masterpiece series, Album M—85.

It has become fashionable in the best musical circles to lift a scornful eyebrow at Tschaikowsky for what is called his sentimentality. At the same time he is one of the most popular of all composers, and the reason is that all his life he poured out melodies lavishly and unsparingly. It may be that after repeated hearings you think that the last movement of the "Pathetique" walls rather loudly and continuously, but there is enough in the rest to make this symphony interesting, not to say valuable.

* *

Five-Legged Waltz.

One hearer in particular finds it rather difficult to get tired of the five-legged waltz of the second movement. Curiously, the Russians seem to be about the only people who can think easily in quintuple rhythm. That ought to be enough to prove Tschaikowsky's Russianism, even though his music is less national in character than that of some of his contemporaries. What he did here sounds so flowing and altogether normal that you almost have to stop and convince yourself that the rhythm is out of the usual.

And the third movement, too, is greatly entertaining as it rustles and scurries and rushes and finally builds up into a stirring march. I could have preferred to get a clearer hearing of the clash of cymbals and bang of bass drum in this passage. This is rather curious, too, because Mr. Koussevitzky is not at all noted for slighting purple passages as they occur in the music before him. Possibly this one got slighted in the recording. If so, it is one of the very few cases in the ten sides of this set. In most cases Mr. Koussevitzky is properly and inspiritingly emphatic in the expression of this symphony, and in most cases, too, the recording has responded in kind.

Victor furnishes a pair of piano records of considerable technical merit. Olga Samaroff, a pianist of much talent, adds to the Red Seal list, [7304] with Debussy's "La Cathedrale Engloutie" on one side, and a hitherto unknown but highly attractive "Malaguena" by Ernesto Lecuona on the other. The other pianist does not rate the Red Seal, but has plenty of popularity in compensation. Rudolph Friml makes solos of two of his own compositions, the Huguette Waltz from "The Vagabond King" and the Indian Love Call from "Rose-Marie."

* *

An Amusing Record.

Most of the light music at hand for the present is from Brunswick. One of the most amusing records is a song with the refrain, "I've Been to the Pen and I'm Goin' Again, Goah Darn My Rowdy Soul," sung in an unbelievably blank tone by Charlie Craven with accompaniment by violin, guitar, harmonica, and banjo. The other side has "Over at the Old Barn Dance" by Frank Marvin and his guitar, also fiddle, Jew's harp, harmonica, and guitar [457].

Another one [4880], claims to be an actual canary bird solo with musical accompaniment. Some of it sounds authentic, though in other places one suspects the help of a mechanical device.

Maria Mueller Given Choicest Role in Opera

Star Selection in "Aida" Surprise to Gotham.

By Joan King.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—[Special.]—Cheering the hearts of those hereabouts who look to the opening of the opera season as a sort of criterion of business prosperity, the Metropolitan Grand Opera company commenced its forty-sixth year Monday night with a record attendance—a $20,000 house. None of the usual trappings of opening nights were lacking. The diamond horseshoe shone as brightly as ever. . . . The double line of would-be standees formed as early and reached as far around the outside of the opera house as usual. . . . Prices were augmented and, according to official box office word, the subscriptions this year have almost reached those recorded for 1929-'30, when they were upwards of $3,000,000.

This season, Impresario Gatti-Casazza departed from his habit of the last several years and chose an old standby as official inaugurator of a new season. Verdi's "Aida" served the occasion, as it has many times in the past. In fact, it was this old favorite that Gatti-Casazzo offered the first night of his career in America—in 1908. This is his twenty-third season here.

Although "Aida" was not new to the honorable place of season opener, the prima donna of the evening was, for instead of appointing one of that formidable trio Ponselle, Jeritza, or Bori, as has been his usual custom, M. Gatti-Casazzo singled out Maria Mueller for that most desired of all positions of the grand opera season. It was a selection which perhaps surprised many opera habitués. Rumor has it that the choice by Toscanini of Miss Mueller as "first lady" of the Bayreuth season last summer when she sang Elizabeth in the revival there of "Tannhäuser" may have had something to do with it. Karin Branzell sang Amneris; Giovanni Martinelli, Radames; Giuseppi de Luca, Amonasro; Ezio Pinza, Ramfis; Joseph Macpherson, the king; Alda Doninelli, a princess, and Giordano Paltrinieri, a messenger. Tullio Serafin was in charge of the baton.

* *

Triple Pleasure.

Those followers of Debussy and Mary Garden and Walter Gieseking joined forces Saturday evening to be entertained by their favorites. De Bussy provided the music and Miss Garden and Mr. Gieseking the interpretations. It was Miss Garden's first appearance here this season, and her many admirers were on hand to accord her the proper welcome. For once everybody who wanted to see and hear Miss Garden had an opportunity to do so, for instead of the charming but far too small intimate halls which this delightful visitor from Chicago usually chooses here, Carnegie hall did the entertaining on this occasion.

There were really two audiences present; the one composed of Garden fans and the other of Gieseking followers, of which there are not a few.

The program was an all-Debussy one and to it both artists brought perfect sympathy and understanding. Miss Garden's offering, given in her own individual and charming fashion, included the first of the "Arieties" and the lovely "C'est l'Extase Langoureuse." She received an ovation. As a "last encore" after consulting the taste of her hearers, Miss Garden broke the Debussyan continuity of the evening to sing a little Scotch song. Mr. Gieseking received his share of the honors. To his interpretations he gave such a delicacy of touch as is rarely heard here and his followers were fully aware of the fineness of his performance.

* *

Gordon Quartet Pleases.

Jacques Gordon, former concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, brought his string quartet to New York recently in the first of three subscription concerts announced for this town this season. The most interesting of the program offerings was the first public performance of an American work, Emerson Whithorne's quartet, opus 51, in one movement. It was played from manuscript and required sixteen minutes for performance. The audience received the work favorably, as they did the others of the program. Mr. Gordon and his colleagues, who include Edwin Ideler, second violin; Josef Vieland, viola, and Nacum Benditzky, cello, made an excellent impression. The collective tone was well blended and balanced.

Another first appearance of the season took place in Town hall when that delightful sextet called the English Singers came back to American friends after a summer's absence. The program was new for the most part and included, besides English madrigals, canonets, and folk songs, French and Spanish songs and a group of folk songs from the collection of Loraine Wyman and Howard Brockway. The response which the sextet received was as genuine as ever. There is, in fact, no other organization of this kind appearing before the musical public here that holds the place in the affections of its audiences that this incomparable group has achieved in the five years it has been visiting these shores. Three more appearances are scheduled for Town hall this year.

GOING to Bermuda? Just around the corner is a tourist agent who is anxious to help you... to place at your disposal years of expert knowledge and an intelligent, efficient organization skilled in handling travel. And all the valuable service he renders will not cost you an extra penny.

See him, whether you wish to travel independently or with a party. He will book your steamship passage—and leave it to him to select the choicest accommodations available at the price you are able to pay. He will suggest a hotel—one that will fit in with your ideas of luxury, facilities and expense. He will arrange in advance for your sightseeing trips. He will tell you when to go, what to wear, what to tip. All the bother of arranging the many details of even a short trip will melt away under his helpful guidance.

"Furness" believes in the tourist agent. His intelligent co-operation has done its full part in building the popularity of Bermuda today. It is with his help that the Furness Bermuda Line can offer two sailings each week throughout the year on such great liners as the "Bermuda" and the "Veendam". It is largely to his credit that Bermuda travel merits the advent of such a ship as the "Mid-ocean", the great 23,000 ton super luxury liner with de luxe accommodations for 825 passengers, now being built for "Furness" service during 1931.

And, judging by results, the tourist agent believes in "Furness". Entering a new travel season, the tourist agents of the country pledge their support to the principles upheld by this company—to a schedule and service that this year, more than ever, enables "Furness" to lead the way to Bermuda.

FIVE FURNESS HOLIDAY TRIPS

Ask your authorized tourist agent about the five gala trips to Bermuda between December 20th and December 31st on the "Bermuda" and the "Veendam". Ask him to make early reservations for the special low rate All-Expense Holiday Cruises, including accommodations at the finest hotels in the very heart of Bermuda's holiday festivity. Ask him to outline the advantage of sailing direct from Pier 95 in Manhattan direct to the dock at Hamilton, Bermuda, without the inconvenience of five mile transfer from anchorage.

ANNOUNCING A SHORTER HOMERIC CRUISE

COMPLYING with repeated suggestions from actual and prospective cruise members, that we curtail the duration of our next Homeric Mediterranean Cruise, we are pleased to announce a shorter, but exceedingly attractive Homeric itinerary, covering the super-eminent points of the

A stopover in Europe is optional, return tickets holding good to July 31 on the Majestic, Olympic, Homeric or other White Star Liners. Passengers also have the option to leave the Homeric at Naples—second call—on March 1 and sail from Cherbourg by s. s. Olympic, arriving in New York March 10.

This change of itinerary makes possible also a considerable reduction in rates:
